Budget Slash Seen Under Omnibus Money Bill

Legislators Predict 'Substantial' Cuts As 'Single Package' Measure Takes Shape

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House Appropriations Committee has just about completed the first "single package" appropriation bill since the early days of the Republic, and is out to set a budget-cutting record.

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) said the omnibus measure will make "a very substantial reduction" in the President's 42.4-billion-dollar budget.

He declined, however, to confirm reports that the slash may range up to nearly two billion dollars, making the heaviest dent in White House estimates in recent years.

The new omnibus bill, rolling all of the regular money bills into one, will get a last once-over Monday from an eight-man "Central Committee" set up by Cannon to review the work of nine subcommittees, and wrap up the "single package."

Action March 20

Cannon said the completed bill will be submitted to the full House Appropriations Committee for action on March 20. Setting a new speed mark for the committee, the pooled appropriations will be laid before the House on Monday, March 27, he said.

But whether the House actually clears the bill to the Senate before Easter is still doubtful. The House plans an Easter recess from April 6 through April 17, and the first omnibus measure, broken down into separate money bill "chapters," may require a lot of debate.

Across the Capitol, the Senate is also rushing money bill hearings in its own first experience with "single package" appropriations. The Senate cleared the way for the new omnibus procedure by passing the Byrd resolution last session.

The House has never formally approved the omnibus method. Chairman Cannon maintained that his own committee has the right to present appropriation bills in any number or form that it chooses.

After one try of the one-wrapper procedure, he predicts, the House will never return to the old, scatter-shot appropriations.

To head the completely new "Central Committee" at the heart of the omnibus operation, Cannon named Representative Louis C. Rabaut (D., Mich.).

Here are the other members of the powerful central setup, which actually puts together the pooled bill:

Representative W. F. Norrell (D., Ark.), Albert Gore (D., Tenn.), E. H. Hedrick (D., W. Va.), Otto E. Passman (D., La.), John Taber (R., N. Y.), Richard B. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.), and Karl Stefan

Middle-Income Housing Bill Pressure Urged

By The Associated Press

The Democratic National Committee yesterday urged party leaders across the Nation to bring pressure on Senators for passage of a middle-income housing bill.

In wires to all members of the committee and to State Democratic officials, Chairman William M. Boyle, jr. said:

"The real estate lobby and Republican opponents of this measure are claiming enough votes to block this bill.

"If they succeed, the resultant continued lack of decent homes for middle-income families will be a serious blow to the millions of Americans who have depended upon the Democratic Party to carry out a successful housing program."

600 Million Deficit

430 Million Unlisted In Farm Supports

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Farm price supports for the fiscal year of 1949 actually cost Uncle Sam a total of 600 million dollars instead of 170 million reported. This is about $4 for every man, woman and child in the country.

A 170-million-dollar deficit in farm price supports accounts was reported in President Truman's budget message in January.

But if the entire loss in the price support program for fiscal 1949 had been charged off, the budget message would have shown a total Government deficit for fiscal 1949 of 2241 million dollars instead of the 1811 million it reported.

This 600 million farm price support deficit is only a small part of the tremendous amounts the Government spent on agricultural products last year. In all, they totaled more than two billion dollars—almost a tenth of the entire farm income.

In 1945, just after the end of hostilities and when President Truman suddenly shut off Lend-Lease, Congress set aside half a billion dollars from leftover Lend-Lease funds to be used as a "reserve for postwar price support losses."

The quick-thinking members of the farm bloc who put through this allocation of funds during the spirited times of victory, explained the action as a measure to repay agriculture for the expense it incurred to increase production at the call of the country in wartime.

Of this, $59,950,695 was used by the Commodity Credit Corporation in 1947 to pay a portion of that year's losses. Another $10,294,308 was used in 1948. The remaining $429,754,997 was used last year. Even after that, CCC was left on June 30 with a net deficit of $170,515,131, after some minor adjustments with appraisals of prior years.

In addition to this staggering loss, CCC bought tremendous quantities of farm products for other programs, mainly to give away. It "sold" 666 million dollars worth to the Armed Services of which maybe half went to feed and clothe the civilian population of occupied areas.

It also "sold" an almost equal

Council Holds 8-Hour Hearing On Montgomery's Road Code

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The seven-member Montgomery County Council yesterday conducted an eight-hour public hearing on the proposed new county road construction code and when it was over four witnesses were yet to be heard.

An overflow crowd so jammed the county courtroom at Rockville the hearing was soon adjourned to the high school gymnasium, several blocks away. A crowd of 500 in the morning dwindled to 20 at the end.

Council President Frederic P. Lee announced the last four would be heard Tuesday morning at 9:15 and that the record would be kept open for filing statements for two weeks. No decisions by the council on the controvesial code is expected for some time.

To Receive Permits

Meanwhile, according to County Manager Irving G. McNayr, home builders are being given permits to construct streets under existing specifications.

The 33 witnesses, some representing groups, others only themselves, painted two varying pictures of the effect the proposed 27-page code would have, both on the fast growing suburban area and the up-county farm areas.

On one hand, citizens' groups and others contended it would put an end to present "low" standards of construction with resulting road deterioration and would give the county's children sidewalks on which to skate and bicycle and thus keep them out of the streets.

On the other, builders and allied groups said the code would run up building costs to the point of pricing many homes out of the market and that the proposed ordinance is both confiscatory and unconstitutional.

Through it all, six of the seven council members sat without uttering a word. Lee, as chairman, acted only to keep the meeting going without turning into a free-for-all.

Strike Ended By Airline's Ground Crews

American Maintenance Men Accept Terms; 4500 Affected in U. S.

The 10-day Nation-wide strike of 4500 ground crewmen against American Airlines, which cut American's operations here from the normal 74 flights daily to 14, was called off yesterday by the Transport Workers Union (CIO).

Maintenance men here, who have been picketing the entrance to the National Airport terminal during the strike, will return to work, beginning at 7 a. m. today, according to P. M. St. Charles, head of Washington Local 510. About 75 local employes were involved.

Most of American's 74 flights will be operating in and out of National Airport by tonight, and the full schedule will be resumed by Monday evening, an airlines spokesman said last night.

System-wide operations had been cut by 80 percent because of the walkout.

The strikers, who won some concessions from the company but were denied others, voted to return to work through their locals.

The peace terms, worked out by Federal mediators in Chicago, included some improved working conditions, such as one week's severance pay for each year worked, up to eight years.

While the union dropped its demands for a 20-cent hourly increase in wages, the company agreed no subcontracts would be let for maintenance work which could be done by regular workers. This was one of the major issues of the dispute.

A new contract, to be signed after fringe issues are settled, will be retroactive to last January 1 and will extend to September 30, 1951, the union said.

According to TWU spokesman, other agreements reached before the walkout will be incorporated in the contract. These include increases of cumulative sick leave from 30 to 60 days and a raise of 2 cents an hour for afternoon shift workers.

U. S. to Recall 3 From Budapest As Requested

By The Associated Press

The United States will recall three military officers from the American Legation in Budapest in accordance with a demand of Hungary's Communist government, a State Department spokesman said yesterday.

The American officers whose removal was demanded in a note Friday are Col. James B. Kraft, military attache; Lieut. Col. John R. Hoyne, deputy military attache, and Maj. Donald E. Griffin, deputy air attache.

The Hungarian government declared all these men "persona non grata" on the basis of testimony in the spy trial of Robert A. Vogeler, American businessman convicted last month of spying and given 15 years imprisonment.

Jessup Held Backing Pact For Far East

Menace of Reds In Southeast Asia Reported Worrying Roving U. S. Envoy

London, March 11 (U.P.)—Dr. Philip Jessup is expected to report he found Southeast Asia "so fraught with menace" he recommends extension of the Atlantic Pact to the Indian Ocean and the Pacific, British official sources said today.

Jessup, United States Ambassador-at-large, was at the Foreign Office early today for consultation. He is on his way home after an on-the-spot survey of the Far East.

Jessup is scheduled to leave London for Paris tonight and then fly to Washington after conferring with United States and French officials.

Since his arrival here Jessup has refused to discuss his findings publicly but it is understood he is convinced the security of the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Indian Ocean is indivisible.

Indo-China Called Test

Official sources said the United States, Britain and France have been studying the Communist threat in Southeast Asia and the Pacific for months. But when Jessup returns to Washington the problem will move into the "active consideration" stage.

These sources said spheres of responsibility may be assigned in the Pacific and Southeast Asia, thus simply extending the Atlantic Treaty instead of setting up a new pact.

"Indo-China will be the test case," British officials said. "France has already made it known that if Communist China sends armed troops to aid Ho Chi-minh it will be taken as a casus belli (a cause of war or a justification for war)."

Pointing out how the Atlantic Pact could be broadened to cover the globe, these sources said under its Article III the signatories promise "to maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack."

Under Article IV the members pledge also to consult whenever "in the opinion of any of them, the territorial integrity, political independence or security of the parties is threatened."

Joint Maneuvers Set

There is evidence the Atlantic Pact defense chiefs already have started to act.

This month units of the United States Pacific Fleet will exercise off the Philippines with units of the British Navy and simultaneous exercises will be held by the Australian and New Zealand Navies. And at the same time British units will carry out combined exercises with the Indian Navy in the Indian Ocean.

Naval sources said the Indian Ocean exercises will test the defense of the passage through it from and to the Atlantic. The "Anzac" exercises will test the southern passage, from the Pacific into the Indian Ocean, they said.

The maneuvers off the Philippines will test the China Sea defenses and the approaches to Singapore, these sources said.

Pontiff Asks Prayers for 'New Order'

Pope to Take Lead On Passion Sunday; 'Every Soul' Seen in Fear at Arms Race

By Barrett McGurn
NYHT News Service

Rome, March 11.—Pope Pius XII today called on all Roman Catholics throughout the world to join him in special prayers two weeks from Sunday for "a new order based on truth, justice and charity."

The Pope sent an encyclical letter to all Catholic archbishops and bishops, notifying them that he will lead such prayers in St. Peter's Basilica on Passion Sunday, March 26. The day will be the first of a period in which Catholics commemorate the crucifixion of Christ.

(The papal letter entitled "Anni Sacri," was predated March 12, the anniversary of the Pope's coronation in 1933.)

All Catholics who are unable to visit churches because of extreme old age, infirmity or other reasons should offer their "sorrows and fears" as a substitute for attendance at church prayers "so that every one's prayers and wishes will be united," the Pope instructed.

To Be Part of Series

The Passion Sunday prayers will be one of the most unusual united actions Catholics have performed in recent years. They will be part of a series of devotions requested by the Pope, including the celebration of two masses by Catholic priests last Easter for the conversion of atheists and the celebration of masses on New Year's Eve for the success of the current Holy Year.

The Pope told his fellow bishops that the pilgrims "from every part of the world" (estimated at 200,000) who have so far visited Rome for the Holy Year and the others who are still expected to come estimated at 2,000,000) have been a source of consolation to him, but that other matters nevertheless have caused him "anguish and anxiety."

He implied that the current international conflicts and the consequent "race to arm, which is placing every soul in a State of fear and suspense," are a major source of such worry. He indicated that the Passion Sunday prayers will appeal for an end of such tensions, based on a common acceptance of religious principles.

The Pope did not specify which

Russians Go to Polls to Vote For Single List of Candidates

Moscow (Sunday), March 12 (AP).—Citizens throughout the Soviet Union began casting their ballots this morning for delegates to the Supreme Soviet (Parliament).

Polling booths opened at 6 a. m., local time, and the first voting started in the far-eastern reaches of Siberia.

The election is for a single list of candidates.

Members of the Politburo spoke in the campaign for the election of the slate of Communist and non-party bloc candidates. They assured the people the big issue is the Soviet Union's policy of peace.

In the light of these statements, many foreign diplomats predicted Russia would make some overture toward a new effort to settle the barbed problems dividing the world, or at least come forward with a strong hint for an overture for the West.

Veterans Plan 3-Way Phone Call To Truman, Stalin

New York, March 11 (AP).—A veterans' group, once a part of the American Legion, today asked President Truman to talk to Premier Stalin by telephone Thursday.

In Washington, the White House had no comment after receiving the request in a telegram, but a secretary said he doubted the President would participate.

A similar telegram was said to have been sent to Stalin in Moscow by the veterans, members of the former New York Duncan-Paris Post No. 1422 of the Legion.

The group said it hoped Truman and Stalin would use the call to set a date for peace talks.

"Everybody wants them to have a meeting but nobody seems to be doing anything about it," a spokesman said.

'Trap' Feared In Confession Of Atom Spy

A member of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee said yesterday the Fuchs confession may be a "trap" to trick America into betraying A-bomb and H-bomb secrets.

The confession, made by Dr. K. E. J. Fuchs shortly before his conviction in London as a Russian spy, was laid before the committee Friday. It touched off an uneasy debate among the members.

Those who would discuss the document agreed that "only the most recent" American atomic and hydrogen secrets can be considered unknown to Russia. But they differed on its significance as to the future course this country should take.

Another View

One of the committee members—who rarely permit reporters to use their names when they discuss atomic energy—said "it is obvious" that this country can now disclose to its citizens many facts which have hitherto been kept secret from them.

"We should at least let Americans know as much as the Russians know," he said.

He was challenged by another committee member who said there is no way of knowing how much of the Fuchs confession is "genuine."

"How do we know that Fuchs did not load the confession with information that he had been unable to send to Russia?" he asked. "After all, the man admittedly betrayed America and England and I see no reason to trust him now.

"He may have made the confession in the hope that we would go ahead and declassify important secrets."

Only carefully selected portions of the confession have been made public. But the text shown to the

McCarthy Will Accuse State Dept. 'Big Shot'

Worse Than Kenyon Case, Says Senator Of Official He Calls Bad Security Risk

By the United Press

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wisc.), shrugged off a blast of criticism from the State Department yesterday and announced that on Monday he will name a department big shot he regards as a bad security risk.

He promised "phenomenal" disclosures about the official who, he said, holds an "important" State Department post. He said the man will be "my first case Monday."

McCarthy refused to identify the official in advance. But he said the case is "infinitely worse" than that of Dorothy Kenyon, the New York lawyer he has charged with Communist activities and membership in 28 Red fronts. Miss Kenyon says the Senator is an "unmitigated liar" and that she will tell him so to his face when she testifies before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee Tuesday.

Scoffs at Challenge

McCarthy scoffed at a direct challenge from the department's top security officer, Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy, to put up or shut up on his charges of communism in the department.

Peurifoy told the United Press the department is in "good shape" from a loyalty and security standpoint. Later, in a general statement, he said McCarthy should prove his charges or withdraw them.

The Senator retorted that all the necessary proof is in the department's own files and that it is "unreasonable" to expect him to dig up the leads and investigate them too.

But he said he has asked permission to cross-examine Peurifoy when the subcommittee meets Monday to hear McCarthy resume his presentation of charges that 81 bad security risks were kept on the State Department payroll. McCarthy said 57 of them are card-carrying Communists.

Promises to Name All

McCarthy promised to name all his suspects, but he said he will go into details on just a few "thoroughly documented" cases. He indicated the still unidentified department big shot will get the detailed treatment.

The Wisconsin Senator told a news conference he also wants to question members of the department's loyalty board panel who "cleared" Miss Kenyon for a job with the United Nations.

McCarthy said he has received "a lot of more valuable information" since the Senate inquiry started last Wednesday. This new information, he said, involves officials not only of the State Department but also of other "sensitive" Government agencies.

McCarthy said he wants to cross-examine Peurifoy about clearance he said was given to a State Department employe reported to be

It's Getting So A Man Can't Stay In Business

Huntington, W. Va., March 11 (AP).—The "No Vacancy" sign was up for George Palmer at the Cabell County Jail today. He's been thrown out of the clink twice.

Prosecutor Edward H. Greene said the 50-year-old Palmer had been living there since last July after completing a stretch for attempted forgery. He had a cozy nest, with curtains and pictures on the cell walls, plus a lunch and confectionery concession from which he peddled stuff to more confined inmates.

Greene ordered Palmer thrown out Wednesday, but Thursday night he was right back again—this time on a drunkenness charge. He pleaded guilty, requested and received a 60-day sentence, and opened up shop at the same old stand.

At Greene's suggestion the case was reopened and dismissed.

Palmer dejectedly closed up shop and went free.

Air Force May Use Thunderjet As 'Parasite' Fighter on B-36

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force has come up with some new plans for getting fighter protection for its strategic A-bombers on long-range missions.

Tests of the adaption of the Republic F-84 Thunderjet as a "parasite" fighter are contemplated, it is understood. Unlike the original "parasite" fighter planned for the B-36 bomber—the pint-sized McDonald jet F-85—the larger and longer-range F-84 would be attached to the underside of the "mother plane's" wingtips, aviation circles reported.

The F-85 was to be carried in the belly of the big global bomber and let go when enemy fighters attacked. If it survived, it was then supposed to be recaptured by the bomber by means of a trapeze arrangement.

Apparently, this concept of a parasite fighter has not worked out to the satisfaction of the Air Force.

It is reported that the new plan will be tested first with the Boeing B-50 bomber, which has wingtip mechanism for carrying detachable fuel tanks. It is believed they could be adapted to holding the F-84.

If successful, the plan might later be used with the B-36. This hardly would be possible in conjunction with the jet pods to be carried by the B-36 for emergency high speed, but if new turboprop engines now under development pan out, they may replace the bomber's six piston engines. In such case, the wingtip jet engines would be eliminated.

The Air Force will neither confirm nor deny the account of the plan, but usually reliable aircraft sources, including the authoritative trade paper Aviation Week, confirm the reports.

Aeronautical engineers believe carrying the fighters in the manner planned would not cut the range of the B-36 to any real extent. But they see certain obvious disadvantages. Presumably the fighter-pilot would have to remain in the F-84 cockpit for the entire trip. This would be a great strain at the altitudes flown.

Furthermore, the fighter would be on its own once launched. If it survived a fight, the pilot would have to head for the nearest friendly or neutral territory or bail out over enemy terrain if the former were out of range.

Whether there are answers to the apparent objections remain to be worked out. The plan is only one of several ideas under study to help the big, conventional-propelled bombers get through an enemy's air defense, which include jet fighters with much greater speed than the bombers. The relative vulnerability of the B-36 was one of the chief points at issue between the Navy and Air Force in the Congressional hearings last year. Air Force chiefs then declared the big bomber could get through at high altitudes without fighter protection. The air admirals contended enemy jet fighters would destroy most of the bombers.

Brussels, Belgium, March 11 (U.P.).—Students for and against Leopold today battled in Brussels with clubs and smoke bombs and in Remagne a priest routed an anti-Leopold truck with a pitchfork charge as tension mounted on the eve of the plebiscite on the return of Leopold as King.

Police estimated that 199 persons had been injured in pre-election incidents. They broke down the figures as follows:

Serious injuries: Louvain, two with fractured skulls.

Minor injuries: Liege, 67; Antwerp, 35; Mons, 10; Brussels, 85.

An estimated 200 Social Christian (for) and Socialist (against) students clashed in the heart of Brussels early this morning. Hurling smoke bombs, they engaged in a wild melee of fist fights until truncheon-swinging police broke it up. Twelve students were arrested.

Before that, Socialist students lobbed smoke bombs into a pro-Leopold rally with raucous cries of "Heil Leopold" and "Abdicate, you dirty Fascist."

House Blocks Adjournment By Rejecting Va. Budget Bill

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va. (Sunday), March 12.—The House of Delegates blocked adjournment of the General Assembly early today by refusing to accept a conference report on the budget bill.

By a vote of 48-47, the House rejected a conferees recommendation that a one-million-dollar increase for teachers' salaries, as approved in the House and knocked out in the Senate, should remain out of the bill.

A lengthy debate in the lower chamber delayed scheduled adjournment beyond midnight. The surprise action, which came after 12:30 a. m., threatened to delay adjournment for several hours, as the budget bill was returned to conference.

Truman to Submit Reorganization Plan

NYHT News Service

President Truman will send "20 or 21" plans for further reorganization of the sprawling Federal bureaucracy to Congress on Monday, the White House said yesterday.

Most of the proposals — which will become effective automatically in 60 days unless "vetoed" by House or Senate—are expected to follow general recommendations of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. This group, headed by former President Herbert Hoover, submitted a monumental report last year blasting inefficiency, waste and extravagance in the 40 billion-dollar-a-year Federal Government, with sweeping reform recommendations, only 20 percent of which have yet been put into effect.

Submission of Mr. Truman's plans may mark the beginning of a showdown reorganization fight

The Citizens' Committee for the Hoover Report, in a statement yesterday, predicted that "on the events of the next few weeks will depend much of the final destiny of the Hoover report."

None of the President's plans, it was said, will deal with the hottest controversial subjects in the reorganization field, nor will he renew his plea—rejected by Congress last year—for a Department of Welfare.

Informed offiials said the President's plans will not touch on reorganization of the Veterans' Administration, now being defended by the American Legion and other veterans organizations against Hoover Commission charges of inefficiency; transfer of Army Engineers' civil functions relating to dams and rivers to the Interior Department, A target of equally bitter opposition; or reform of governmental accounting methods, which brought Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren and Mr. Hoover into conflict before a Senate committee within the past week.

Although the President's plans deal mainly with relatively noncontroversial—but very important—administration and managerial matters, some of them are certain to provoke lively discussion and opposition.

These include, it was said, those concerning the United States Maritime Commission and the National Labor Relations Board. The Hoover Commission recommended stripping the former of some of its powers, and placing them in the Department of Commerce. The somewhat autonomous powers of the NRLB general counsel are not in line with Hoover Commission recommendations that the heads of all agencies shall be responsible in a direct line of authority for activities of their agencies.

Byrd Group Asks Postal Layoff Facts

The Byrd economy committee has asked Postmaster General Donaldson for details on a reported reduction of more than 20,000 employes in the Postoffice Department.

Staff directors of the Joint Congressional Committee on Nonessential Government Expenditures said the committee's March report on Government payrolls and employment had been delayed for the Postoffice figures.

Normally the reports are made during the first week of a month and cover data through the start of the preceding month.

The last report through December showed a total of 1,891,156 civilian Government workers, including 535,745 in the Postoffice Department.

While many Government agencies have been cutting back from postwar peaks, the Postoffice Department has been showing increases. The December total was 2666 above November.

Postmaster General Donaldson's report for January showed a decline of more than 20,000 and a lengthy letter accompanying it explained that the cutback was a cumulative error from previous months.

The committee, headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) asked for additional data.

The United States Navy has the answer to your problem—and without the help of any of these newfangled dog psychiatrists or dog psychoanalysts either.

Just read this story of Sandy, a remarkable dachshund of impeccable antecedents who owns Assistant Secretary of the Navy John T. Koehler and Mrs. Koehler of 2909 Twenty-ninth st. nw. and find the answer to YOUR problem.

Sandy came to live with the Koehlers about a year ago. He was a gift, and as the Koehlers put it the most expensive one they ever received, but since he was presented by Koehler's superior, Dan A. Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, he could not be summarily treated.

It wasn't long before the Koehlers begun to fear that young Sandy was a neurotic dog, or possibly even psychotic. Every time he was left alone he gnawed the woodwork or chewed the curtains until a plague of termites would have seemed a trifle in comparison.

And It Worked

But the Navy proved equal to the situation. Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Bauernschmidt on a duty call surveyed the wreckage and suggested that perhaps Sandy was just lonely and would like to hear the radio when left in solitary confinement.

In desperation the Koehlers tried the solution.

Just tune Sandy in on the right wave length and he is the most tractable dachshund who ever folded his short legs under himself.

No ordinary Hooper scoring card is sufficient to determine Sandy's taste. Mrs. Koehler told The Washington Post she could establish it only by the amount of sawdust Sandy left on the floor. If the program is good enough he doesn't leave any.

The other day, for example, Sandy was alone for three full hours, but when Mrs. Koehler returned she found nothing but a blissful dog and no sawdust. Sandy had been listening to "Life Can Be Beautiful," "Light of the World" and "Today's Children."

"That was really the best," said Mrs. Koehler with a sigh of relief. "But there's hardly anything Sandy likes better than a good political speech . . . he'll listen to those by the hour."

Is Millikin Fan

Further questioning—of Sandy this time—developed that he much preferred the sonorous tones of Senator Eugene Millikin (R., Oreg.) to the somewhat high-pitched notes of the cowboy Senator from Idaho—Glen H. Taylor, but either will do in a pinch.

"You see what it is," Mrs. Koehler said firmly and proudly. "There's nothing whatever the matter with Sandy. He's just a good, healthy sociable dog, who likes company better than anything else."

Moonshine Rise Laid to Both Tax And Sugar Supply

By The Associated Press

The flow of "moonshine" whisky swelled last year to the greatest volume since rationing of sugar—a major ingredient—crimped illicit distilling early in World War II.

The alcohol unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, reporting this yesterday, showed a nearly 15 percent increase in the number of moonshine stills destroyed and a 14 percent increase in arrests.

While the Government agency said moonshining has been increasing since sugar became easily available again, liquor industry men stressed the effect of "high taxes."

Howard T. Jones, executive secretary of the Distilled Spirits Institute, said in a statement that the Federal tax of $9 a gallon and the "average" State tax of $1.61 spur moonshining by pushing up the price of legal whisky.

Truman Party To Sail Today For Key West

President Truman, approaching the end of five eventful years in the White House, embarks on a trim, 244-foot cruiser today for about three weeks of rest at Key West, Fla.

He was there for a similar period last December. He returned chipper and ready for the annual grind imposed by the opening of Congress.

His doctor says he is in good health, although a bit heavy at 175 pounds, and the Florida waters and sunshine ought to put him in the pink for the campaign trails this spring and fall.

Under present plans, Mr. Truman will fly back to Washington around April 2, 10 days before his fifth anniversary in the Presidency and a little more than a month before his sixty-sixth birthday on May 8. He expects to start on his first cross-country speaking trip around May 1.

Accompanied by several members of his staff, the President will leave the Naval Gun Factory at 10 a. m. today aboard the yacht, Williamsburg, a diesel-engined former gunboat converted for his use.

The voyage down the Potomac River and the Atlantic to the United States submarine base at Key West will require four days.

Money Bill 'About' Ready

(R., Nebr.). Cannon is an ex officio member.

The key group will "rotate" each year, with present members returning to their old posts on the committee, and new members taking their place.

When the bill reaches the House floor, the Central Committee will take a back seat while chairmen and ranking minority members of the various regular subcommittees step forward to guide the debate as their "chapters" turn up in the bill.

As Cannon views it, the chief value of the omnibus reform lies in presenting the whole appropriation story in one picture. The entire expenditures for the year will be unveiled for members at one time, together with the last authoritative estimates of national income.

Cannon doesn't claim it's a cure-all for deficits. What it will do, he says, is "magnify the responsibility of each member" and provide a tremendous "incentive to retrenchment."

"As a matter of fact," he said, "it is the only practical method available at this time that offers hope for a reduction of appropriations to the smallest amounts consistent with sound business and good Government."

Farm Price Supports Cost 600 Million

amount, 656 million dollars worth, to the Economic Cooperation Administration. Although CCC was reimbursed by ECA, the bill ultimately was paid by the taxpayers for the benefit of agriculture.

CCC also spent 133 million dollars of "Section 32" funds on farm products. "Section 32" funds represent 30 percent of the Nation's gross receipts from customs duties. This amount is annually set aside by Congress to be used to (1) encourage exports of farm products, (2) encourage domestic consumption by diverting food from normal trade channels (such as using potatoes to make alcohol), (3) increasing consumption in low income groups (such as food stamp plans or school lunches), and (4) "reestablish farmer's purchasing power by making payments in connection with the normal production of any agricultural commodity for domestic consumption." Of this 133 million, 75 million was spent for school lunches.

$600,000,000 Loss

Wednesday is income tax day. On that day it may be interesting to figure out that it took the annual payments of 200,000 taxpayers to pay just the 600 million-dollar direct loss of CCC in price supports last year.

The Internal Revenue Bureau told The Washington Post last week that in 1949 approximately 52.2 million persons paid a total of 17.7 billion dollars in personal income taxes. That is about $300 a return.

In addition to the two billion dollars spent on agricultural products shown above, the Agriculture Department spent several more millions in little dabs of a million or so here and a few million there. They haven't all been added in. What's a few millions, anyway?

The commodity causing the biggest loss to CCC last year was, of course, potatoes—about 200 million dollars. (The entire cost of the 1949 potato crop was 225 million dollars. However, part of that loss—about 25 million, was not incurred until after June 30—the end of the fiscal year. It thus didn't show on the 1949 statement. It will be added to this year's losses.

The next biggest loss came on corn, 100 million dollars. Then in order, the biggest were wheat, 60 million; flaxseed, 44 million; eggs 39 million.

$600-Million Prop Cost Broken Down by Crops

A study of Department of Agriculture bookkeeping reveals that the cost of maintaining a high level of prices for farm commodities last year was just about 600 million dollars, instead of a reported 170 million.

Here are the losses by commodities, separated as the law separates them, in three groups: basics, "designated non-basics," and "other non-basics." Price supports are mandatory on the first two groups, but are at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture for the third group.

| Basics | |
| Corn | $100,196,187 |
| Cotton | 34,223,816 |
| Peanuts | 25,891,910 |
| Rice | 7,914 |
| Tobacco | 2,468,476 |
| Wheat | 64,635,046 |
| Designated Non-Basics | |
| Honey | 470,413 |
| Potatoes | 200,806,303 |
| Wool | 4,866,148 |
| Other Non-Basics | |
| Barley | 8,016,499 |
| Beans | 6,670,012 |
| Cotton (Am.-Egyptian) | 9,002 |
| Eggs | 40,057,626 |
| Flaxseed | 43,310,169 |
| Dried Fruit | 842,843 |
| Linseed Oil | 35,016,216 |
| Rosin | 2,881,384 |
| Turpentine | 95,483 |
| Oats | 2,132,714 |
| Dried Peas | 624,860 |
| Rye | 2,186 |
| Hay and Pasture Seed | 75,935 |
| Grain Sorghums | 13,164,174 |

| CCC Showed Profits On Following Items | |
|---|---|
| Dry Milk | $149,335 |
| Tung Oil | 31,156 |
| Fiber Flax | 65,558 |
| Hemp | 8,946 |
| Winter Cover Crop Seed | 97,398 |
| Soybeans | 26,054 |
| Sweet Potatoes | 1,985 |

In addition there were a number of other farm support program charges including: liquidation activities, $4,658,659; traveling expenses, $15,519,077, and several minor credits and debits.

Canadian Jet Fighter Averages 531 MPH

Ottawa, March 11 (U.P.).—A Canadian jet airplane described by its builders as "the most powerful fighter in the world" flashed through its paces over Rockville Air Station today for inspection by top military and government officials.

The CF-100 averaged 531 miles an hour yesterday on a flight from Toronto to Ottawa. Its speeds in today's demonstration were not announced. Officials said the plane has been held in check so far, short of all-out performance.

YOUR ATTENTION IS DESIRED

Calling all Arlington County delinquent taxpayers to settle up their delinquent tax accounts:

In January we reported that 90% of the County taxes were collected as of December 5, 1949, for that year, and that almost $500,000.00 remained to be collected. We now report that 92% of the taxes have been collected, leaving, roughly, $400,000.00 uncollected. So there is about 8% left to be collected.

If you are one of those persons who has not paid his taxes, and can pay them, you are not being fair to your neighbor who has paid his taxes.

If you have children in school, the cost of educating each child being $190.00, and can pay your taxes and have not paid them, then, of course, you are not treating your neighbor right, who has children in school and has paid his taxes. And what about those people who do not have children, and who have paid their taxes? Are they being treated fairly by those who have not paid their taxes?

In January we reported that the County was bonded to the extent of $7,924,731. Five million dollars of that amount was voted by the people during the last two years. We forgot to tell you about the $2,000,000.00 more of bonds which have been voted but not issued, which in time will, of course, be added to the $7,924,731.00, making a total bonded indebtedness of $9,924,731.00. Interest and amortization on these bonds have to be met. If they are not met, the holders of the bonds can foreclose on the County just as the holder of a trust can foreclose on a home.

Schools are not the only thing in the County that have to be paid for out of the tax collections. Police protection, fire protection, general county government expenses, all of these have to be paid for by taxes.

As you know, Arlington County is not like the Federal Government; it does not have the power to issue currency and set the value of it like Congress can do. So the County Government of Arlington has to be run just like a private business.

We are frequently reminding you citizens and taxpayers who want a better and more elaborate County, and who vote for these bond issues, that if you have not paid your taxes, come in and do so now, before we have to collect them through the Courts and Sheriff's office.

Without making any excuses, particularly, I would like to remind the taxpayers and citizens that I do not set the levy nor spend the money. My job is to collect the taxes after they have been assessed.

The best way to keep taxes down is for everybody to pay his taxes and see that the public officials don't waste the money.

So come on in, folks, we will be looking for you.

Dates Cast Doubt On 'Kenyon Case'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator McCarthy's documentation of Miss Dorothy Kenyon's 28 associations with alleged Communist front organizations links her with only two of them at a date after they were officially branded as subversive.

She is identified with the rest only at dates from 2 to 10 years before the groups were cited as Communist fronts, an examination of the Wisconsin Republican's exhibits discloses.

Miss Kenyon, a former New York municipal judge and former United States representative on a United Nations commission, was McCarthy's "Case No. 1" in his presentation of charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department.

Invited to Testify Tuesday

A special subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee heard McCarthy's charges against Miss Kenyon Wednesday and Thursday. McCarthy will resume with other cases on Monday. Miss Kenyon, who has called McCarthy an "unmitigated liar," has been invited to testify on Tuesday.

Even in one of the two exhibits McCarthy adduced to show Miss Kenyon linked with an officially classified Communist front after it was so described some questions are raised.

A letter written November 16, 1948, by the National Council of American Soviet Friendship shows Miss Kenyon's name in a printed list of sponsors on the back. The organization was named as a Communist front by the Justice Department in December, 1947, and by the House Committee on Un-American Activities in March, 1944.

Nevertheless, it is conceivable that the printed list used on the letter sheet in 1948 was an old one.

For along with Miss Kenyon, the sponsors include four Senators or former Senators—Murray (D., Mont.), Pepper (D., Fla.), Thomas (D., Utah) and Capper (R., Kans.)—plus a host of other citizens hardly likely to identify themselves with an officially described Communist group, once it was so revealed.

These include Dean Christian Gaus of Princeton, Dr. Einstein, Thomas Mann, Raymond Gram Swing, the fiercely anti-Communist Genevieve Tabouis, and many others of similar views.

Evidence on Only 17

The second organization where Miss Kenyon is shown affiliated after it was cited is the Schappes Defense Committee. The House Committee called it subversive on March 29, 1944. Miss Kenyon is shown as sponsoring it six months later.

McCarthy did not offer evidence to show Miss Kenyon's connection with 28 subversive organizations, but only 17.

Of the other 15, only four or possibly five have been classed as subversive by an Attorney General. They have also been so designated by various other groups such as the House Committee, and Un-American Activities Committees or special investigations in California, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania.

Miss Kenyon is identified with one group some two years before it was ever named as a front organization; in a second 10 years before, in a third three years before. In the fourth case, the evidence is undated.

The identification of a fifth is not clear. McCarthy lists it as the American Russian Institute. Various organizations of this name in different cities have been named as subversive, but the American Russian Institute for Cultural Relations with the Soviet Union, to which McCarthy may be referring, was stated by the Justice Department not to be on its subversive list.

This leaves 10 other organizations classed as Red by McCarthy. In two of them, no such classification can be found, from any organization, in the official index expurgatoris of the House committee. This is a document published in December, 1948, giving a compilation of all Communist citations, from whatever official source.

In a third, the date of the citation does not appear in the House Committee volume.

Of the remaining seven, Miss Kenyon is shown affiliated from two to nine years before the earliest citation.

In his testimony, McCarthy suggested that the antiquity of Miss Kenyon's associations with the group suggested that her "Communist activities" were "deep-rooted."

The conclusion is also possible that if McCarthy cannot find more recent idification of her with the organizations, she was like many well - meaning Americans who joined plausibly-named groups and ceased affiliation after their aims or character became apparent.

Recent Evidence on Views

Considerably more recent evidence of Miss Kenyon's present views is found in the January, 1950, issue of the Journal of the American Association of University Women.

It reprints a speech she delivered on June 19, 1949, in Seattle, to the AAUW convention, soon after she returned from a meeting in Beirut, Syria, of the U. N. Commission on the Status of Women.

Pointing out that democracy "isn't easy to practice," she said that "there are certain tests by which it can be measured, which distinguish it from all other forms of government, notably the totalitarian, and which reveal the extent of its success or failure.

"First: in the political field. Can all citizens vote without discrimination? Is their vote free and without fear of reprisal? Have they a genuine choice of candidates and issues, not a mere rubber-stamp choice? . . .

"Second: in this field of thought. Can we think and express our opinions freely in respect to our Government? . . . Can we go to school and be taught to think for ourselves by teachers and scholars who in turn are free to think for themselves? Or are we or they intimidated in some way as the totalitarian thought-control governments are wont to intimidate their peoples?"

Persons who have been associated with Miss Kenyon in the U. N. Commission have reported she made herself persona non grata, by constantly opposing the activities of the Congress of American Women in that forum. That organization, however, is one of those McCarthy cited as pro-Communist, and of which he said Miss Kenyon was a sponsor.

Cable-Cutting Seen As Work of Expert

Frankfurt, Germany, March 11 (U.P.).—International cable lines, cut last night, were restored at 6 p. m. (noon EST). Workmen were still repairing intra-German lines. The United States Army said the 3-inch cable was severed by an expert wire cutter.

The United Press and Associated Press teletype lines in Frankfurt were cut off from London and Paris.

Bomb Defense Plan Promised Soon by Larsen

By the United Press

The people soon will know what is being planned for their protection in the event of atomic war, Civilian Mobilization Director Paul J. Larsen said yesterday.

On the job less than two weeks, the Danish-born engineer who is charged with perfecting civil defense plans against the possibility of surprise enemy attack said that "the future promises very great cooperation among the Federal Government, the States and the cities on this vital problem."

Larsen, an affable man whose 6-foot 31-inch frame carries about 225 pounds, was asked whether the public will be told about civilian defense plans after they have jelled.

"This is going to be a public education program in which we hope the press will play a big part," he said.

The former director of the A-bomb engineering laboratory at Sandia, N. Mex., who took over the new post on March 1, added:

"This is my first job in Government. Right now, I would like to correct one impression. I am not an atomic expert, even though I have been director of the Sandia laboratory. I am a radio and electronics engineer."

Larsen said plans developed by his office will be adapted to regional divisions of the country.

Between 1940 and 1945, Larsen was with terrestrial magnetism department of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, and with the Johns Hopkins University's applied physics laboratory at Silver Spring, Md. During the war he was director of the armed services' radio proximity fuse project. From 1945 to 1947 he was assistant to the chiefef of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance, specializing in fire control.

Pact Defense Chiefs to Meet At The Hague

By The Associated Press

Top defense officials of the North Atlantic allies were called yesterday to a series of meetings at The Hague.

Secretary of Defense Johnson announced that The Netherlands government will be host to a meeting of the Atlantic Pact Defense Committee on April 1. It will be the third meeting of this committee, which is composed of Johnson and defense ministers of the 11 other treaty members.

Johnson said the meeting has been called to review the accomplishments of North Atlantic Treaty planning.

Gen. Omar Bradley also has called a meeting of the pact military committee in The Hague on March 28. The Defense Department's announcement said this committee, composed of a top military representative from each country, will consider results of the efforts of five regional planning groups.

A pact military production and supply board will meet in The Hague on March 24. This meeting will be under the chairmanship of Hubert E. Howard, chairman of the United States Munitions Board.

In addition to the United States and The Netherlands, the North Atlantic Treaty nations are Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Canada, Italy, Portugal, Norway, Denmark and Iceland.

ing arrows at a 20-foot "Vote no against dictatorship" poster. Three went wild and one fizzled out.

Tonight factions both for and against Leopold met separately in a traditionally left-wing Brussels suburb and shouted insults at each other. Then the groups, totaling about 1500 persons, departed.

At Remagne, in pro-Catholic Luxembourg Province, the local priest rallied 200 villagers who charged a Socialist soundtruck with pitchforks. The tires were flattened and the Socialist Party workers were forced to flee into the woods.

One carload of young Catholics was chased and caught by Socialists late last night. The occupants were thrashed and sulphuric acid was poured over the car.

Troops and police were alerted for possible riots. The tough steel-helmeted security forces were ordered to rush rioters with rifle butts and to quell disturbances as soon as they began.

The four-week pre-referendum campaign has been marked by violence in almost every big city and many small towns in Belgium.

Almost the entire adult population of Belgium, more than 5,500,000 men and women, will go to the polls. There is a $3 fine for failure to vote in the referendum, which is intended to give Parliament an indication of how the nation feels.

Paris Transport Strike Ends, Easing National Wave Threat

Paris, March 11 (AP).—The Paris subway and bus strike ended today, flattening a part of the French strike wave Communists hoped to bring to a crest when the first United States arms aid arrives.

The Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (CGT) ordered its members back to work on the Paris lines after seeing that non-Communist unions would not join them.

The strike never wholly halted Paris transport in five days of trying. The lines, owned by the city, gave their 32,000 employes a basic 5 percent wage increase that amounted to at least 1100 francs (about $3) a month for each. The CGT had asked for a minimum increase of 3000 francs ($8.50).

However, thousands of workers, Communist and non-Communist, remained away from their jobs.

Nearly 300,000 of the nation's 1,500,000 metal workers are idle. The nationalized gas and electric industries remained crippled by a walkout of many of their 100,000 employes. Gas pressure is still low in many parts of Paris. Some garbage is uncollected. Various dock workers and miners joined in a clamor for concessions, mostly for more pay.

The Communists stressed "war and peace" issues.

Though the French aircraft carrier Dixmude began loading American fighters and bombers this week at Norfolk, Va., under the United States' one-billion-dollar aid program for its North Atlantic pact allies, French and American authorities here are making a mystery of just when the first shipment will reach France. They talk of "technical delays."

McCarthy to Accuse State Dept. 'Big Shot'

SECURITY—*From Pg. 1

"a fellow traveler or Communist." The Senator said this man had been discharged from the Navy because of bad grades and "communism." McCarthy made this charge February 20 on the Senate floor as his "Case No. 5."

Want Roosevelt Papers

Meanwhile, Republican Senators Homer Ferguson (Mich.) and Owen Brewster (Me.) urged the subcommittee to seek access to the late President Roosevelt's papers on security checks of Government officials. They suggested that the committee's work might be advanced by a study of Roosevelt papers at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Archivists at the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library there recently announced that four million personal papers of the late President will be made public for the first time on March 17. But it was announced that they will not include documents dealing with investigative reports on individuals.

Peurifoy issued a special statement attacking McCarthy for refusing to produce full details on the "bad security" risks.

"If he isn't prepared to substantiate his charges he should withdraw his allegation," Peurifoy said. "This is much too important to the country and its foreign policy to be left to innuendo."

Peurifoy said he was "surprised" at McCarthy's decision not to present all the evidence he has on the alleged security cases.

"I think that Senator McCarthy owes it to the country to make available to the (Senate Foreign Relations) Committee any evidence which he has that involves the loyalty of persons in the Department of State," Peurifoy said, "whether it be the 205 that he said were known Communists in Wheeling; the 57 that he said were card-carrying Communists in Salt Lake City; the four that he said weren't Communists at all in Reno; the 81 that he mentioned on the floor of the Senate, or just one."

In his earlier interview, the undersecretary said:

"I wish to assure the American people that their State Department is in good shape from the loyalty and security standpoint.

"We recognize the fact, perhaps more acutely than any other Government department, that the Soviet government would like nothing better than to penetrate this foreign office; anyone who believes differently is extremely naive.

"We have made great improvements in the security program here (since it was launched in March, 1947), not only in personnel loyalty but in the matter of codes, cryptographic devices, internal security, locks, safes and files.

"Insofar as I know there are no Communists in the Department of State."

Building of H-Bomb Approved by Voters

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 11.—In the five weeks since President Truman gave the H-bomb project the green light, public thinking about this deadly weapon has been moving along the following lines, judging from a national sampling survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The first question was to determine how many United States adults have heard or read anything about the new hydrogen bomb. Eighty-five percent had, 15 percent had not. Those who had were then asked:

"Do you think Russia knows how to make the hydrogen bomb?"

|---|---|
| The vote: | |
| Yes | 49% |
| No | 21 |
| No opinion | 15 |
| | 85% |
| Haven't heard about bomb | 15 |
| | 100% |

The next quesetion:

"Do you, yourself, think Russia would use a hydrogen bomb on the United States?"

|---|---|
| Here is the vote: | |
| Yes | 68% |
| No | 9 |
| No opinion | 8 |
| | 85% |
| Haven't heard about bomb | 15 |
| | 100% |

All persons questioned in the sample, whether they had previously heard about the bomb or not, were then given a brief description of the H-bomb issue, as follows:

"It has been decided that the United States should try to make a hydrogen bomb which may be up to a thousand times more powerful than the atom bomb. What is your own opinion of our going ahead and trying to make such a bomb?"

Here is the vote of the total sample:

|---|---|
| Approval—go ahead, we must be prepared | 69% |
| Qualified or reluctant approval—make it but don't use it, for defense only, if Russia has one, only as last resort | 9 |
| Disapproval—don't make it, never should be made | 14 |
| No opinion | 8 |
| | 100% |

Two final questions were:

"Do you think we should try to work out an agreement with Russia to control the atom bomb and the hydrogen bomb?"

|---|---|
| The vote: | |
| Yes | 68% |
| No | 23 |
| No opinion | 9 |
| | 100% |

"Do you think such an attempt to work out an agreement with Russia would be successful, or not?"

|---|---|
| Would | 17% |
| Would not | 60 |
| No opinion | 23 |
| | 100% |

committee was complete except for the deletion of some names and locations.

The committee members said Fuchs "knew everything and apparently he told everything." They said they were "amazed" by his ability to retain complicated data in his mind.

"I would say that even today, Fuchs could make a better educated guess on the size of America's A-bomb stockpile than could any member of the committee," one legislator said.

He pointed out that Fuchs last visited this country in 1947. Therefore, he said, it is "safe to assume" he gave the Russians everything known up to that point.

Russians Go to Polls to Vote for a Single List of Candidates; Stalin Among Those 'Running'

reiterated Friday night what Stalin has emphasized in repeated statements in the past four years—that Soviet policy is based on belief in the possibility of "peaceful coexistence of two systems (Communist and capitalist) and their peaceful economic competition."

In other words, Molotov denied Russia believes one system eventually must destroy the other by war.

But he expressed reservations whether a similar belief is disavowed in capitalist countries. His argument boiled down to this: Russia does not fear peaceful economic competition with capitalism; capitalism does. Therefore, Russia must be on her guard.

Politburo speakers have indicated they believe Russia enjoys several strategic advantages for hammering now at the theme of Russia's peace policy.

Lazar Kaganovich, in a speech at Tashkent, in Uzbekistan, made public yesterday, said the West's "atomic diplomacy" has collapsed.

Kaganovich said Russia is convinced her gold-measured ruble (equivalent to 25 cents) will prove stronger in international competition than the dollar.

Therefore, he said, the Soviet people must guard "as the apple of our eye" the power of the armed forces so as not to permit "anyone to stick his imperialist snout into our Soviet vegetable garden."

Stalin himself is a candidate from the Stalin district of Moscow in the election. Like all other candidates, he has no opposition.

About 671 members of the Council of the Union (upper house of the Supreme Soviet) and 631 members of the Council of Nationalities, (lower house) will be named.

The candidates have been nominated at meetings sponsored by local trade unions and Communist Party committees. The candidates are either members of the Communist Party or bear a "non-party" designation. The Communist Party has about 6,300,000 members. No other party is legal.

When the voter enters the polling station, he is handed two ballots, one for the candidate for the Council of the Union in his district, the other for the candidate for the Council of Nationalities.

He can fold the ballot and drop it in the box or mark off the name of the candidate as a sign of his opposition. A private voting booth is provided to mark his ballot, if he wishes to use that privilege.

Despite the fact it is a single-ticket election, the candidates make speeches, wheelhorses hold rallies at agitpunkts (agitation points) and party workers ring doorbells on election day to get out the vote.

In the last general election in 1946, a total vote of 101,700,000 was cast. Of these, 1,638,000 were "No" votes.

American Public Warned Against Fake Peace Talk

By the United Press

The American people were warned last night about "being taken in by fake peace feelers from Moscow."

Government officials acidly questioned the good faith of hints by Russian leaders the Kremlin may be ready to engage in serious "peace" talks.

Those vague Russian suggestions, United States officials said, are designed to confuse the American people and undermine Secretary of State Acheson's program of "total diplomacy" to win the cold war.

Referring to speeches by Vice Premier V. M. Molotov and other high-ranking Russian policy makers, United States' officials commented dryly, "Actions speak louder than Moscow radio's words."

"Soviet peace talk is for propaganda only," one official declared. "It is a brutal effort to mislead people who passionately desire a fair and lasting settlement of the world's problems."

"But, in fact, Russia offers peace on her own terms only."

United States officials noted that "peace" hints by three members of the Politburo during the Russian "election" campaign contained only general suggestions that the Kremlin might be ready to talk about problems like international atomic controls—without any assurances Russia would agree to an international inspection program which is considered essential by Western democracies.

As evidence of the fact that Russia still is militantly aggressive in the cold war, United States officials cited these Moscow-directed anti-American incidents:

1. Hungary's imprisonment of an American citizen on "fake" spying charges, and Hungary's request that three members of the U. S. Legation be recalled.

2. Bulgaria's trumped-up charges of espionage against American diplomats and its persecution of innocent Bulgarian employes of the American Legation.

3. Romania's unexplained action in closing British and American information offices and libraries.

4. Czechoslovakia's persecution and vilification of American missionaries.

5. Red China's mistreatment of American officials; imprisonment for a year and a half of two American naval fliers; seizure of American Government property in flagrant violation of recognized international treaties.

6. Russia's persecution of 2000 persons claiming American citizenship.

7. Russia's deliberate campaign to paralyze the United Nations by walkouts in an attempt to force recognition of Communist China; and her refusal to abide by majority decision on this issue.

County Road Code Proposal Discussed

George T. Papageorge started off with a point by point discussion of the code. He described its requirements for street paving, solid instead of rolled curbs, sidewalks, driveways, street signs and tree planting.

He ended by telling the council: "You're building for the future, not the past. I urge you to adopt this ordinance in its entirety."

Some witnesses on both sides who followed Papageorge disputed his figures on the cost.

Betts Fights Plan

Heaviest opposition came from the hastily formed Home Owners Protective Association which its spokesman, David E. Betts, described as composed of home builders, registered engineers. Betts put on four witnesses and the four remaining to be heard will complete his group's case.

One suggestion winning approval of later speakers was made by Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. He said that his group was officially neither for nor against the proposal but he was critical of what he said was a lack of coordination between his group's master highway plan and the Public Works Department which worked up the code.

He asked that the council refer the code to a joint working group to work out the "kinks" and that the State Road Commission and the Suburban Sanitary Commission be included.

Lee referred to but did not read a blistering report by his commission's planning engineer, William C. Burrage. This report on the code called it "restrictive to the point of being confiscatory" and said the proposal "appears to represent a determined effort on the part of the country to complete bypass this commission . . ."

The planning commission, for many years controlled by young Lee's father, E. Brooke Lee, county Democratic boss, has been at odds with the county council, a creation of the charter movement. The elder Lee's weekly paper constantly quarrels with the charterites.

G. PAPAGEORGE, director of public works

BLAIR LEE, 3D, Maryland National Capital Commission

IRVING McNAYR, Mongomery County Manager

Gives 2 Reasons

He said there were two main reasons for a new set of road regulations—the need for coverage in the county outside the present boundaries of the suburban area and because of the "low" standards now in force. He said property owners and taxpayers will ultimately profit, and he concluded with a plea for the ordinance's adoption, as drawn, because "you're building for the future, not the past."

Since the chief dissension has been over the secondary residential street requirements, Papageorge offered these figures on comparison with standards in other areas:

Width of street paving—Montgomery (new requirement), 28 feet; Arlington, 36 feet; District, 34 feet; Alexandria, 30 feet; Baltimore County, 30 feet.

Grading—Montgomery is the only one of these areas that does NOT now require grading of the entire dedicated right-of-way. The present county width is 50 feet and would go to 60. Others cited were Baltimore, 50 feet; Arlington, 50, and District, 60.

More Comparisons

Costs—For construction of roads in front of a typical 60-foot lot, these would be the comparative costs: Arlington, $464; District, $532; Baltimore County, $535; Alexandria, $514; Montgomery (today), $288; Montgomery (proposed), $605.70.

Transferring these last figures into percentages, Papageorge said if the new cost in Montgomery County were taken as 100 percent, the others would be: Arlington, 77 percent; District, 88 percent; Baltimore County, 89 percent; Alexandria, 85 percent, and the present Montgomery standard, 48 percent.

Of the increased cost, Papageorge told the audience, about 75 percent would go for safety features—a better road base, 2 feet more width, sidewalks, curbs and gutters and driveways to get parked cars off the streets.

When he said the recent loss of a child's life might have been averted if the new standard had been in force, he was roundly booed.

Papageorge's figures differed materially from those submitted to The Washington Post by the Home Owners' Protective Association and published in chart form on Friday. Those figures gave this cost comparison for roads in front of a 70-foot lot:

Montgomery County (today), $401; Prince Georges, $415; District, $402; Arlington, $432; Fairfax, $284; Montgomery (proposed), $1092.

Papageorge said sidewalks are "no new fangled invention" and he said the cost of other new added features were minor—$6 per lot for tree planting and 50 cents per lot for street signs. He noted that storm drainage requirements would not be changed.

The public works director said the cost of all the additional features would be greater if not installed at the time the streets were laid. For example, he cited the cost of constructing driveways at $60 per house if done at the time of building but $140 if done later on.

Council Urges Changes

Two officials of the Montgomery Safety Council, Harold Hammond and Francis E. Twist, added that group's indorsement to the code but said that some modifications on sidewalk width and curb height should be made.

McNayr said he thought the most important feature of the code was the removal of what he called "too much discretion" now left to the county engineers to make exceptions to the rules. He also explained that the code would not mean all existing roads would be rebuilt to the new standards, with resulting foot-front assessments on home owners, but said each case would be considered separately.

HAROLD HAMMOND, of the County Safety Board

WILLIAM DYER, of D. C. Building and Loan League

M. S. GLUEK President of Swarthmore Realty

Clark Daniel, president of the Washington Home Builders Association, called the code "unbalanced" and "inflexible." He said the home or the backyard is the safest place for the child, referring to pleas for sidewalks as safe play areas.

William H. Dyer, vice president of the District Building and Loan League, gave technical information on the code's effect on building loans.

Federation Indorses It

The Montgomery County Civic Federation, through Herbert N. Eaton, indorsed the code, but added that some details may be too severe. Similar approval came from Robert Snur and Willard Morris, of the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring. Ralph D. Boyd, a past president of the group, said "This is the first forward step that has been made to guarantee proper streets."

William Wheeler reported the "full and complete opposition" of the County Real Estate Board, and Betts reported the opposition of the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

The Wheaton Chamber of Commerce, through J. Milton Smith, also expressed opposition but Marvin Simmons, vice president of the Bethesda Chamber, said his group had taken no stand. He said he was for "good roads and streets if they are not so costly as to slow up commercial and residential growth."

Mrs. John Scarf, for the League of Women Voters, commended the council "for having the courage" to prepare the ordinance "in the face of certain opposition." She called sidewalks "a twentieth century necessity" and said they would cut down the need for bus transportation to schools if children could safely walk there.

Bar Group Asks Time

The county Bar Association, by James Christopher, contended the code is "not sufficiently flexible." He asked, and was granted, two weeks in which to submit a brief on the code's legality, something he said he doubted in part.

A small builder, M. S. Gluek asked for a code on "some middle ground" between the present and the proposed. He advised the council: "Don't loose sight of the fact we're building homes, not model roads."

One of the home owners protective group's witnesses, Thomas Oyster, want to question Papageorge about his figures on county road maintainance costs. Lee said he could do that on Tuesday. Oyster contended the bulk of maintainance costs has been for roads built before the present standards went into effect.

A good deal of the argument centered on the code's outlawing of the use of a local road building product "bank run gravel." Wilson T. Ballard, a former State Roads official, defended this gravel but said not enough attention had been paid in the past to subgrade construction on roads.

James C. Wilkes, Washington attorney for the Home Builders of Metropolitan Washington, was the one who called the code "confiscatory and unconstitutional." He said enactment of the code "will get the county and this board into a great deal of trouble."

Others who testified included Page Hopkins, Col. Robert R. Hendon, L. Graham Leeman, Frederick L. Royer, Millard Kass, Carl M. Freeman and Wilbur J. Huff.

British Holdout 'Annoys' Hoffman

By The Associated Press

Paul G. Hoffman said yesterday Britain stands to lose 150 million dollars in Marshall Plan aid unless it joins with other European nations in a plan to lower trade barriers.

The Economic Cooperation Administrator told reporters the big cutback—amounting to almost one quarter of the sum tentatively earmarked for British recovery next year—won't be put into effect as "punitive action;" the money simply will go into a proposed European payments union whether or not Britain joins.

Nevertheless, Hoffman said he is "annoyed" with the British for their stand on the complicated plan to help liberalize the exchange of currency among western European countries.

"But they are the usual annoyances that result from trying to resolve differences," he said, adding that he expects Britain to go along with the project eventually.

The European payments union, as blueprinted by Hoffman, would function as a currency clearinghouse for all Marshall Plan nations. ECA has set aside 600 million dollars to finance operation of the scheme, but Britain so far has refused to say it will participate.

He said the British have "some very real problems" which affect that country's attitude on the payments union.

These include extensive financial commitments with countries in the so-called sterling area which would be difficult to resolve should the British join the new currency pool.

Hoffman has called the payments union a "must" if the Marshall Plan is to succeed. In posting the threat of a slash in British funds, he served notice that ECA intends to go ahead with the clearing house whether or not Britain participates.

"However, we will definitely leave the door open for the British to come in later," Hoffman said.

Big Defense Show Planned For District

A gigantic demonstration of America's armed might will take place here May 20, on Armed Forces Day, which will replace Army Day, Navy Day, and Air Force Day.

Beginning with a downtown morning parade, of two hours' duration, all units of the unified Defense Department will participate in the celebration which will center at Bolling Air Force Base. All military establishments in and around Washington will maintain open house for the day.

Issued from the Pentagon, the world's largest office building, the plans announced yesterday took on a Hollywood air with every adjective but "super-colossal" being applied. The plans appeared as large as the Pentagon.

A program of exhibitions will begin at Bolling Field at 12:30 p. m., after the downtown parade, and will continue until sundown. The Army, Navy fleet and air arms, Marines, and Air Force will participate. Included will be landing of Air Force and Navy planes from possibly record-breaking distance flights; landing of a Marine detachment under simulated wartime conditions; and displays of all manner of ordnance except those still listed as secret.

Tentative plans announced yesterday call for parking of 100,000 automobiles, Defense Department spokesman said. The arrangements include shutting down of both Bolling Air Base and Anacostia Field of the Navy for the day, and conversion of all of Anacostia and part of Bolling into huge parking lots. No figures on cost of the display were made public.

Halifax's Hero Son, New MP, Gained Wide Popularity Here

RICHARD WOOD
Legless Parliamentarian

PERCY B. LUCAS
"Laddie" goes to Commons

Washington friends of Richard Wood, the war hero son of Lord Halifax, will have to address him from now on as "Richard Wood, MP."

Wood, who lost both legs in North Africa during the war, was elected to Parliament last month as Conservative member for Bridlington, in his home county of Yorkshire.

Although this begins his political career, Wood was better known and more popular in Washington than many seasoned politicians. He traveled widely in the United States during the last years of his father's term as British Ambassador, and he helped to keep his father informed about American opinions outside the Capital.

Drives Car, Rides Horse

In spite of his disability, Wood now drives a car and rides a horse. He will be following his father's footsteps in Parliament, for Lord Halifax served many years in the House of Commons before becoming Viceroy of India and going to the House of Lords.

Other new members of the new House of Commons include many who are well known in Washington. One of them is Percy B. (Laddie) Lucas, who captained the British Walker Cup golf team that came here last year.

Lucas, a brilliant fighter pilot in the Royal Air Force, is the new Conservative member from Brentford and Chiswick, in the western suburbs of London.

Henry Lennox Hopkinson, third secretary of the British Embassy during the Coolidge years, is the new Conservative member for Taunton. Peter H. B. Smithers, who was assistant naval attache here during the war, and acting naval attache in Mexico City, was elected from Winchester.

Richard Fort, an industrial chemist who was an important figure on the British Purchasing Mission in this country during the war, is also in the new House of Commons as Conservative member for Clitheroe.

Other New Members

Other new members include a number of British officers who held important posts at combined British-American headquarters during the war. Among them are C. I. Orr-Ewing, chief radar officer on General Eisenhower's staff; Capt. R. L. Ryder, a winner of the Victoria Cross who served as naval liaison officer at Field Marshal Harold Alexander's headquarters in Italy, and Brig. Gen. J. G. Smyth, another Victoria Cross winner, whose "Dagger" division helped recapture Mandalay and Rangoon in Burma.

The famous British political families are well represented by the younger generation in the new House of Commons. Among the newcomers is 34-year-old Viscount Cranborne of the Cecil family, son and heir of the Marquess of Salisbury.

Two of Winston Churchill's sons-in-law are in the new House—Captain Christopher Soames and Duncan Sandys, a former member of 10 years' experience who lost his parliamentary seat in 1945.

Other new MPs well know in Washington are F. P. Bishop, chairman of the advertisement committee of the International Chamber of Commerce, a former business manager of The Times of London; Samuel Storey, former chairman of Reuters, the British news agency; C. J. M. Alport, who led the Cambridge debating team to the United States in 1935; and Sir Patrick Spens, a former chief justice of India.

Italy Boosts Prices

Rome, March 11 (U.P.).—The Government today boosted the prices of cigarettes, gasoline, matches, cocoa and spices to help finance a sugar, coffee, tea, pepper, vanilla, 10-year program to build up depressed areas.

Teen-Age Sex Orgies Link Scores of Men

Carlinville, Ill., March 11 (AP).—Illinois' second mass sex scandal in five months involving teen-age girls and scores of men and boys was under investigation here today.

State's Attorney Edward R. Phelps said the new scandal came to light when he investigated why a 14-year-old girl was playing hookey from school and found a "rather complete diary" kept by her 17-year-old girl friend.

He said both Carlinville girls had admitted intimacies with "several men in one night." Phelps added he had questioned 27 men and boys and expected to talk to "about 50."

Charges of statutory rape have been filed against six men so far.

"The girls have been running around with numerous men and boys and were intimate with a number of them in parked cars," Phelps said. He added that the girls usually "picked up" the men at first and that the escapades often were repeated.

A similar scandal was disclosed five months ago at Belvidere, Ill., about 250 miles north of this central Illinois city of 5000 population. Thirteen men were indicted on morals charges in that case.

They were accused of having intimacies with nine high school girls 13 to 15 years old after plying them with ice cream sodas. Four were convicted, three are awaiting trial, and the others were dismissed.

Phelps said the Carlinville girls gave this version:

The girls would walk the streets of Carlinville and speak to male strangers. Most of the men were from the surrounding towns of Gillespie, Chesterfield, Fidelity, Girard, and Virden.

The men would take the girls for rides in their cars, taking along bottles of liquor. The intimacies would take place in parked cars.

The trysts started about the first of the year and continued until the girls were questioned about a week ago.

Phelps said the older girl had listed the names of 20 to 25 men in her diary and mentioned escapades with many of them.

Parents of both girls have been charged with contributing to the delinquency of minors. The girls were adjudged delinquents in County Court yesterday and face a hearing Monday for sentencing.

Phelps said the younger girl was a seventh grade pupil and that her friend only went to the eighth grade. He added that the older girl quit school to work in a dress factory but had been laid off.

Some Plenty Tough

Furry Steak To Test Alibi Of Kiln Cat

Minerva, Ohio, March 11 (AP).—A sirloin steak, two thermometers and a woman's second-hand sealskin hat may vindicate this town's heat-resistant cat next week.

Minerva's fireproof feline emerged from what apparently was a 36-hour stretch inside a sealed brick kiln heated to 920 degrees.

Veterinary experts said the cat couldn't live inside the kiln, that there must be some mistake. The brick plant superintendent and a veterinarian said the cat did live through it and there wasn't any mistake.

The animal was badly dehydrated more than an inch of tail was burned off, fur singed down almost to the hide and the pads of the feet and tips of the ears were burned.

That's where Mrs. Twila Carman, correspondent for an Ohio newspaper, comes in with her steak, hat and thermometers. She plans to wrap the steak in an old sealskin hat and put it in the coldest, draftiest place in the kiln next time its fired up—probably next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Along with this unusual package, she'll put an ordinary thermometer which is expected to break at 130 degrees and a cooking thermometer which is good up to 500 degrees.

Mrs. Carman is attempting to reproduce with the fur hat and the sirloin steak a synthetic cat—as nearly like a live cat as a non-scientific newspaperwoman can dream up.

The Minerva woman figures what happens to the hat and the steak should be fairly good evidence of what would happen to a live cat.

Tablet Reveals 3800-Year-Old Murder Trial

Philadelphia, March 11 (AP).—Archeologists unearthed what they say is the oldest known record of a successful murder prosecution.

The trial of three men and a woman for the slaying of the woman's husband 3800 years ago was disclosed today.

The murder story was told on a clay tablet discovered in ancient Nippur by members of an expedition of the Universities of Chicago and Pennsylvania. Nippur is about 100 miles south of Baghdad, in Iraq.

The time was about 1850 B. C., and what happened was this:

Three men killed a temple official and reported the murder to the slain man's wife, Nin-Dada. For some reason she kept their secret.

The murder came to light, however, and King Ur-Ninurta, who ruled in his capital at Isin, turned the case over for trial to the Citizens' Assembly at Nippur.

Woman Set Free

Nine citizens demanded the death penalty, not only for the actual killers but for the dead man's wife as well.

Two men defended the woman, arguing she took no part in the actual murder. The dead man had not supported his wife, they asserted. Therefore, there was no reason why she should not remain silent about his murder.

The three slayers were condemned to be executed in front of the murdered man's chair. The woman was freed.

The trial, at least in some respects, was in accord with the common law of England and the United States, Owen J. Roberts, dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and former Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, said.

"The wife would not be guilty as an accessory after the fact under our law," Roberts explained. "An accessory after the fact must not only know that the felony was committed, but must also receive, relieve, comfort or assist the felon."

Primitive Ideas Revealed

Max Rheinstein, University of Chicago law historian, said the tablet is a great significance as proof of the cultural and political advances of Nippur.

At the same time, the tablet shows traces of more primitive ideas, Rheinstein added. Execution of the murderers in front of the dead man's chair, he said, indicated a desire to placate the soul.

It also may have constituted an act of expiation meant to placate an outraged god or goddess, since the victim was a temple official, Rheinstein explained.

Mrs. Madsen Reported on Hunger Strike

Frankfurt, Germany, March 11 (U.P.).—Yvette Madsen's attorney today said the raven-haired Brooklyn beauty has been on a hunger strike for four days in the Frankfurt hospital where she is confined.

The attorney, Elmo Gower, said he fears her behavoir bears out the statement of her father, Alfred Noack, that "she wants to die."

The tall, slender, amateur artist, mother of two children, is on trial on the charge of shooting her husband, Air Force Lieut. Andrew Madsen, last October.

Gower, who will try to prove Mrs. Madsen was insane at the time of the slaying, said no one at the hospital, including the Wacs who keep a constant suicide watch over her, has been able to persuade her to eat.

She has collapsed four times in court and Gower indicated hospital attendants may have to resort to force-feeding, giving her a solution through her veins.

ROBERT LINCOLN O'BRIEN
Remarries at 84

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, 84, former newspaper correspondent, publisher and member of the Tariff Commission, was married quietly Friday in Montgomery County, friends learned yesterday.

The bride was Miss Helen Victoria Brown, who has been a teacher in a private girls' school in California for the past 20 years. She is a close friend of the bridegroom's daughter, his friends said.

A native of Abingdon, Mass., O'Brien is a Harvard graduate and came to Washington as a personal secretary to President Grover Cleveland. Later, he became Washington correspondent and then editor of the Boston Transcript; later, president and editor of the Boston Herald.

President Hoover appointed him to the Tariff Commission and President Roosevelt reappointed him, though he was a Republican. He served on the commission from 1931 to 1938. He has lived in retirement here since. His first wife, the former Emily Young O'Brien, whom he married in 1895, died in 1945.

Last October, O'Brien celebrated his fiftieth anniversary as a member of the Gridiron Club here. Recently, he has been living at the Cosmos Club. Friends said that the bride and groom left by automobile for a honeymoon trip to an undisclosed destination.

Diana Barrymore's Husband Seized in Vice Raid on Hotel

Chicago, March 11 (U.P.).—John Howard, 25, husband of Actress Diana Barrymore, today was charged with "lewd, lascivious and wanton" behavior with a blonde who said she gave him money.

Howard had checked out of the hotel where he was seized yesterday with the girl, Junior Karr, 27, in a police vice raid. Police charged Miss Karr was a "call girl" who made her headquarters at the hotel.

Howard did not deny he received money from her, but he told detectives he had no business arrangement with her.

"I don't demand money from these women," he said. "They just give it to me."

Howard said Miss Karr lived across the hall from him and that he was having a cup of coffee with her when police rapped at the door.

He said the raid was instigated by a woman whose attentions he had ignored. He said she ran an escort bureau and "has been following me all over the country making trouble for me."

Howard and Miss Karr were freed in $100 bond pending a hearing next Thursday.

Howard told police he is a "professional tennis player," but said he had not "been playing much tennis lately." He said there is a divorce suit pending between himself and Miss Barrymore, daughter of the late actor, John Barrymore.

At Atlanta, Miss Barrymore said:

"I'm not surprised to hear about this, but I'm not concerned with him or his difficulties. I haven't seen him in two years, and I expect our divorce to be granted in a few months."

Howard admitted he had been in trouble with police before, but he said, "I don't go around looking for trouble—it's always forced on me."

Howard and Miss Barrymore were married in New York in January, 1947. On May 11, 1947, they were arrested on assault and battery charges in Louisville, Ky.

Three policemen said they stopped the couple to find out why they were sounding their automobile horn early in the morning. They charged Howard and Miss Barrymore started swinging at them.

The assault and battery charges were dropped, however, and Howard and Miss Barrymore paid $5 fines for disorderly conduct. The three policemen each filed $20,000 damage suits, but settled out of court for $500.

Bank Robber Hunt by FBI Stepped Up

By the United Press

The FBI set in motion last night a Nation-wide manhunt for Bank Robber Francis (Slick Willie) Sutton.

It also asked again that authorities everywhere step up efforts to capture seven other bank robbers, one of whom is among the 10 most-hunted men on the FBI's list.

Sutton, also known as "The Actor," is sought as alleged leader of the three-man gang which held up a Manufacturers Trust Co. bank in New York Thursday and escaped with $63,000.

The FBI has dispatched to all parts of the country about 90,000 "wanted" circulars giving Sutton's description.

The circulars say Sutton is 48. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs about 155 pounds. He has a medium build and dark brown hair, possibly turning gray. He has blue eyes and a faint scar in the fold of his right wrist. He has a red flesh mole over the left eyebrow.

Sutton escaped two years ago from the Eastern State Penitentiary at Graterford, Pa. He has been involved in several crimes since, officers believe.

Among the other hunted bank robbers is Henry Randolph Mitchell, 54, Lexington, Ky., wanted in connection with a $10,353 robbery of a Williston, Fla., bank on January 21, 1948. Mitchell is among the 10 most hunted men.

Friends Lay $82,000 Shortage To 'Soft Heart' of Bank Chief

Branson, Mo., March 11 (U.P.).—Bethel Eiserman's friends today said he was too soft-hearted to be a banker. They said that's what led to a shortage of $82,000 in bank funds and Eiserman's arrest on embezzlement charges.

Eiserman, 52, told authorities it was true that there were "irregularities" in his handling of the bank's funds.

Authorities said that Eiserman, president of the Security Bank, who worked his way up from grocery clerk, couldn't bear to see a loan refused to anyone in need. If the bank's directors turned down a loan applicant, Eiseman sometimes would put up the money anyway.

Specifically, Eiserman is charged with embezzling $2750 in a transaction last January 30.

The examiners still were working. The loss was expected to be about $82,000, they said. When Eiserman was arraigned yesterday in Federal Court in Springfield, he was pale and haggard. He covered his head with his arms and sobbed openly.

Eiserman is known as a civic leader, as a man who was instrumental in getting the Skaggs Memorial Hospital built here.

His three children—two boys and a girl—are grown and married. All live here. One son, Fred is cashier of the bank.

2 Electrical Unions Ask NLRB Election

In NLRB Case

Teamsters Ruled Guilty Of Violations

By The Associated Press

An NLRB trial examiner ruled yesterday the AFL Teamsters Union violated the Taft-Hartley Act by seeking to force a "clearly illegal" closed shop agreement on a Louisville trucking firm.

Examiner Joseph L. Hektoen found the union guilty of an unfair labor practice by threatening to strike against the Adkins Transfer Co., Inc., in an effort to compel the firm to fire an extra driver whom the union had refused to accept as a member.

He said the union's action in barring membership to Gerald Weixler, the driver, ostensibly was based on the grounds that Weixler's father is vice president and sales manager of the company. Under the Taft-Hartley Act, a worker employed by a "parent or spouse" is excluded from the law's protection.

But the examiner said the younger Weixler did not come under this clause since his father had no part in hiring him, does not supervise his work and because neither one has an ownership share in the company.

The NLRB official said the union's refusal to accept Weixler's membership was simply a cover for its real objective of trying to put into effect a closed hiring arrangement with the company.

The examiner recommended that the NLRB direct the union to stop all efforts to discriminate against the younger Weixler and to cease its attempts to bring about the alleged closed shop arrangement.

Unless the union files notice of an appeal within 20 days, the ruling will go into effect as a board order.

By the United Press

Two rival unions fighting to represent the bulk of the Nation's electrical workers have agreed to ask the National Labor Relations Board to hold elections in General Electric and Westinghouse plants by March 31.

The CIO's new International Union of Electrical Workers said it has signed a request to the NLRB, drawn up by the rival United Electrical Workers, for prompt consent elections among some 200,000 workers in the companies' plants.

The UE, which was expelled from the CIO last year for following the Communist line, still holds contracts covering most of the workers in the industry.

The new union contends it represents a majority of the workers.

The NLRB certified the IUE last month as bargaining representative for some 26,000 workers in General Motors electrical plants and has completed hearings on the IUE's request for similar approval at Westinghouse and General Electric.

However, an IUE spokesman said the board's order for balloting at the two companies—biggest in the electrical manufacturing industry—may not come for several weeks.

Meanwhile, the IUE hailed the announcement by General Electric that it will not meet the UEW to negotiate a contract to replace the one that expires April 1.

The company wrote the NLRB it was delaying action on a new contract pending the board's certification of one or the other of the warring unions as bargaining agent.

Chairman James B. Carey of the IUE interpreted the company's decision as a victory for his new union.

Belson to Speak

The National Capital Forge of the American Relations Association will have a luncheon meeting at 12:15 p. m. Monday at Lee House, 15th and L sts. nw. Speaker will be Walter W. Belson, assistant general manager, American Trucking Associations, Inc.

Peace Prayers Urged by Pope

Catholics, besides the aged and infirm, would be expected to take part spiritually without visiting churches, but they presumably included some of those in Communist-controlled areas.

Purposes Are Listed

He listed the following purposes of the special prayers.

1. That "those who hold the destinies of nations in their hands" may realize that peace is the fruit of wisdom and justice and that war is the result of blindness and hatred, and that the same leaders of nations may keep in mind that they will have to stand judgment not only by history but also by God.

2. That those who are sowing discord and provoking revolution may come to believe that Christian justice, brotherly concord and equilibrium between social classes comes from the application of law and not from force and violence.

3. That the rich may be led to justice, generosity and charity.

4. That the poor may take as their model the family of Nazareth, which also obtained its bread by daily work.

5. That those who govern public affairs may be convinced that there is no solider social base than Christian teaching and the fostering of ecclesiastical liberty.

Would "Spare No Efforts"

The Pope told the bishops that all priests and laymen in Catholic Action organizations should be inspired to "spare no efforts" in an attempt to get men to change their ways to conform to the Christian gospels.

He noted that "in not a few countries" Catholic officials are being jailed, exiled or prevented from doing their work and that church proclamations are being subjected to "official censorship that seems to make it a principle that truth, liberty and religion submissively must serve only civil authority." The reference evidently was to Communist-controlled countries.

"While those on the other side are working very hard to destroy the very basis of the Catholic religion and the Christian cult, and while so many evils and perils exist, it is not licit for any one to be lazy and idle," the Pope said.

The encyclical was one of the few that Pope Pius has issued in his 11 years as Pontiff. Vatican aides said he has averaged about one a year.

Charter No-Politics Council Vote Killed

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., March 11—The General Assembly tonight killed a stipulation in the Alexandria city charter that councilmen be named in non-partisan elections.

As one of its last acts of the 1950 session the Legislature accepted a report of committee conferees of the House and Senate who debated the controversial clause for two hours.

Senator Andrew W. Clarke and Delegate Armistead L. Boothe dissented from the majority report and vigorously protested the action as a refutation of the will of Alexandria voters.

In another late hour move, the Senate passed the House bill to stay all new annexation proceedings by cities of 10,000 or more population for two years while the problem is studied.

Grace Period Allowed

An amendment by Senator Robert F. Baldwin, jr., of Norfolk, allows a 90-day grace period after adjournment of the General Assembly in which cities may institute court proceedings.

Also adopted today was a new charter for Falls Church, introduced by Delegate Edwin Lynch, of Fairfax. Like the Alexandria charter, it was amended in committee to delete a requirement for non-partisan elections for city officials.

As for the Alexandria charter, Boothe predicted "bitter reaction to the Democratic Party" in northern Virginia as a result of the Legislature's action.

The key amendment on elections was passed by the Senate yesterday after Clarke pleaded that the advisory referendum of Alexandria voters be heeded.

Senate Upheld

This is what happened today:

1. The House voted, 75-1, on Boothe's motion, to reject the Senate amendment.

2. The Senate insisted on its amendment, and a conference committee was appointed. It upheld the Senate by a 4-2 vote.

3. The Senate and House adopted the report and passed the charter bill as amended.

The House of Delegates adopted the conference report by a vote of 83 to 11 tonight, after Boothe had charged the committee's action was "a blow to democracy."

The voting board at first showed a heavy majority of red lights, indicating negative votes. They were quickly switched to green when it was explained that Boothe wanted the charter to pass, despite his protest on the Senate amendment. Otherwise, the city may not have had a charter at all.

A delegation of Alexandria officials urged that the non-partisan requirement be reinstated by the conferees. As passed the bill merely remained "silent" on how councilmen shall be chosen, whether by primaries or petition.

Vice Mayor Albert A. Smoot told the committee he spoke for the city council, all of whom opposed deletion of the clause although some were opposed to non-partisan elections.

Dr. Bruce Silcox, a member of the city charter commission, traced the history of the non-partisan election fight and recalled that the voters approved that method in an advisory referendum last year.

Others appearing in behalf of nonpartisan elections were Mrs. Martha Pfeiffer, president of the Alexandria League of Women Voters; O. Ashby Reardon, local campaign manager for Governor Battle last year; Edward S. Holland, charter commission member, and Judge Marion B. West of the city juvenile and domestic relations court.

Other legislation that beat the adjournment deadline today included:

A bill by delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, of Arlington, to bring so-called constitutional officers in Arlington under the county retirement system.

A bill by Delegate Frank P. Moncure, of Stafford, to give the town of Haymarket a new charter.

The Boothe bill to bring sewer systems under the definition of public utilities.

The Boothe bill to permit voters standing in line when polls officialy close to cast their ballot.

Prince Georges Post Sought By McCullough

Robert W. McCullough, Washington and Maryland attorney, yesterday announced his intention to seek election as State's attorney for Prince Georges County.

McCullough, 52, filed a petition of candidacy Friday for the post held by State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie since 1941, subject to the Democratic primary next September. Bowie, whose current term expires December 31, has not indicated whether he will seek re-election.

A native of Cecil County, Md., McCullough was graduated in dentistry from George Washington University and practiced for about 14 years in the District before turning to law. After receiving a law degree from National University he established law offices both here and in Prince Georges County, but has devoted most of his practice to Maryland.

He has been active in civic affairs in both the District and Maryland and is past president of the Bladensburg Democratic Club, the Prince Georges County Exchange Club, the Optimist Club, the Northeast Business Men's Association and the Federation of Business Men's Associations of the District. He is a past patron of Naomi Chapter of the Eastern Star and a member of the East Gate Lodge of Mount Rainier, the Elks and the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County.

McCullough, who lives at 4614 Addison Chapel rd., Beaver Heights, Md., is the first candidate to file for the Prince Georges County post.

Light Show Scheduled

A demonstration of modern fluorescent lighting will be presented by George Clark, New York illuminating engineer, at the District Heights (Md.) Presbyterian Church Monday at 10:30 a. m.

Arlington Board to Survey County Needs

The Arlington County board voted unanimously yesterday to undertake a study of county needs over the next 6 years in health, education, recreation and other services.

Estimates, including increased services and capital improvements, will be submitted to the board by county department heads before July 1, 1950.

The study, proposed by Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan, will include school buildings and instruction, streets, pavements and highways, playgrounds, parks, swimming pools and other recreational facilities, health and welfare facilities and services, water and sewage facilities, libraries, fire and police protection.

The board's resolution made it clear that the original estimate will be submitted to neighborhood, business and other civic groups for discussion and recommendation.

The survey was hailed as "an historic step" by Lyle Bryant, chairman of the Arlington Civic Federation's land use committee, who was present at the meeting.

Democratic board member F. Freeland Chew immediately objected: "He'd have you think that we're starting from scratch this morning. We have a lot of these long-range programs on file. Let's give credit where credit is due."

In other action yesterday the board:

1. Voted to rent 65 voting machines at a total annual cost of $10,530 for use in the August primary and election this year. Voting has previously been by ballot.

2. Approved a proposed reorganization plan for the police department which would increase present bureaus from 3 to 5 and create four new lieutenancies on the staff.

3. Approved a new method of sidewalk assessment whereby property owners would pay 100 percent of the cost of the sidewalk on a compulsory basis, with curb and gutter costs to be born entirely by the county. Previously, county and home owners have split both costs 50-50 on a voluntary basis.

4. Received a request from Arlington Hospital for $25,103.50 as reimbursement for emergency service rendered in 1949 by the hospital.

House Rejects Va. Budget

amendment to restrict the Byrd "automatic" income tax reduction plan to the next two years lost. The bill was passed by the General Assembly.

The Byrd bill would return income taxes to taxpayers on a percentage scale if revenues exceed 99 million dollars or four million dollars over the 1950-52 budget. One House amendment by J. W. Roberts, Norfolk, made the total 100 million dollars, and another was Booths proposal to limit the bill's effect to the next two years.

The Senate rejected both amendments, but a conference committee consented to the first but denied that offered by Boothe.

The joint conference committee included two Senate patrons of the Byrd bill and another Senator, who "goes along," Boothe pointed out.

"One Majority Report"

"There could not be but one majority report from the time we went in there," he declared. The outcome was a "foregone conclusion," he said.

"If this bill is as good a bill as its supporters say it is, we are going to be very quick to pass it again when we get back here in 1952," he argued in support of his two-year limitation.

"But if we accept the conference report, we may be put in the position of having to repeal the bill, and then will be put in the position of having to raise taxes."

Boothe heatedly declared that "the House takes many beatings from the Senate of Virginia."

Blow at Democracy

As "one of the toughest a man has ever had to stomach in this Legislature," he said, was the Senate's insistence on an amendment to the Alexandria charter bill leaving out the requirement of nonpartisan elections for city council.

Earlier Boothe had called this action a "blow at democracy," since the voters of Alexandria had suported nonpartisan elections in an advisory referendum last year.

Delegate W. R. Broaddus of Henry said he "resented" Boothe's "request" that the House vote to reject the report "because of the conference report on the Alexandria charter."

But Delegate J. Maynard Magruder, of Arlington, rose to a point of personal privilege and said Boothe made no such request and added that he "resented" Broaddus' attack on "my good friend and neighbor from Alexandria."

The House poll tax repealer was killed, 5 to 4, in a Senate committee today.

The decision on the last of the poll tax repeal measures before the Assembly came in the Senate committee on privileges and elections by a vote of 5 to 4.

The Senate also passed the Boatwright bill to remove the exemption of labor unions from the State anti-monopoly law. It overrode, 25 to 12, objections that the bill was "reactionary and vindicative."

British Arms Going to Egypt Seen Causing Near East War

A former member of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Palestine said last night that war in the Middle East is imminent unless the British cease sending jet planes, tanks and bombers to Egypt.

Crum

Bartley G. Crum, fresh from conversations with Israel Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion and President Chaim Weizmann said that the United States State Department could force a peace treaty with Egypt and the Arab states by pressuring British Prime Minister Bevin.

Crum, former publisher and winner of the "One World" award, has recently returned from his third postwar visit to Israel. Last night he addressed the opening session of the four-day tenth annual B'nai B'rith Women's Supreme Council at Hotel Mayflower on the problems of Israel.

He said that Britain and to a lesser extent the United States are stumbling blocks to peace in the Middle East, and attacked Secretary of State Dean Acheson for saying Arabs should be armed to act as a bulwark against communism.

Israel's boundaries will have to be enlarged, both for economic reasons and population pressure, he said, adding that an area awarded neither to Israel nor the Arab states, should be absorbed by Israel.

Mrs. Maurice Turner, past president, introduced Crum. Speeches were also made by Frank Goldman, supreme lodge president; Maurice Bisgyer, supreme lodge secretary; Mrs. Arthur G. Laufman, national director of women's activities; Mrs. Hyman C. Weisman, president, and Mrs. Lenore D. Underwood, past president.

This is AIR FRANCE

VETERANS ALL. Pilot, Co-pilot, Navigator, Flight Engineer, Radio Engineer, Two Stewards, Hostess . . . they're veterans of overwater flying. From take-off to landing your Comet is in sure, steady hands. And the service is a joy . . . willing, cheerful, expert . . . anticipating your every wish!

THE NEWEST-TYPE CONSTELLATION. Only Air France flies the very newest-type Constellation exclusively on all transatlantic flights. It's air-conditioned and sound-proofed. A French decorator created the smart salon interior. Super cruising speed and range makes possible the average non-stop flying time from New York to Paris of only 12 hours. And smooth cruising, too . . . no weather problems at Air France flight altitudes.

A KINGLY BANQUET. The dinner is inspired—400 miles long. That's how far you've flown by the time you're sipping coffee and liqueur. A refreshing aperitif announces dinner. Each course is a masterpiece—superbly prepared by famous French chefs. And the perfect touch—your choice of vintage wine or champagne!

SHEER COMFORT. Air France has an eye for comfort—your comfort. Only 32 passengers on each plane so you'll have plenty of room. And your seat—a "sky lounge"—is something different. First it's a deep club chair for sitting up—to play cards, read, chat. Then it's a "stretch-out" lounge for a nap. Just relax and wake up . . . in Paris!

G. U. Student, G-Girl Receive Fellowships

Speaker of Year

Truman Chosen by Honor Group

President Truman yesterday was honored as Speaker of the Year in the field of national affairs by Tau Kappa Alpha, national speech honor society.

Other winners:

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, in the field of business and commerce.

Johnston

Truman

Carey

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, in labor. Carey lives at 8 Hilltop rd., Silver Spring.

The Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, minister of Christ Church, New York City, in religion.

Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, in the field of educational, scientific and cultural activities.

The awards were announced yesterday at Louisville, Ky., where Tau Kappa Alpha is holding its national convention.

Rotary International is timely with its Rotary Foundation Fellowships for overseas study.

For a pretty, blonde State Department employe, her fellowship was a belated but welcome birthday gift.

For a Georgetown University graduate student, it represented the perfect wedding gift.

They are Barbara Jeanne Denning, 21, of the Chastleton Hotel, 16th and R sts. nw., and Wilbert Barnard Dubin, 23, of 1695 35th st. nw.

They were among 85 graduate students from 25 countries named yesterday to receive fellowships for overseas study in 1950-51.

The awards were made by a committee of Rotarians from Chile, England and the United States, meeting in Chicago.

The one-year grants range from $1800 to $3400 each and include round-trip passage.

Miss Denning will study Middle Eastern Affairs at the American University at Beirut in Lebanan. Dubin will attend the University of Paris to study French-American relations in the Far East.

Miss Denning did not know of the award until a Washington Post reporter telephoned her. She bubbled with happiness over the news.

The news release said Miss Denning is 21, is that right?

"Yes," she said. "Just —. My birthday was February 26."

Born in Pueblo, Colo., she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus R. Denning of Grand Junction, Colo. She was valedictorian of the Grand Junction High School class of 1945.

She was graduated from Stanford University in 1949, with a bachelor of arts degree in international relations. After graduation she became a State Department intern, training for a career post. She is taking a course at George Washington University on a scholarship.

Dubin's year in Paris will be a honeymoon, for he is to be married in June to Jacqueline Patricia Lowey of Jamaica, N. Y.

Native New Yorker

He is a native of Mount Vernon, N. Y., the son of I. A. Dubin, a retired manufacturer. He was graduated from DeWitt Clinton High School, New York, in 1943.

Dubin was graduated from the Georgetown School of Foreign Service with a B.S. degree in 1947, with an M.A. degree in 1949.

Dubin's application was sponsored by the Rotary Club of Washington.

Police Doubtful Of 'Confession' In Rape-Slaying

Omaha, March 11 (AP).—Omaha police today listened to a slim, hollow-eyed young man tell a story of raping and killing a woman in Pittsburgh last November 25, but authorities refused to put much credence in the story.

Gordon Keith Andersen, 25, insisted he is the man who slugged and raped Miss Jean Brusco, 38, within 100 yards of her home.

Andersen's surprise "confession" was made to military investigators last night. Andersen, who had identified himself as an Air Force man, had been placed in the Offutt Air Force Base hospital after swallowing razor blades in what he described as a suicide attempt. The blades were removed by surgery.

Military authorities said they were studying the possibility of charging Andersen with impersonating an airman. They said he was carrying the identification of a brother, Sergt. Vernon Andersen, of Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Charleston Bishop Rites Set Here Today

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. Russell, pastor of the Church of the Nativity, will be consecrated as the seventh bishop of Charleston, S. C. at 10 a. m. ceremonies on Tuesday at St. Matthews Cathedral, 1735 Rhode Island ave. nw.

More than 1200 prelates, priests, members of religious orders and laymen are expected to attend as the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, consecrates the new bishop in a centuries-old ritual.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, and the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington, will be co-consecrators.

A brother of Bishop-elect Russell, the Rev. William Joyce Russell, pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church in Benedict, Md., will be the assistant priest.

The new bishop's first blessing will be received by members of his immediate family. They will include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Russell, and two sisters, Miss May Russell and Mrs. Charles E. Kimmel, all of Baltimore, where the bishop-elect was born.

The sermon will be preached by the Most Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore and an old friend of Monsignor Russell.

Members of the Washington General Asembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, will form an honor guard, and a special musical program will be sung by the choir of the Theological College at Catholic University.

Non-Political Plan Proposed For Picking Education Head

A new proposal to lift the Office of United States Commissioner of Education entirely out of politics was outlined to The Washington Post yesterday by Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.).

Kearns, a member of the House Education and Labor Committee, now handling the controversial Federal aid to education bill, was the author of a resolution calling upon President Truman for assurances that if Congress passed a Federal aid bill, its administration would be left entirely to the Commissioner of Education. The President's reply, Kearns insisted, was not an adequate assurance.

Kearns suggested that the superintendents of public instruction in the 48 States select five of their outstanding members as candidates for the office of United States commissioner.

From these five, the outstanding candidate would be selected.

The name would then be submitted to the President and then to the Senate for confirmation. It should be made clear, Kearns said, that the office would be entirely free and clear of politics and that the political affiliation of the candidate thus selected would not enter the picture.

The State superintendents in making their choices would be required to poll the superintendents and supervisory principals of school districts.

The United States commissioner thus selected should be directed, Kearns said, to confer at least twice a year in convention with all heads of education in the 48 States.

Kearns proposed that the commissioner would serve four years, and that if his services were acceptable he would be eligible to succeed himself for one term only.

Selection of a U. S. Commissioner of Education by this method, Kearns explained, would be the nearest approach to an assurance that there would be no political interference with the schools.

Another advantage of this method, Kearns asserted, was that the Nation would have a chance to have the most enlightened educational leadership the entire field could offer.

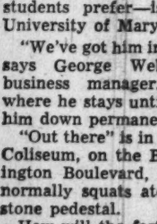
Voice of Their Turtle Stilled Temporarily by School Heads

Testudo, the University of Maryland's big bronze turtle, is missing again—but this time it's different.



The 500-pound statue of a Diamondback Terrapin is not the captive of practical jokers from George Washington University or Johns Hopkins or the University of Montana. It—or "he," as sentimental students prefer—is a captive of University of Maryland officials.

"We've got him in secret hiding," says George Weber, university business manager. "And that's where he stays until we can fasten him down permanently out there."

"Out there" is in front of Ritchie Coliseum, on the Baltimore-Washington Boulevard, where Testudo normally squats atop a brick and stone pedestal.

How will the fastening down be done? Where is the "secret hiding" place?

"No comment," says Weber. The business manager disclosed only that itinerent Testudo will be back on his base "shortly."

It has become tradition for pranksters from rival schools to kidnap the big Terp, usually just before they play Maryland in football or lacrosse, and hold him hostage until after the game.

This has happened, old timers estimate, more than 25 times since 1933, when Maryland acquired the statue as a gift from the graduating class of that year.

NCPP Urges 'Spread' Plan For Federal Work Here

Placing of Future U. S. Centers in District Outskirts Is Recommended

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A "rather large" decentralization of Government employment in the Washington area will be recommended soon by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

John Nolen, jr., planning director for the commission, said that the decentralization recommendation will appear in the first chapter of the long-awaited comprehensive plan of Washington, to be published in May.

He explained the "decentralization" idea does not involve removing offices now in Washington, but does call for putting all centers of increased Government employment in the outskirts. He said most of the centers would fall within the circle 10 miles out from the District boundaries.

Sees Population Restriction

Nolen predicted such a decentralization policy would restrict population growth to about 15 percent within the District, compared with 100 percent in the outskirts, by 1980.

He said 140,000 Government employes now work in downtown offices, and 60,000 in the outskirts, including the Pentagon.

He said the decentralization pattern calls for keeping the in-town Federal office employment stable, and allowing any expansion to take place in the outskirts.

The policy is not defined in terms of what agencies will stay in the District and what ones move out, he added.

But, said Nolen, it does have a bearing on traffic. With more centers of Government employment in the outskirts, the main future development of communities will take place there. He predicted the volume of traffic into and out of the District will grow more slowly than population. For example, he said, by 1980 there may be a 30 percent increase in traffic in the downtown section, compared with a 100 percent increase in traffic in the outskirts.

Bearing on Bridge Plans

Nolen said the picture of future decentralization in Government employment has a direct bearing on the highway and bridge plans for Greater Washington.

He pictured a "spider web" network of roads centering in Washington, and covering the area in which the future estimated expansion of Government employment will take place. In the spider web are concentric rings of main roads linked by radiating "spokes." He said future bridges should be keyed to this pattern. He declared that one reason his agency favors a Massachusetts ave. rather than an East Capitol st. bridge over the Anacostia is the belief the Massachusetts ave. bridge would best fit into the long-range metropolitan area highway plan.

Nolen estimated that by 1980 the half dozen major centers of Government employment in the outlying areas might all be doubled in size, and that a half dozen more may appear. He said the policy is based on a flexible long range plan, that will provide as much room for Government office expansion in the outskirts as it is possible to foresee, and probably more than actually will be needed

Not Increased Employment

He made clear the plan is a way to allow for what might happen in increasing Government employment, and certainly is not a recommendation for greatly increased Government employment.

Main population figures keyed to the plan, said Nolen, are the estimate that there will be two million persons in the Washington metropolitan area by 1980, compared with 1,400,000 now. He said the District population probably will grow from about 900,000 to about one million, and the suburban population double in numbers, from 500,000 to one million.

He pointed out that the peak Government employment in the Washington area during the war reached about 287,000 persons. He said the decentralization idea allows for a Washington area Government employe force of about 300,000.

Logan Circle Traffic Lane Considered

New Light Timing Seen as Aid to Flow Of Motor Vehicles

Plans to solve traffic problems at Logan Circle by cutting 13th st. through it are being considered by officials of the District and National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

District highway officials are hopeful that rearranged traffic light timing put into effect Thursday may provide a temporary solution—perhaps for three or four years.

But if it doesn't, one of three plans now being discussed by District and NCPPC staff officials may be adopted, District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said yesterday.

He listed three proposals: (1) Cut 13th st. straight through the circle and transplant the statue of Gen. John A. Logan; (2) Build two bowlegged lanes through the circle but around the statue (as at Thomas Circle); (3) As a possibility under either plan make 13th st. fork at the circle to connect with Vermont ave. on the south side.

The new traffic light arrangement moves 13th st. traffic alone while the rest stops. Before, traffic on 13th st. and Vermont ave. had moved together.

After two days' operation, highway officials were optimistic that this might solve their problem. But Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said it will be at least another week before they are sure.

Cutting through the circle, if necessary, would be a relatively inexpensive job ($30,000), but might stir up another fuss between the District and NCPPC. District highway officials want to go straight through the circle. A spokesman for NCPPC yesterday said he doubted that the commission would go along with a plan to move the statue.

Nine Injured In 5-Vehicle Road Crash

Two Buses Involved At Beltsville Curve; Girl Student Hurt In Auto Collision

Nine persons were injured when five vehicles, two of them interstate buses, collided at 3:50 p. m. yesterday at the Beltsville curve on Baltimore hwy.

The accident involved a Washington-bound Greyhound bus, a Baltimore-bound Trailways bus, two automobiles and a station wagon.

Four were treated at Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale but were not hospitalized.

Maryland State Police said Charles Talley, 32, driver of the Trailways bus, of 80 New York ave. nw., was in the northbound passing lane.

As he reached the curve, police said, Charles M. Bowman of Beltsville had stopped his station wagon to make a left turn into a filling station.

According to police this is what followed:

Talley pulled to the right to go around the station wagon. But a dump truck was at the right of the bus. Talley slammed on his brakes and the bus skidded across the slick, wet highway.

Bus Strikes Bus

The right front of the bus struck the left front of the southbound Greyhound bus, also in the passing lane, operated by Frank C. Sillex, 45.

At that moment the Greyhound bus was passing a car driven by Thomas E. Horstkamp, 29, of Baltimore. The impact threw the Greyhound bus into Horstkamp's car and both vehicles slid to the right up against a stone wall.

The Trailways bus, out of control, smashed against the station wagon driven by Bowman. Bowman's station wagon was propelled into a southbound car driven by Army Lieut. Gene W. Smith, 38, of Westwood Village, Calif.

Oddly enough, passengers in the lighter vehicles were not injured.

The Branchville rescue squad took Talley and three passengers from the two buses to the hospital. Talley was treated for scalp lacerations and released.

Others, released after treatment:

Richard Zachary, 27, of 2031 F st. nw., on the Trailways bus, lacerations and fractured toe.

Mrs. Ocie O'Meara, 65, of Silver Spring, Md., on the Trailways bus, lacerations and contusions of the chin.

Miss Josephine Hisey, 32, of 3620 S. Kemper st., Arlington, Va., on the Greyhound bus, minor lacerations and bruises.

Treated at the scene were John B. Lawrence, 45, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Earline Arnold, 35, of Baltimore, and H. B. Combs of 405 Montgomery rd., Laurel, Md., all passengers on the Trailways bus, and Sillex, the Greyhound bus driver, and one of his passengers, Dr. A. P. Badger of 1016 Dallas ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Student Hurt in Crash

Peggy P. Ashworth, 17, resident student at Mount Vernon Seminary and Junior College, 2100 Foxhall rd. nw., suffered a possible brain concussion in a collision yesterday afternoon.

Police said her cab was struck by an auto driven by Harold B. Teegarden, 55, of 1601 Argone pl. nw., lawyer for the SEC, at 17th and I sts. nw. Police gave Teegarden a ticket for passing a red light. The cab driver was Charles O. Burton, 47, of 3560 Texas ave. se. Miss Ashworth was reported to be resting comfortably at Emergency Hospital.

Geoffrey L. Gardner, 17, of 6331 Western ave. nw., suffered a cut lip and chest bruises when, police said, his auto failed to make a turn at Western ave. and Broad Branch rd. nw., and struck a tree. He was treated at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda.

Dog Shows Planned

The Potomac Boxer Club and the Capital City Cocker Club will hold specialty shows April 21 at Fort Myer for the Army Relief Society, it was announced yesterday. Entries close April 9 for the point show.

Cleveland Park Area Organizing 'Jet' Groups of Youngsters To Perform Neighborhood Good Turns on a Joint Effort Basis

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

The nature of a small boy, said Larry Conant, is this:

"He goes in spurts. He does big business today and nothing else for a week."

With this fact in mind, what is believed to be a unique organization of boys was formed yesterday in the Cleveland Park area; with a hope and a potential, though unvoiced, that it might spread across the city, or further.

It's called "Jets," which used to be airplanes but now are small boys with the motto:

"We go in spurts!!!"

Each group of three or four boys—a "jet"—will do at least one neighborhood good turn together a week—such as cleaning out a garage or basement, or raking up leaves.

Each Jet will itself try to find a neighborhood mother for its "hostess" and a dad for its "navigator."

Like cubbing and scouting the new organization—for boys about 6 to 10—has the "good turn" as a basis.

Group Projects

But whereas in those the "good turn" is an individual thing, here it will be done in groups.

"Teamwork," Conant stresses, "teaching the boys to get along with each other."

Unvoiced also, but working always somewhere in the mind of thoughtful fathers like Larry Conant when ideas like "Jets" are devised, is the increasing juvenile delinquency over the country. And particularly and most shockingly in the areas of "better" families, so-called.

Conant, who lives at 3063 Ordway st. nw. and is a branch chief in the Department of Defense, is a remarkable man.

His mother, dying when he was born in Paris, he himself had an unhappy childhood.

For Kids' Sake

He seems determined to do everything he can to avoid that for as many other children as possible.

Father of four himself, he started the "Dad-Coached Clubs," for dads to spend more time with their sons. It has gained national recognition and is going strong.

Now "Jets" comes as Conant's brainchild, with assistance from such men as Col. Leland B. Kuhre, chief of procurement division of the Corps of Engineers, who has taken a keen interest and provided many of the organization ideas.

Yesterday morning a houseful of 7 and 8-year-olds gathered with some dads at the home of Van D. Rickert, 3414 Newark st. nw., to get the thing going. Rickert also has four children and is a Western High School teacher.

Their energy threatened to blow the house apart at any moment. There were times when one felt that these were the military kind of jets ranging through the house and not the new civilian kind.

The Cooling Off

Finally, when their blood had lowered merely to the boiling point they split up into organization jets in different parts of the house.

In one room, Ordway Jet No. 1 was activated. This consists of Conant's son Spicer, 7, Dickie Pruden, 8, and Jimmie Wilner, 8. Effort is made to get each jet from the same block and school grade.

In one of his moments of jet activity recently 7-year-old Spicer himself furnished one of the basic set of ideas for the organization. Conant was discussing with him how teamwork gets going and Spicer outlined it:

"You get together . . . You think . . . You agree on something . . . You do somethin'." . . .

That really is the organization.

Maj. Barrett To Turn Over Findings to D. C. Heads

Chief's Investigation Of Altered Third Precinct Records Not Yet Complete

The District Commissioners will have the last word in the police department perjury probe.

Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett said yesterday that he will turn over to the Commissioners the results of his investigation of altered Third Precinct records and alleged perjury.

Barrett said the investigation is not yet complete and would not tell reporters when the job will be done.

Barrett said he will have no comment to make until the investigation report is in the hands of the Commissioners.

No Action Yet Taken

No police officers have yet been suspended or demoted as a result of the investigation, he said last night.

Commissioner John Russell Young was sick in bed yesterday, his wife reported, and could not come to the telephone.

Barrett revealed Wednesday that "significant" erasures had been made in the Patrol System Signal Book of the Third Precinct for January 31 after the name of Capt. Anthony Richitt. Richitt started the fireworks when he was angered by a disciplinary transfer from command of Third to the Eighth precinct. Barrett said the erasures indicated that some persons—still unidentified—perjured themselves in testimony before the House District subcommittee investigating Washington crime.

The erasures concern the whereabouts of Richitt at 8:40 a. m. January 31.

Core of Controversy

The core of the present Police Department controversy lies in that date and in when Barrett first heard that the House crime inquiry was concerned about the lack of gambling arrests in the Third and Seventh Precincts.

Richitt has testified Barrett told him about the concern on January 31, a few minutes after Richitt called his precinct from a box at 18th and L sts. nw., at 8:40 a. m. Richitt testified that he remembered the date because of a conversation he had later that day with Emmitt Warring, reputed kingpin of Washington gamblers. Warring said he had just been informed by Barrett that the committee was concerned, according to Richitt. Warring referred to Barrett as "the boss," Richitt testified.

Barrett denied telling Warring anything about the committee and said he could not have told anybody on January 31 about the crime probers' concern in the lack of gambling arrests, because he himself was not informed until February 1.

Erasure Discoveries Revealed

On Wednesday, Barrett revealed he had discovered erasures in the signal book which indicated that Richitt was actually at 20th and P sts. nw., at 8:40 a. m., January 31.

"That proves a whole lot of things," he said. "It proves some persons perjured themselves and, if they perjured themselves about that, they probably perjured themselves about other things."

Inspector Clarence E. Lutz yesterday denied that he had paid a visit to the Seventh Precinct station at 8:50 a. m. January 31 to tell Capt. Beverly C. Beach that the committee was concerned with the lack of gambling arrests in his precinct.

Lutz was asked if he and Inspector John R. Jefferies discussed the matter with Beach on that day in response to a request from Barrett.

"We may have been there at that time on that day, but it must have been pure coincidence," Lutz said. "I certainly don't recall discussing that subject with Captain Beach at that time."

Jefferies said he does not "remember being in that precinct on that day."

Lutz is known to be handling some parts of the investigation for Barrett.

Thieves Beat White House Storekeeper

Two young men who first threatened a holdup pulled a storekeeper for the White House from his auto early yesterday and beat him with their fists, he reported to police. They did not rob him, he said.

He is Melvon O. Carter, 42, of 634 31st st. se. He said he and Mrs. Carter were in their auto, which she was driving, about a block from their home, at 2:45 a. m.

An old model car carrying the two men swerved in front of them and forced her to stop, Carter said. The men alighted, approached his auto, and when he rolled a window down, one said "This is a stickup," Carter told police.

He then ran the window glass up, he said, and caught the man's hand. But when he released it, the man opened the door and pulled him out, and the two beat him.

He escaped and ran to his home, Carter said, and the men fled in their auto.

Slum Rehabilitation Report To Be Given Commissioners

A report on slum rehabilitation work here—what the needs are and how they should be met—has been drawn by District officials and is expected to go to the Commissioners in about a week.

In the making for several months, it is understood to deal primarily with plans for reclaiming run-down neighborhoods, rather than with the more costly slum clearance and new construction.

Some of the subjects it can be expected to deal with are proposals for a housing code, the Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Dwellings, and adaptation by the District of the so-called Baltimore plan.

The job of reclaiming down-at-heel areas has been proceeding at a snail's pace. District Engineer Commissioner Gordon H. Young said this has been due chiefly to lack of enforcement personnel rather than lack of adequate legislation.

He has pointed to the Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings as an example. This agency is empowered to require owners of substandard buildings to put their buildings in proper repair or tear them down.

For lack of adequate personnel to push its work, the board has on the average closed less than 100 cases annually over the past seven years, Young said. This rate, however, has been speeded up in the last few months.

A housing code defining conditions of sanitation under which persons may occupy dwellings and fixing specific responsibilities of owners and tenants has been suggested to the Commissioners.

The District has started an experiment based on the Baltimore Plan for rehabilitating run-down areas through joint government-neighborhood effort. This involves tearing down back sheds and fences to make play areas and cleaning up yards and repairing homes.

Area selected as the starting point here was that bounded by U, V, 17th sts. and Florida ave. nw.

William H. Cary, jr., director of the Health Department Bureau of Public Health Engineering said rehabilitation of the area will start with warm weather. He hopes the idea will be contagious and spread to blighted areas all over the city.

Slum Clearance Panel To Broadcast Here

Slum clearance in the District will be discussed on the "District Round Table" tonight at 10 o'clock over Stations WWDC-AM and FM.

Participating in the forum, sponsored by the junior bar section of the District Bar Association, will be Senator John D. Sparkman (D., Ala.); John Ihlder, executive director of the National Capital Housing Authority, and B. T. Fitzpatrick, deputy administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency of the Federal Security Agency.

4 Men, Woman Seized in Raid On 'Gill-Joint'

Vice squad detectives arrested four men and a woman at 1 a. m. yesterday when they raided a "gill-joint" in the basement of a home at 1719 Swann st. nw.

Henry Morgan, 52, and Richard Allen McCarthy, 23, were charged with keeping and selling whisky without a license. Their cases were continued yesterday in Municipal Court and they were released in $500 bond each. Both men live at the Swann st. address.

When detectives entered, they said, they interrupted a crap game. They charged another occupant of the house, Gertrude Lewis, 42, with setting up a gaming table. United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence continued her case until March 22 and freed her in $1000 bond.

Two other men in the place at the time of the raid were charged with disorderly conduct.

Vice squad detectives said they obtained a U. S. Commissioner's warrant to make the raid after an undercover man had purchased whisky at the place.

Liquor Curfew Extension Bill Among 7 Slated for D. C. Day

A bill to permit District establishments holding liquor licenses to remain open until 2 a. m. Sunday mornings will come up Monday in the House of Representatives on its semimonthly District Day.

The bill is one of seven measures slated to be considered. Its author is Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.). Representative Olin Teague (D., Tex.), a member of the special subcommittee now investigating crime in the District hailed it yesterday as a probable aid in cleaning up the all-night bottle club situation here.

Licensed places now must close at midnight on Saturday nights.

Other bills scheduled for District Day consideration would:

Authorize the Commissioners to enter into contracts for removal of sludge deposited from sewage treatment.

Tighten up Alcoholic Beverage Control Board powers by requiring revocation of any liquor licenses held by persons convicted of a felony.

Allow credit unions in the District to make unsecured loans up to $300 instead of the present limit of $50.

Permit the Commissioners to enter into mutual agreements with neighboring communities for mutual aid and protection of firemen who are injured fighting blazes outside their regular jurisdictions.

Set up a new agency in the District for purchase of surplus property on behalf of educational institutions.

Require practicing physicians in the District to be citizens of the United States.

At 10 a. m., Tuesday, a House District Subcommittee will hold a hearing on the dispute over the location of a proposed new bridge across the Anacostia River, whether to place it at E. Capitol st., or at Massachusetts ave.

And at 10 a. m., Tuesday, the Senate District Committee will begin hearings on the District's 1951 budget. School officials are expected to be the first to testify.

Balking Barrier Bars Motorists' Bridge Progress

The South Capitol St. Bridge roadway barrier—which prevents cars from running into the river when the bridge is open—worked too well yesterday.

When the swing span was closed after letting a ship through, the mechanism stuck and the barrier wouldn't go down. Traffic was held up about 20 minutes while workmen lowered it by hand.

Engineer Harry R. Howser said the trouble was a tight bearing which has now been adjusted. There was no difficulty with the bridge itself, he said, such as occurred one cold morning last month when a switch box froze up and the span wouldn't close.

18 D. C. Schools To Take Part in Legion Contest

Pupils of 18 District schools have entered the American Legion's thirteenth annual national oratorical contest and will complete preliminary contests this week.

Local entries, according to Joseph A. Walker, general chairman for the District contest, include representatives of junior and senior public high schools, private, parochial and vocational schools. Winners of the intraschool tests will be grouped in a series of four semifinals to select contestants for the District finals March 31.

Area winners will compete in a series of eliminations leading to the national finals at Phoenix, Ariz., on April 17. The contest is sponsored locally by the District Department of the American Legion.

Baby Girl Dies Of Choking Spell Despite First Aid

Despite efforts of Fire Rescue Squad No. 2, and an ambulance physician, a 4-month-old girl died last night, apparently from choking on orange juice.

Police said the infant, Eileen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Kelly, 880 Hemlock st. nw., was being fed about 6 p. m., by her mother. The baby began to choke police were told, and became unconscious.

Rescue Squad men administered oxygen at the home and in an ambulance on the way to Emergency Hospital, but it was unavailing. The baby was pronounced dead at the hospital at 6:35 p. m.

D. C. Man Dies In Stabbing; Friend Held

Charles Linton, 27, of 1637 Vermont ave. nw., was fatally stabbed early yesterday while attending a party at a house in the 600 block of T st. nw.

David Rogers, 27, of 7 New York ave. nw., was charged with the murder. Police said Rogers admitted stabbing Linton and told them he and Linton had argued over "drinking and women."

Linton staggered from the house after the stabbing and was found by two passersby a short distance away, at Wiltberger and T sts. nw. They placed him a cab and took him to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died at 12:40 a. m.

U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence held Rogers without bond and continued his hearing until March 22. There will be a coroner's inquest at 11:30 a. m. Monday.

Business Men to Meet

Home for Aged Gets Cabinet in Honor of Wolpes

A memorial cabinet in honor of Meyer Aaron and Sarah Rebecca Wolpe and two of their children, Harry Jacob Wolpe and Nettie Deborah Kobin, will be dedicated at the Hebrew Home for the Aged tonight.

The dedication will be at 7:30 p. m. with Rabbi Solomon Metz as guest speaker.

The cabinet was given by Ellis Wolpe and his four sisters in memory of their parents, brother and sister. The four sisters are Mrs. Paul Eanet, Mrs. Samuel Weisberg, Mrs. Ben Reinkel and Mrs. Herman Fenischel.

Wolpe is head of the Wolpe Paper Co. and a member of the home's board of directors.

Brock Pemberton, Stage Figure, Dies

New York, March 11 (AP).—Brock Pemberton, 64-year-old theatrical producer who brought "Harvey" to Broadway, died today.

Mr. Pemberton

Mr. Pemberton succumbed to a heart attack at his home after suffering from heart trouble for several years.

He just had returned from a southwestern trip during which he appeared in Phoenix, Ariz., in the leading role of "Harvey." Mary Chase's hit comedy about an invisible white rabbit 6-feet tall.

Among actors he introduced are Walter Huston, Miriam Hopkins, Claudette Colbert, Fredric March, and—in "Harvey"—Frank Fay.

His widow, the former Margaret McCoy of East Orange, N. J., did the costuming for most of her husband's productions.

J. R. Kuncis Dies; Medical Illustrator

Funeral services will be held here Monday for James Reed Kuncis, promising art specialist in brain drawings, who died Friday after his seventh brain operation.

Mr. Kuncis

Services will be at 10 a. m. at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw., with interment at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

The student specialist in medical drawings succumbed at Doctors Hospital just one month before his twenty-first birthday. He had suffered a brain injury 18 years ago when struck with a stone by a playmate, according to his mother, Mrs. Ethel M. Kuncis, of 316 Channing st. ne.

Mrs. Kuncis, a draftsman with the Census Bureau, said her son had delayed his last operation for several months to attend the wedding of his sister, on February 17. He had hoped to return to school, and study medical art at Georgetown University.

Born at Boulder, Colo., young Kuncis came to Washington with his family in 1942. He attended McKinley High School and Chamberlain Vocational High School, and was a member of the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church.

Since last April, when he left his job as a copy boy with the Times-Herald, he specialized in medical drawings for physicians.

He leaves his mother; the married sister, Mrs. Donald P. Easter, and a brother, Willard A. Kuncis, all of this city.

W. F. Carlin, Real Estate Man, Dies

William F. Carlin, 60, well-known real estate and insurance man, died early yesterday at his home, 834 Sligo ave., Silver Spring. Death was due to a heart ailment, aggravated by a recent attack of influenza.

Mr. Carlin

Born in Peabody, Mass., where he served as postal inspector for several years before establishing a real estate and insurance business, Mr. Carlin had lived in Silver Spring for about 17 years. He was a Navy veteran of World War I, serving as an enlisted man in Naval Intelligence throughout hostilities.

In 1946, Mr. Carlin was an unsuccessful candidate for Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives from the Sixth Maryland District, losing the party primary to Sports Commentator Arch McDonald.

Mr. Carlin was a charter member of the Silver Spring Businessmen's Association, which later became the Silver Spring Board of Trade. During World War II, he helped organize and was president of the Veterans Service Aid Council for Eastern Montgomery County.

He also was a member of the American Legion, the Knights of Columbus and the Elks.

He is survvied by his wife, Mrs. Helen Frances Carlin; three brothers, Timothy of Newton, Mass.; Chester of Peabody, Mass., and George of Beverly, Mass., and five sisters, Miss Jennie Carlin, Miss Nellie Carlin and Mrs. Catherine Sheehy, all of Peabody; Mrs. William Carney, Somerville, Mass., and Mrs. Edward Sherlock, Watertown, Mass.

Solemn requiem mass will be celebrated Tuesday morning at St. John's Catholic Church in Peabody, with burial in St. Mary's Cemetery, Salem, Mass.

Restaurateur Aman Dies Here at 82

Sebastian Aman, 82, retired owner-manager of a 9th st. restaurant which was well known to Washingtonians from the 1850's to the first World War, died Friday at Garfield Hospital.

Mr. Aman

Mr. Aman had suffered a stroke at his home, 1412 Webster st. nw.

In 1903 he purchased Aman's restaurant at 316 9th st. nw., just north of D st., from his uncle, who had founded it in the mid-nineteenth century, and after whom the eating place was named.

Many famous Washingtonians dined there. In 1917, Mr. Aman sold the business and retired, though he continued to own the building.

A lifelong resident of the Washington area, Mr. Aman was born in College Park, Md. His parents, Joseph A. and Catherine Aman, moved to Hyattsville, Md., shortly after his birth, becoming one of the first families to settle there.

In 1880, he moved to Washington to live with his uncle, and later was employed by him in the restaurant which he was to purchase. After selling it, Mr. Aman was associated with the Raleigh Hotel and Lee House.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Monday, followed by a requiem mass at 10 a. m. at the Sacred Heart Church, 16th st. and Park rd. nw. Burial will be in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Helen Lyston, whom he married in 1904. He is also survived by a nephew, George Aman, operator of the Prince Georges County Post in Hyattsville.

Service Families Get Red Cross Aid

For her each night is a night of terror.

Each slight sound sets her heart to beating frantically and a tremor of fear shakes her body.

What will he do?

Her case is not a simple one. Her husband came home from the war a neuropsychiatric patient. He was removed to a veterans hospital after he threatened her life. Now he is home again on a trial basis.

But the wife still fears him. She lies awake at night . . . listening . . . and trembling.

Case for Red Cross

Just one of many cases that confront the Red Cross Home Service, cases involving veterans, servicemen, or the families of veterans, servicemen or deceased servicemen.

Home service workers concerned with the welfare of service-connected often find themselves counseling on domestic problems as well as those dealing with food, clothing, shelter and other tangible aid.

The home service of the six Metropolitan Washington Red Cross chapters, now engaged in a campaign to raise $1,039,000 to carry on the many Red Cross services, spent $237,000 last year.

The Home Service of the six Metropolitan Washington Red Cross chapters, now engaged in a campaign to raise $1,039,000 to carry on the many Red Cross services, spent $237,000 last year.

Of this, $115,000 was in direct financial assistance to 2600 service-connected families and individuals. Through many types of service, it provided help for some 27,000 military personnel, veterans and their families.

While about 10 percent of the help given by the District Red Cross Home Service is in direct financial aid, the many other types of assistance include counsel and guidance, the verification of military leaves, help on emergency furloughs, and giving a sympathetic ear and making an honest effort to help on many other types of problems.

Marriages battered into poor shadows of former romantic dreams by the war and its aftermath are a big concern of the local Red Cross.

He'll Be Well Again

And what of the wife who lies awake at night, who fears her husband. She still looks to a future in which her husband will be well again.

It's difficult now. She rises at 5 o'clock in the morning, cleans her house, takes her three small children to a day nursery and goes to work.

At the end of the day, she takes her children home, prepares the family dinner, sews, washes and irons to keep the family neat, and manages to get four or five hours sleep.

"How long she can keep this up we can't say, for her health is not too good and she is wearing herself out," the Red Cross case worker observes.

Family Kept Intact

Hours of work with this couple, helping them fill in forms and papers when the husband entered the hospital, planning a budget, visiting in the home and going over special problems, have helped keep up the spirits of the young wife and made it possible for the family group to remain intact.

Then, there's another home: "I tried to be everything a good wife should be while my husband was away at war," explained the wife. But, when her husband returned, he didn't "seem happy at home anymore."

After being free for many months, he liked freedom. But he admitted he still wanted a home, his wife and children. Home Service is trying to help him adjust himself back to his original family and home situation.

The wife also has a physical disability and Home Service has helped her arrange for medical care.

She Became a Fantasy

Mrs. Ruth B. Davies, District Red Cross case supervisor, has a theory about such cases, that when a man goes away to war, leaving behind a wife, he misses her so that in remembering and dreaming of her she becomes a sort of fantasy wife.

"He forgets her faults," Mrs. Davies reasons, "and remembers her as a creature of perfection, and when he sees her again he is disillusioned. His daydream wife was a composite of all the perfections of womanhood, while his real mate is only human, after all.

"The chances are that while the husband was away at war, she got gray hairs and wrinkles worrying about him and the problems he left with her."

There is another wife whose husband is in a veterans' mental hospital. She fears him and dreads his return home. She has received word he will soon be leaving the institution.

Feeling of Insecurity.

In another case, the serviceman's wife and daughter have never been able to live more than a few months in any one place and have little feeling of security and no system of planning for the future.

In the last seven years, her husband has never lived at home and the marriage has been carried on through correspondence and occasional visits. To the resulting emotional upsets are added financial and physical difficulties.

"Occasionally," says Miss Eulene Hawkins, director of Home Service, "we have a case that gives us all pleasure. Those, of course, are the ones with happy endings."

She recalled the young husband who came into Home Service looking very much the cowboy, boots and all.

Make Them Happy

"He was untidy and unhappy," recalls Miss Hawkins, "and he asked to borrow $2 so he could take his wife to dinner and discuss their marital problems. She, in her late teens, was living with her family and expecting a baby. He had just received a discharge from service and had been unable to find a job."

The husband had been unsuccessfully trying to persuade his wife to return with him to his native Western State. She feared she would not be accepted in a strange community. But Home Service workers convinced her that was the wisest course.

The Red Cross provided transportation for the young couple to the Western State.

"When we saw them just before they left," said Miss Hawkins, "their faces were happy, and it made us happy, too."

Nurse Service Founder to Be Honored Today

A public observance of Jane Delano Day, honoring the founder of the Red Cross Nursing Service, will be held here today for the first time since World War II.

Renewal of the annual tribute to Miss Delano will be marked by a special program at 4 p. m. in the garden of Red Cross National Headquarters on 17th st. between D and E sts., nw., under sponsorship of the District Red Cross Nursing Service.

Among program highlights will be a wreath-laying ceremony at the foot of the Jane Delano statue. The wreath, honoring the memory of Miss Delano and all nurses who died in two world wars, will be placed by Miss Pearl McIver, president of the American Nurses Association, assisted by Miss Virginia Underwood, a registered nurse.

Among other participants in the program will be Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University; the Rev. Joseph B. McAllister, a member of the faculty of Catholic University; Dr. Hymen Ezra Cohen, president of the Washington Board of Rabbis; Sergt. Harold Copenhaven, of the Air Force Band's "singing sergeants," and the Freedman's Hospital student nurse chorus.

During the program, badges will be presented to several nurses who have served the Red Cross in disaster and other emergency work in the Washington area in recent months.

Meanwhile, the District Red Cross Chapter announced its next campaign report luncheon will be held Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. at the United States Chamber of Commerce. Contributions to the current drive on Friday totaled $279,394, or 26 percent of the $1,039,000 quota.

Cancer Search Grant Given To Georgetown

Two public Health Service grants totaling $9900 for continuing laboratory and clinical cancer research have been awarded two Washington institutions.

The grants, $5400 to the Army Registry of Pathology here and $4500 to Georgetown University School of Medicine, were announced last night by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

On a Nation-wide basis, PHS grants announced last night totaled $863,496 for non-Federal institutions engaged in cancer research. All are for continuation of previously supported projects, said PHS Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele.

Included in the grants were funds totaling $48,156 to continue support of three research projects at Johns Hopkins University and its School of Medicine, Baltimore. Another grant, of $10,000, was awarded the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.

Scouts Will Show You a Few Tricks Here Friday

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON—Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, the President's personal physician, with his son, Wallace, a Boy Scout, are introduced to Irish Orchard, the horse, by Col. Daniel Boone 6th, and his son, Daniel 7th, also a Boy Scout. Irish Orchard, a hunter and jumper, will appear in the Scouting exposition at the National Guard Armory, Friday and Saturday

By Sy Fishbein

A Scout keeps himself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

A Scout can make mothballs dance.

A Scout can make sirloins melt in your mouth.

A Scout can bridge a river without getting wet.

A Scout can dance like an Indian.

A Scout can build a 30-foot tower in 25 minutes.

A Scout can do most anything and some 5000 of them are setting out to prove it this Friday and Saturday in the National Guard Armory.

250 Units to Participate

From all over the Washington area they'll come, Cub Packs, Scout Troops and Explorer Posts totaling 250 units, each bursting with special skills they've been priming for months for the big Scouting Exposition.

Out in Four Corners, Md., for instance, Scout Troop 24 has been warming up to Irish Orchid, a thoroughbred dapple gray hunter and jumper which they'll proudly display at the Armory.

To match a thoroughbred horse, Troop 24 has a thoroughbred instructor, Col. Daniel F. Boone, 6th, a direct descendant of the legendary pioneer scout.

The colonel, a former member of the Fort Myer horse show team, has taught the boys everything from hoof to mane about Irish Orchid in the time he could spare from his law practice in Washington.

Boones Still Scouting

The scouting tradition still flourishes among the Boones. Danny Boone, 7th, age 14, is senior patrol leader of Troop 24. Another of Irish Orchid's "grooms" is 11-year-old Wallace Graham, the son of Gen. Wallace H. Graham, President Truman's personal physician.

Ever tried cooking a steak in aluminum foil? Well, David H. McGinnis, a counselor at the Industrial Home School for Boys, who taught Troop 31 all about it, says it's THE way to do it.

Troop 31, made up of boys from the Industrial Home School, will be passing out their delicacy—in reasonable chunks—at the Armory show. Just follow the savory smell.

In Beverly Hills, Alexandria, George M. Hope 3d, of 1601 Preston rd., has been regimenting his young Cub Scouts of Pack 113 for their booth in the show. Hope has worked up a furniture production line and expects his boys to knock together more than 100 pieces of furniture during the show.

From College Park, Md., the Explorers, older boys from 14 to 18, of Post 228, will bring to the Armory a batch of poles and a knack of lashing the poles into a 30-foot-signal tower in 23 minutes.

In Greenbelt, Md., Ernest M. Townshend, an automotive inspector at Fort Myer, and his proteges of Explorer Post 229, have learned how to build a bridge across a river without wetting a toe. They'll build the bridge at the Armory, without a river.

Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court is exposition chairman. William Armstrong is executive chairman.

Capt. Gillett Takes Command At U. S. Naval Medical Center

Capt. Robert M. Gillett, MC, USN, has assumed command of the Naval Hospital, United States Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., it was announced yesterday.

He succeeds Capt. Frederick C. Greaves, recently made rear admiral, who has been made assistant Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

A veteran of 27 years' service, Captain Gillett was transferred to Bethesda from the Naval Hospital, Chelsea, Mass. He is married and has one son, Robert, jr., and a married daughter.

During World War II, he served on the staff of the Commander of Amphibious Forces of the Pacific. He participated in five major operations and was awarded the Legion of Merit. In addition, he wears ribbons for: Navy Unit Commendation, American Defense; Yangtze Valley; Asiatic-Pacific, with Silver Star, as well as World War I and II ribbons.

He was born February 4, 1896, at Clarion, Iowa, and graduated from the University of Iowa as a doctor of medicine in 1920.

800 Teachers Urge U. S. Aid to Schools

Eight hundred teachers from 10 States and the District last night demanded Federal aid to education without Federal control of the schools.

The action was taken toward the end of a two-day meeting in the Shoreham Hotel of the Northeastern Regional Conference of the Department of Classroom Teachers of the National Education Association.

A copy of the resolution was sent to each member of the House Education and Labor Committee which is expected to vote sometime this week on a bill providing Federal aid to education.

Philip Wardner, national president of the NEA's Department of Classroom Teachers, foresaw a decline in this country's status as a world power unless its educational system is improved.

"Deterioration in the Nation's schools shows up on every hand," Wardner declared in a report to the meeting on condition he had witnessed during a seven-month tour of the Nation's schools.

Dr. Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the NEA, told the group that he had found some countries 85 percent illiterate in a tour around the world last summer.

The United States cannot prosper and live the way it wants to in a world of that kind, Dr. Givens said. The human material is equal to that of the United States, he added, but the people in countries with a low standard of living need "a little money, lots of encouragement and some leadership."

Dr. Givens said Communist propaganda which imputes selfish motives to this country's aid programs is working. "It is claimed that we are discouraging competition and undermining their production and that financial aid is only a prelude to political domination," he said.

Dr. Givens visited 22 countries as a member of the Town Meeting of the Air World Seminar.

County to Pay

Cherry Tree Damages Cost $750

The Arlington County Board agreed yesterday to pay $750 damages to the owner of a sweet cherry tree whose roots were cut seven years ago when the County built a sidewalk near it.

The damages were included in the $1250 total sum the board agreed to pay to Mrs. Bessie C. Summers, of 1204 N. Vernon st., Arlington for a strip of her land used in widening N. Washington blvd.

Remainder of the sum covered the value of the 6 by 125 foot strip of ground, plus damages to a row of peonies and assorted shrubbery.

The board granted full damages asked by Mrs. Summers after it heard her husband, Lewis Summers, describe the 85-foot tree as a shadow of its former self, which has virtually ceased to bear fruit.

"It was the prettiest tree," said Summers, who displayed a picture of it in its former glory. "People stopped to take pictures of it."

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Paul Brown defended the county's original $850 offer for ground and damages.

Ober Act Goes Into Effect as Reds Object

Annapolis, Md., March 11 (AP).—The Ober law against subversives went into effect technically today accompanied by a renewed effort of the Communist Party to have the State Court of Appeals rule on its constitutionality.

Communist Party State officers asked the court to hear them again because they were denied "the equal protection of the laws."

The court on February 9 reinstated the law by reversing Circuit Judge Joseph Sherbow of Baltimore who had declared it unconstitutional. Judge Sherbow's decision was on suits by the Communist Party and a citizens group. It was appealed by the State and the citizens group in turn has asked the United States Supreme Court to review the State Court of Appeals action.

The mandate of the State court was mailed today, in effect putting the law in force.

Conviction in Extortion

Houston, March 11 (AP).—Raymond Chambers, former deputy sheriff, was convicted today by a Federal jury of attempting to extort $50,000 from oilman McCarthy September 30. Chambers will be sentenced Thursday.

300,000 to Take Part in Summer Guard Maneuvers

Some 300,000 National Guardmen will stage mock war maneuvers across the Nation this summer, in the biggest peacetime field encampment in Guard history.

The Department of Defense said yesterday the Guardmen—described as "the best equipped National Guard in history"—will use the latest types of weapons in their two-week training periods in 37 States and Federal camps.

Altogether, they will make up 27 infantry and armored divisions training as complete organizations.

The Department said the scheduled program "assures progress toward attainment of M-Day readiness." M-Day is Mobilization Day.

Training will be under supervision of Regular Army instructors and the Guard's own officers. All 48 States, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia will be represented.

Truman Tops Missouri List At Concert

By Paul Hume

President Truman attended a strictly non-political gathering last night in Constitution Hall.

He and Mrs. Truman together with Washington's most prominent Missourians, gathered to hear the first local concert by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra under Vladimir Golschmann.

Golschmann

For his eastern tour, Golschmann chose a brilliant program on the lighter side. Gretry's ballet music from Cephale and Procris in the customary Mottl version, was a dashing curtain-raiser. It was followed by the second symphony of Rachmaninoff.

This luxurious Russian writing had a highly successful account. At its close the audience broke into cheers. Their cheers had much justice.

Golschmann builds the music to an exhilarating climax, with sure command of its theatrical style. For the most part the orchestra sounds well in sonorous writing. The strings, chiefly the violins, have a tone that ranges from noble to something a bit on the less refined side.

The brass handles climaxes easily but with a two-brash quality. There was an unfortunately-placed tuba which intruded many times. In fact, the hall posed several problems. There was often the feeling the players simply were not together.

This may well be due to the stage where it is hard for one side of the orchestra to hear the other. In any case, there were moments both in Rachmaninoff and at the close, in Manuel de Falla's Three-Cornered Hat dances, when the orchestra was in two halves. At other times the quiet playing was miraculous in effect.

In Debussy's "Faun" and the Walk to the Paradise Gardens by Delius, the pianissimo from the entire body of musicians was moving. Their greatest asset is a wide range of dynamics and color.

Against these stands Golschmann's tendency to rush such quiet moods as the opening of the Delius and the latter half of the Debussy.

A solid transcription of the Vitali Chaconne opened the second half of the program. Heifetz will play it in its proper form next Tuesday night. St. Louis can be proud of its own symphony orchestra. But why did our Midwestern visitors bring no American music—particularly to such a Washington audience?

Group Plans Dance

Aviva Business and Professional Hadasah will sponsor a dance and free fortune telling at the New Colonial Hotel, 15th and M sts. nw., from 8 to 12 o'clock this evening. Proceeds will go for the organization's projects.

Republican Rivals Disagree In Debate on Home Rule

Two prominent District Republicans last night disagreed on the merits of the Kefauver District home rule bill.

Harry N. Stull was for the bill because it will give District residents "the right to choose our own officials."

But not Edward F. Colladay. He charged the bill offers "bogus home rule."

Stull and Colladay, both former presidents of the Federation of Citizens Associations, debated the issues in a WRC broadcast sponsored by the District Republican State Committee.

Moderator was Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee.

Stull pointed out that the Republican platform adopted at the 1948 national convention indorsed home rule for the District.

"We are asking for nothing more than our constitutional heritage," said Stull, "the right to choose our own officials."

In closing, he added:

"Anyone who thinks we have a model form of government here has simply not been reading the newspapers."

Colladay pointed out the city council would consist of nine members elected by the District voters and two appointed by the President.

"The two appointees," he declared, "would largely dominate the council because of their influence at the White House."

Colladay urged instead, District representation in Congress.

Father Rules Out 'Mercy Death' Idea For Siamese Twins

Wynyard, Tasmania, March 11 (U.P.).—Erskine (Oscar) Smith today said he would not consent to the "mercy killing" of the Siamese twins that were born to his wife a week ago.

Smith, a 42-year-old woodcutter, said he would not allow euthanasia, even if it were possible legally.

His wife, Myrtle, said, "If they have to stay as they are, I will always treasure them."

Smith, under tremendous emotional pressure, had changed his mind since yesterday, when he told reporters he didn't want the blue-eyed twins to grow up if they could not be separated. He said he prayed every night that doctors could operate in an attempt to separate Kathleen Rose and Lexie Irene, who were born linked at the forehead and at the back of the cranium.

Okla. Preacher Switches to GOP

Oklahoma City, March 11 (AP).—The Rev. William H. Alexander, candidate for the United States Senate from Oklahoma, tonight switched from the Democratic Party to the Republican Party.

Alexander told a news conference the Republican Party is "the only available agency through which true Americans—Democrats and Republicans can speak freely against the tyranny that threatens to destroy the freedom of the common man."

Alexander announced for office recently at a service of the Oklahoma City First Christian Church. He made no references to politics in that statement, but told newsmen then he was a Democrat.

Festival Won't Wait For Cherry Blooms

Frequent query to Washington newspapers these days: When will the cherry blossoms bloom?

Answer: After two to three weeks of warm weather.

Here's what it will take for the blossoms to come out, as laid down yesterday by Edward Kelly, assistant to the superintendent of National Capital Parks:

First, a week of mild weather so that the buds will begin to swell.

Then, between another week and two weeks of nice warm weather, depending on how warm, before the "swellings" turn into blooms.

One big question is whether the blossoms will be out in time for the Cherry Blossom Festival March 31, April 1 and 2.

On the basis of the last U. S. Weather Bureau extended forecast, made by Forecaster Jerome Namias, the chances for it are by no means positive.

That forecast for March, made on the last day of February, called for temperatures substantially below normal for the month.

A warm rain could soften up the ground and help start the swelling process, Kelly said. Of course the warm weather would have to follow to complete it.

Kelly was unsure whether to call yesterday a "warm rain" or not. He'llhav e to see the effects on the buds first.

Normal life of the blossoms is only five days.

But with a dose of a hormone spray they last 10 to 15 days.

The original trees were given by the city of Tokyo in December 1912—the first batch from the city really came in 1910 but these were ordered destroyed because of a fungus.

Replacements have been provided through propagation of the original trees.

As to the festival, it will be unfolded this year at the Watergate instead of the Sylvan Theater.

There'll be a queen naturally. The festival has an unusual way of choosing this beauty. Each State and three territories select a princess. After that the queen is picked by what at least is a simple method: Spinning what the releases call "the giant wheel of fortune."

She'll be crowned at the pageant, which will have two showings at the Watergate: 2 p. m. Saturday, April 1, preceded by an hour's Navy Band concert, and 2:30 p. m. Sunday, April 2. Saturday and Sunday nights there'll be a water show with the Marine Corps Band playing. Giant floodlights will play on the cherry blossoms by night.

The afternoon pageant will go under the title of "Spring Is a Wonderful Thing," and Marion Venable's "Ballet Soiree" will again be in action on the festival stage.

Cafritz Named Co-Leader in Jewish Drive

Morris Cafritz, head of the Cafritz Construction Co., of Washington, has been named national co-chairman of the real estate division of the United Jewish Appeal's 1950 campaign, it was announced yesterday.

Cafritz

The Washington business leader will serve with Benjamin H. Swig, San Francisco, Calif., hotel executive, and Jack D. Weiler of the J. D. Weiler Co. of New York.

Cafritz was president of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater Washington in 1948. He was the first president of the Washington Jewish Welfare Fund and an organizer of the Community Chest. He is director of the District chapter of the Red Cross.

Accepting his appointment, Cafritz said: "One of the most important services which businessmen can render to America is to nurture and help develop Israel as an ally of the democratic forces of the world."

Exaggeration of Government Economies Called Misleading

A man who is helping President Truman to reorganize the executive branch of the Government warned yesterday that it is easy to exaggerate the economies that can be made immediately through this work.

The warning was voiced by Thomas A. Morgan, chairman of the board of the Sperry Sorp. and head of the President's Advisory Committee on Management Improvement.

Morgan was describing his committee's efforts to help the President put into practice some of the Hoover Commission recommendations for Government reorganization.

He said statements about the number of billions that can be saved immediately "are likely to mislead the public into expecting too much." The danger, he said, is that the public will distrust the Government "if they get less, or don't get it right away."

Morgan, the luncheon speaker at yesterday's session of the American Society for Public Administration, said his committee had spent most of its time thus far in hearings on the work of the Budget Bureau and other parts of the Executive Office, the Civil Service Commission and the General Services Administration.

The committee has also reviewed the Joint Accounting Project, the White House office, National Security Council and the National Security Resources Board, Morgan said.

The problem of organizing Government is quite different from that encountered in any business, no matter how large, due to pressure from "organized minorities." Decisions involving drastic changes in Government may involve long delay in obtaining agreement of groups opposed to the changes, he added.

The society will conclude its three-day meeting at the Hotel Statler today with two sessions.

Bethesda Boy Made 'Delegates Speaker'

A Bethesda youth was elected speaker of the House of Delegates in the Maryland Boys' Legislature at a prelegislative conference yesterday.

The conference took place at the University of Maryland and included nearly 150 youths who will sit in the State Capitol at Annapolis in the mock legislative session April 13, 14 and 15.

The event is sponsored by the YMCA and the youths are members of Hi-Y clubs, which are YMCA organizations in high schools.

The boy elected speaker is George W. Brewster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon H. Brewster, 4 Burning Tree court, Bethesda. He is president of the senior class at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, past president of the Hi-Y council.

Others elected are John Diuguid, Cumberland, governor; C. Edward Walter, Frederick, president of the Senate; Ralph J. Thuss, jr., Baltimore, clerk of the Senate; Donald E. Humphries, Baltimore, clerk of the House; Donald Rigby, Baltimore, chaplain of the Senate, and James A. Clinton, jr., Hagerstown, chaplain of the House.

Among speakers yesterday were Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university; Dr. J. Carey [illegible], faculty member; Dr. Carl Everstine of Baltimore, assistant director of the Legislative Reference Bureau, and Charles E. Moylan, jr., of Baltimore, who was governor at the 1949 session of the Boys' Legislature.

Fighting Ends Session Of Korean Assembly

Seoul, March 11 (AP).—Fisticuffs and shouted arguments today broke up a session of the Korean National Assembly. The issue is whether the assembly or President Rhee shall control the cabinet.

Assembly Vice Chairman Kim Dong Won banged out adjournment two hours ahead of schedule when Kim Chai Hak twice struck Chin Hun Sik. Kim Chai Hak favors a constitutional amendment that would place the cabinet under the assembly. Chin Hun Sik opposes it.

Some assemblymen threw their desk name markers—foot-high lacquered pyramids.

New Indonesian Coat of Arms Resembles That of U. S. A.

Adoption of a national coat of arms for the United States of Indonesia remarkably like that of the United States was announced yesterday by the Indonesian representatives here.

The central figure, as on the United States coat of arms, is an eagle with outsretched wings and facing to its right. The Indonesian eagle is the legendary "garuda," symbol of awakened strength and high idealism. Each wing has 17 feathers to commemorate August 17, 1945, when the Indonesian Republic was proclaimed, and its tail has eight feathers in commemoration of August, 1945, as the eighth month.

In the garuda's claws is a scroll bearing the words "Bhinneka tunggal inka," the slogan of the Thirteenth Century Indonesian poet Empu Tantular. The words are translated as "Many remain one," again strikingly similar to the United States motto, "E Pluribus Unum," one out of many.

On a shield suspended by a chain about the garuda's neck are five symbols representing the five principles of "pantja-sila," the concept upon which the Indonesian people established their independence from European domination. The shield and chain themselves represent the struggle for freedom.

The five symbols are a star in the center, representing divine omnipotence; a circular steel chain, representing humanity; the banyan tree, representing national consciousness; the head of a wild bull, representing democracy; and rice and cotton stalks, representing social justice. Across the center of the shield a horizontal line symbolizes the equator, which touches several of the Indonesian islands.

The large garuda is colored gold and the shield is red and white, the Indonesian national colors.

D. C. Infantile Paralysis Unit to Get Iron Lung

An iron lung and respirator will be presented to the District Chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, by the District Department of the American Legion on Saturday, March 18.

Presentation ceremonies are slated at 9:30 a. m. at Gallinger Hospital, with Charles K. Dunn, District department commander of the Legion, officiating. The lung will be placed in a pool maintained by the local polio unit for emergency use at hospitals throughout the city.

New Radar Devices To Aid Air Safety

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has just taken a $4,210,750 step, the biggest in its history, toward increased air navigation safety.

The CAA bought 450 new radar-type devices which will advise pilots continuously how far their planes are from where they want to go. The device is formally called Distance Measuring Equipment (DME).

DME works its magic with radio pulses, using the same principle upon which radar operates. It consists of a set at a ground radio range station and a set in the airplane, using frequencies in the 1000-megacycle range, way above the very high frequency range.

When tuned in, the plane's radar will send out coded pulses to the ground station set which will trigger off a much stronger set of pulses in reply.

Schooled in the higher mathematics, the DME will divide the rate of speed of the radar (186,000 miles per second) by the time it takes the pulses to make the round trip.

The answer will come out in miles on a cockpit dial. As the plane gets closer to the station, the figure in the dial will get smaller, just like an automobile mileage meter running in reverse.

The airborne unit will weigh about 50 pounds and at its present stage of development is probably too expensive for most private plane operators. Much of the early testing and development was performed with experimental units at National Airport here.

The 450 DME units just ordered will be produced by the Hazeltine Electronics Corp., Little Neck, L. I., which was a major supplier of electronics equipment during the war.

The contract calls for the first unit to be delivered in November, 1950, with production growing to 40 per month by June, 1951. Each ground unit will be able to handle 80 aircraft at the same time, according to C. F. Horne, acting director of the Office of Federal Airways.

CAA plans call for the DME to be combined with the new omni-directional radio ranges, 300 of which are already in operation.

The omni-range will eventually replace the current four-course radio which it beats all hollow for telling pilots what direction to steer for the desired station. The omni-range sends out course signals in all directions compared to the old range which sends out course signals in four directions.

The new range operates in the comparatively static-free higher frequencies.

With omni-range telling a pilot which way to steer and DME telling him how far he has to go, a pilot will be able to pinpoint his flight position at every stage along the path.

Now Is the Time for Annual Fuss Over Daylight Saving Time for the District

The time approaches for Congress to let down its hair and weep bitter tears for the poor farmer.

It's the annual bleeding-heart display when the subject of daylight saving time for the District is considered.

The District had daylight saving time in 1947, 1948 and 1949 and it seems a safe enough wager that it will move up its clocks one hour again this year.

Wouldn't it be less trouble for Congress to vest authority in the Commissioners to declare daylight saving time each year, you ask?

All for the Record

Natch! But then Congressmen with a large number of farmer constituents in their districts wouldn't be able to get it on the record that they opposed daylight saving time because it works a hardship on the farmer.

For three years, while he was in the Senate, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath carried the ball for daylight saving. This year the task has been taken over by his successor in the Senate, Senator Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.).

Leahy, a member of the Senate District Committee, has introduced a bill that would authorize the Commissioners to order daylight saving time annually.

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) has led the fight for daylight saving time in the House in recent years. A member of the House District Committee, Klein has tossed in a bill that would decree fast time this year only.

In the House the Klein bill has been reported by the Judiciary Subcommittee without recommendation, which leaves the decision on a recommendation to the House District Committee.

Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), chairman of the House District Committee, said the Klein bill will be considered at the next meeting of the committee.

He said an added meeting to take up daylight saving time and other business will be held before the committee's next regularly scheduled meeting on April 3.

On the Senate side, the Leahy bill has been referred to the Senate District Subcommittee on Health, Education and Recreation. Leahy is chairman of the subcommittee.

In Effec on April 30

He said his bill will be taken up at a subcommittee meeting, probably sometime this week.

Daylight saving time goes into effect throughout the Nation at 2 a. m. on April 30 and continues until 2 p. m. on September 24.

The supbject of daylight saving time for the District has, in the past, been given almost as much Congressional attention as Reds in high places, economy in Government and atomic warfare.

From 1942 to 1945, Washington was on daylight time because Congress moved up all the Nation's clocks one hour to save fuel and power during the war. But this emergency measure ended with the end of the war.

And this is what followed:

1946—The Board of Trade, radio stations, two-thirds of Washington citizens (according to a Washington Post poll) and many Congressmen favored daylight time.

Good Enough for Bilbo

The late Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo (D., Miss.), then chairman of the Senate District Committee, exclaimed that "God Almighty's time is good enough for me."

In the House McMillan offered a bill to give the District daylight time every summer. It got nowhere and the District remained on standard time that summer.

1947—Virtually every group in the District joined a concerted fight for daylight time. Even so, the House in February killed a fast-time bill, 210 to 124. Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) declared fast time hurts the farmers.

McGrath then bravely offered a bill in the Senate and it passed in late March, 65 to 17, but not before Senator John H. Overton (D., La.) asserted it would interfere with his favorite radio program.

Overton also wanted to know "what effect will this bill have on getting milk to my door every morning?"

Senator William Langer (R., Dak.) shouted that 640,000 residents of his State were opposed to daylight saving time for the District.

On April 26 much of the Nation went on fast time but Washington was still caught in the legislative mill.

The House then reversed itself and voted, 218 to 145, for fast time, provided the Commissioners held a hearing to determine if the public really wanted daylight time.

The Senate bill would have turned over the matter to the Commissioners for all time but the House said, no, only this one year.

The Commissioners pondered, heard out the citizens, practically all of whom wanted daylight time.

Started Two Weeks Late

Finally, they issued a proclamation full of whereases and daylight time began on May 11, two weeks late. Nearby Maryland and Virginia changed over late, too.

1948—By the April change-over to fast time date in other cities, Washington again was in a congressional fog.

Parts of Maryland and Virginia went fast, others waited to see what Washington would do.

On April 6 the Senate approved McGrath's daylight-time bill, 46 to 12, as Overton waved his arms and protested:

"Little children cry out, 'McGrath doth murder sleep.'"

On April 26 the House passed the bill, 204 to 92, after knocking out the provision for a permanent annual change. The Senate conceded this point, and the bill was rushed to the White House.

This time the Commissioners had the proclamation all ready in advance. Maryland and Virginia communities once again fell in step.

1949—By now it seemed an established fact District residents overwhelmingly favored daylight time. The Senate got busy early and passed a daylight-time bill by voice vote early in February.

On March 28 the House voted for daylight time, 223 to 130, but again for only one year. Opposition was led by Representative Barratt O'Hara (D., Ill.), who said:

"With this daylight saying time you don't change the operation of the planets at all—you just discommode a lot of people."

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) declared daylight time "imposes a definite hardship" on farmers. He did not say how many farmers live in the District.

Again the Commissioners quickly issued a proclamation and the District went on daylight time on April 24—along with the rest of the Nation. Nearby Maryland and Virginia tagged along.

And so we come to 1950 and lots of ??????.

Democrats Ask Suggestions of Rank and File

The Montgomery County Democratic State Central Committee is seeking rank-and-file suggestions for officials to conduct precinct leader elections on April 12.

Committee Chairman J. Bond Smith said yesterday that letters asking recommendations are being sent to Democratic clubs and individuals.

Plans call for appointment of three election officials for each of the county's 58 precincts, Smith said. He expressed the hope that names of many women would be advanced.

The system of selecting precinct leaders by the vote of party members was adopted by a mass meeting last week. Previously leaders were appointed by the central committee.

Klaus Fuchs, 'The Spy Chap,' Draws Poor House

By Frank Gervasi
Post Reporter

LONDON — The blindfolded lady with the scales and sword perched atop Old Bailey was swathed in fog when the queue began forming on the street below for the trial of Dr. Klaus Emil Julius Fuchs.

The air tasted of coal smoke. It gathered in cold pools in one's overcoat pockets.

The side door to the Central Criminal Court would open, the bluecoated bobby assured us, promptly at 10:15. The trial would start at 10:30.

But at 9 o'clock there were only six or seven men and women in the queue that waited to hear judgment passed on the German-born Communist who, of his own free will, while still a free man, confessed that he had betrayed to Russia certain secrets pertaining to the production of bigger and deadlier atomic bombs.

Nothing, perhaps, that any traitor had ever done to them could affect the lives of Britons and of tens of millions of people everywhere more seriously.

Assuming that the information which Dr. Fuchs, a naturalized Britisher, passed on to Russian agents is as important as authorities on both sides of the Atlantic have hinted that it is, then Dr. Fuchs is potentially a murderer on a vast scale.

For if the Russians have been aided in building or in improving atomic weapons by their spy's work, and if these weapons are some day employed against Britain and the other Western powers, Dr. Fuchs will bear a dreadful responsibility.

What could be more sensational than the trial of one whose crime might require a slide-rule to compute? But the prospects, apparently, were too coldly cerebral for the phlegmatic British to comprehend. Or did they know too well what Dr. Fuchs, the foolish physicist, the self-induced ideological schizophrenic, had done or might have done?

For whatever reason, the court-hounds stayed away from Old Bailey for this spectacle. Had it been the trial of another George Haigh—he dissolved female victims in acid after, some papers hinted, drinking of their blood—the queue would have held 600 persons, not 6. Old Bailey's public gallery holds only 38 spectators, and they sleep at their places wrapped in blankets, waiting for the doors to open, when there is a "good trial on."

But this was different. This Fuchs had not murdered anyone. There was no corpus delicti, no hint of sex or romance, although at least two British tabloids, which for sensation-mongering often make our yellowest newspapers look like models of journalistic purity by contrast, did manage to find "a woman in green" in the case. She cried, softly, when sentence was passed, and walked quietly out of the front pages, as indeed did the Fuchs case itself, 24 hours after the trial ended. It was discovered, no doubt to Fleet Street's dismay, that the lady was a relative, not a paramour.

Had this been the legal ordeal of a more easily recognizable variety of traitor, of a Lord Haw Haw, say, or of anyone whom the Lord Chief Justice, sitting implacably in scarlet and ermine, could have sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead, there would have been a block-long pigtail of people outside the Old Bailey. But by 10:15, when the side door opened, there were less than 40 idlers, spivs and habitues in line for the rush up the cold, dusty, white-tiled stairwell to the public gallery.

THERE were five or six students among them, psychology majors from London University. One read from "Principles of Social Psychology" as he stood in line and munched a slab of greasy toast, his breakfast.

I wonder what they learned on that bewildering morning as they watched British justice sweep Fuchs—his defense counsel asserted that Fuchs' was perhaps "the No. 1 brain in Britain today"—out of man's ken for 14 years, the maximum penalty? It would have been death had Britain been at war with Russia, a war which judge and crown, the latter in the person of the photogenic Attorney General, Sir Hartley Shawcross, were careful to interpolate in the testimony, "might never happen."

The public gallery commanded a view of the entire No. 1 Court of the Old Bailey. The judge's bench was a narrow, stage-like affair on the right. Opposite and just below the bench was the witness stand, roofed and gated like an oaken pulpit. Against that far wall, and to the left of the witness box, were short rows of benches holding members of the press, the luckier ones. Most of those covering the trial of Dr. Fuchs were grouped at far left, behind the bulking prisoners' dock, more or less effectively screened from sight and sound of what was happening.

The dock was a box-like platform about 8 feet by 8 feet, partitioned in varnished oak to shoulder height. Atop the partition which inclosed the dock on three sides ran a metal-edged foot or two of heavy plate glass. The side of the dock facing the judge was open except for a waist-high wooden wall with a wide railing. A stair led up to the platform from the cells below.

Mr. Bosshard has been a correspondent for the Neue Zurcher Zeitung for a quarter century. He covered China and Japan before World War II, representing his paper in the United States from 1942 to 1945, and has been in the Far East since. He is the author of "A Look at Four Continents" (1947) and "Mongolia" (1949).

BANGKOK — The diplomats came and left again, but the problems of southeast Asia remain.

For three days the American Ambassadors and other chief diplomats of the Pacific region discussed the political, economic and other aspects of a deteriorating situation. The conference was purely consultative and could not make any decisions, which remain with the State Department and the President.

To every diplomatic representative, the fact was evident that communism is fast advancing in Asia with an aggressive initiative, while the democratic forces remain on the defensive. Before his departure, Prof. Philip C. Jessup, chairman of the conference and President Truman's Ambassador at Large, discussed over the Bangkok radio station the danger of international communism, which through subversion and infiltration attempts to establish an alien rule which would put an end to the independent existence of every affected state.

He added, however: "It (international communism) is not a danger which need cause anyone to become fearful that his liberties may be lost. Certainly no such feeling of fear or panic exists in the United States, and I see no reason why it should exist here."

This speech caused considerable disappointment in high Siamese government circles. With communism knocking at their gates, many Siamese had been hoping that Jessup would drop at least a hint about future strategy in this Far Eastern cold war.

No such promise has been made by any American diplomat, but the people of Southeast Asia, and particularly the Siamese, have been looking anxiously toward Washington for some kind of leadership in the struggle against communism. The repeated expressions of sympathy for the fate of the Asiatic nations is not enough. They rather create uneasiness and fear, and the question is frequently asked: "Is this an indication that the United States intends to withdraw from Southeast Asia?"

A Contented People

NO OTHER country in Asia offers fewer targets for Communist propaganda than Siam. Land hunger is unknown here. Large tracts of virgin jungle remain as an inheritance for future generations. More than 75 percent of the cultivated area belongs to the tillers of the soil.

No dissatisfied industrial proletariat disturbs the social peace. Everybody can find work; nobody remains hungry. During the past century of colonial conquest, Siam, due to the rivalry between France and Britain, maintained her independence. People are content, and they support the royal house with sincere loyalty.

Yet there exist no doubts that the Communists have set their eyes on Siam with the desire to conquer it as quickly as possible. Their main attraction is rice.

Since the war Siam has become the biggest rice producer in Asia. In prewar days it was third. Burma came first, Indo-China second, and both these countries could export large quantities of this important food to China, Japan and other Asiatic regions.

Now, because of the political chaos in Burma, there is hardly enough rice for internal consumption, while production in Indo-China is one third of prewar. The stable conditions in Siam not only permitted uninterrupted cultivation of existing fields, but made it possible to increase production so that now nearly one million tons are available for export.

A Machinery Deal

RICE is the staple food of Asia's millions. To feed them the Communists will try hard to obtain control of Burma, Indo-China and Siam. They know that the nation which can fill empty stomachs will have the support of the ignorant masses.

It is therefore no coincidence that at this moment the Soviet Legation in Bangkok proposes a large barter transaction with the Siamese government, offering machinery —suspected to be of East German origin— pulp and timber in exchange for rice. The offer undoubtedly will be declined, but the fact that the Soviet commercial attache's office has been strengthened with several assistants newly arrived from Moscow indicates that such a refusal would not be considered final.

Since Siam has not recognized the Peking regime and has no direct dealings with the Chinese Communists, it is obvious that Russia is trying to transact the business for its new ally. This is the first indication of a close economic cooperation between Moscow and Peking which has as its final goal the control of the agricultural and mineral wealth of all Southeast Asia.

What can the democratic powers and particularly the United States do to prevent such a conquest? Jessup, in his radio address, indicated the way when

Japan a Show Window for Point IV

By Hessell Tiltman

TOKYO—Occupied Japan is today a show-window demonstrating that, under favorable conditions, President Truman's Point IV works.

The modernization of Japan and the full exploration and development of its slim natural resources are being hustled along in a fashion which makes this the most spectacular chapter of the occupation.

When the Americans landed in September, 1945, the occupation authorities found that agricultural research had attained a high level but that sanitary engineers were unknown. The technological efficiency of the textile and shipbuilding industries compared favorably with that in Western nations, but Japan's health standard was low and welfare work was almost unknown. The kuro-yaki shops, which sell powders made from charred moles and crows as a cure for nervous diseases and charred snake powders as a tuberculosis remedy, were doing as thriving a business as before Commodore Perry changed the course of Japanese history.

Today, less than five years later, the average Japanese is better fed, better doctored, better informed and better safeguarded in his daily life. Infinitely more is known about Japan's natural resources and their efficient use. And the country is on the way to becoming one of the most modern and technically efficient nations in the world, with the latest industrial processes, soil surveys, hydroponic farming, rodent control measures, improved varieties of seeds and even new traffic regulations.

A part from General MacArthur himself, the two men most responsible for the "MacArthur Restoration" in Japan are 47-year-old, Illinois-born Brig. Gen. Crawford F. Sams, public health expert and veteran of two world wars, who as chief of SCAP's public health and welfare section is doing one of the biggest jobs in military, medical and welfare administration ever tackled, and Memphis-born Lieut. Col. Hubert Gregory Schenck, Stanford University geology professor, who throughout the occupation has headed the natural resources section at MacArthur's headquarters. The work of these two departments is changing the lives and prospects of every Japanese.

Hessell Tiltman, chief Far Eastern correspondent for the London Daily Herald, was first assigned to Tokyo in 1935. He was a war correspondent with both the Chinese and Japanese forces in the Sino-Japanese war, and after World War II he returned to Tokyo to cover General MacArthur's headquarters. He is the author of several books on Japan and Pacific affairs, including "The Far East," "Nightmares Must End" and "Japan Since the Surrender," published in the Japanese language in 1948.

Take Okuda-San, the typical Japanese peasant who farms 2½ acres of Honshu soil. At the time of Japan's surrender, his rice crop (normally the highest per acre in the world) was down to 68 percent of the prewar average, while all crops were 25 percent below prewar. Then the natural resources section moved in.

Since 1945, 900,000 acres of wasteland have been brought under cultivation, providing farms for hundreds of thousands of landless peasants. A reconnaissance soil survey—the first in Japan to employ modern methods of classifying and mapping soils—has been completed. Six thousand farm advisers have been trained.

Agricultural cooperatives have been organized—more than 31,000 of them up to last June. Experimental work on insect control and the use of insecticides previously unknown in Japan is being pushed. (Insect and plant diseases annually destroy 10 percent of Japan's total crops.) Problems of food storage (important in Japan, where, because of climate, large quantities of farm produce spoil annually) are being studied intensively, and 215 buildings for food storage are under construction.

Flood Control Tackled

AN Agricultural Improvement Bureau has been established. The natural resources section has assumed responsibility for flood control and prevention, an urgent problem in Japan, where five storms in the winter of 1947-48 resulted in 2573 persons killed or missing, 11,153 homes destroyed, 294,4[illegible] houses damaged, and a wide area of crop land devastated.

This work to help the Okuda-Sans of Japan (added to the redistribution of land under the land reform law) is producing results. Today the acreage in Japan under cultivation is the highest in history, and staple foods produced in 1949 totaled 14.4 million metric tons, the highest yield of the occupation.

Take the industrial workers—the Suzuki-Sans of the cities and mining communities. A Japanese "white paper" recently reported that the nation was 10 to 30 years behind the United States in industrial and mining techniques. The attack on that time lag is proceeding on all fronts, sparked by an

WORLD AFFAIRS

U. N. 'Health Department' Wipes Out Frontiers

By Michael Goldsmith

GENEVA.—An aggressive world-wide battle against disease is being waged from Geneva headquarters by the World Health Organization (WHO)—the United Nations' public health department of the world.

Nearly 70 nations belong to the organization. Their major aim in setting up WHO in 1948 was to enable medically advanced countries to aid the less advanced for the benefit of all.

WHO's main attack now is concentrated on three preventable diseases: malaria, tuberculosis and syphilis. WHO estimates that these three kill upwards of 10 million persons every year, but considers these figures "extremely conservative." In many parts of the world health services are so inadequate that no one knows how many more millions die without ever seeing a doctor.

Hundreds of thousands more are killed every year by cholera and plague, also high on WHO's priority list. In many areas of India and China, these two diseases have claimed their dead every day for centuries. As long as these hard cores of infection remain, the danger of a catastrophic epidemic sweeping the world continues a permanent menace.

A Military Organization

OLD-FASHIONED quarantine methods are not effective in the air age. "No country can depend solely on its own protective arrangements," says Maj. Gen. Brock Chisholm, WHO's director-general. "Each must be assured of satisfactory controls in all other countries as well."

Dr. Chisholm—he has dropped his military title—is a soft-spoken little man with twinkling eyes who is recognized as one of the world's outstanding psychiatrists. He has organized WHO into divisions and area commands on military lines, possibly on the basis of his experience as wartime head of the Canadian army's medical services.

His organization is one of the most successful of the U. N. specialized agencies. With an annual budget of $7,500,000, WHO sends medical missions and specialists to a score of countries, maintains a permanent watch against the spread of pestilence, organizes full-scale campaigns in particularly disease-ridden areas, aids and records progress in medical research throughout the world and assists any member nation in the development of its health services and the training of its doctors.

Dr. Chisholm's pet project is an ambitious malaria control program to be spread over the next five years in test areas of the Middle East, Southeast Asia and Latin America. The test was organized by WHO and the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization under President Truman's Point IV, world development and technical assistance program.

'Repayment' in Crops

MALARIA, which strikes an estimated 300 million persons every year, can be eliminated in any area by vigorous action against the anopheles mosquito. The three test projects will cost 10 million dollars. WHO expects that the immense increase in food production in the test areas will repay many times the original expenditure.

New techniques in malaria control are being employed by a number of small WHO demonstration teams already operating in half a dozen Asiatic countries. Armed with DDT insecticide, these teams penetrate the jungles of central India and the mountains of Afghanistan to fight malaria and show medical students and sanitary engineers how to do the job themselves.

WHO has abandoned the old technique of spraying DDT from airplanes as wasteful and unnecessary. The system was widely employed in Greece and Sardinia, but experts now agree that individual indoor spraying of houses is preferable.

The malaria teams run into unexpected difficulties in isolated areas. In the Terai district of India, a team headed by Dr. Peter Issaris of Athens met the Buxas, a tribe where the head of the family is always a woman. The Buxa mothers thought the malaria blood tests were a cunning selection system for the Indian army, and spirited their sons into hiding. Bribed with packets of DDT to kill their lice and small bottles of benzoate against their scabies, the mothers were persuaded to cooperate.

In some areas the antimalaria teams wiped out even more deadly diseases. In Shimoga, India, Paul Bierstein, a WHO sanitary engineer from Shenandoah, Pa., found that his DDT campaign also killed fleas carrying plague, eliminating the dreaded disease from that area. In East Bengal, Dr. Gabriele Gramiccia of Rome fought malaria in an area infested with kala-azar, a deadly tropical disease transmitted by sand flies. Dr. Gramiccia's DDT killed the sand flies, wiping out kala-azar in the district.

WHO's antimalaria teams operate on an annual budget of $250,000. Teams fighting other diseases in many parts of the world are handicapped by an equally limited budget.

World Wide Photos

Half Population Syphilitic

ONE TEAM made a survey of venereal disease in the isolated Gunde Valley of north India and found nearly half the population infected with syphilis. A handful of WHO specialists showed local volunteers how to diagnose syphilis and to inject penicillin. After three months' work, the team reported that new infections had ceased.

Syphilis and its related diseases are usually estimated to cause two million deaths a year, but Dr. Thorstein Guthe of Oslo, chief venereal disease expert, believes the true death toll is much greater. Millions of babies are born with syphilis every year. Most of them die before they are a year old.

Throughout Southeast Asia, the West Indies, Africa and the Middle East, two forms of syphilis known as yaws and bejel cause untold death and suffering. They are easily transmitted through a handshake or an infected drinking cup. In Europe itself, tens of thousands of Yugoslav Moslems suffer from a local form of syphilis which is also passed from person to person without intercourse.

Fortunately, all the variations of syphilis can be cured with penicillin. WHO experts in many countries are teaching new techniques of treatment. A large-scale project is under way in Haiti and adjacent areas of the Dominican Republic to rid the population of syphilis and yaws.

In fighting venereal disease, WHO experts again found themselves up against ignorance and superstition in many areas. In Ethiopia, which probably has the world's highest venereal disease rate, Dr. Guthe saw tribal witch doctors prescribing the blood of a black male goat as a cure for syphilis.

In the more highly developed countries, syphilis is concentrated mainly in the big cities and seaports. Important navigable rivers carry the infection far inland. For decades, the River Rhine has been renowned as a black stream of venereal infection between Rotterdam and the inland ports all the way up to Switzerland.

A special international commission was set up under WHO auspices to coordinate and improve the treatment of syphilis in Rhine boatmen in all the countries bordering on the river.

9 Million Vaccinated

THE GREATEST killer of all among the infectious diseases is tuberculosis. More than five million people die of it every year, although it has been preventable since Koch discovered the tuberculin bacillus in 1882. The reason, WHO says, is a total lack of doctors and medical equipment in large areas of the world.

Antitubercular "BCG" vaccine was introduced in 1921, but it was never extensively used until WHO opened a vast anti-TB campaign two years ago. In cooperation with the Danish Red Cross and the International Children's Emergency Fund, more than 18 million European children were tested for tuberculosis and half of them vaccinated with BCG. The program is to be extended all over the world this year.

"The intense tuberculosis problem is not in Europe at all," Dr. John B. McDougall of Edinburgh explained. "The worst areas are in Asia, in the Pacific islands and in Latin America. In India alone, tuberculosis kills more than one million persons every year."

Dr. McDougall, WHO chief tuberculosis expert, returned recently from a survey in India. "The surprising thing is not that the death and sickness rates are so high," he said, "but that many of these poor people are able to live at all."

Tuberculosis centers to be established by WHO in India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon will combine prevention and treatment with training of personnel, Dr. McDougall said, "so that the whole project will grow snowball fashion."

Russia Gets Books

ON ALL WHO health maps there is a large blank space—Russia. The Soviet Union and its satellites originally took an active part. Last year, the Russians walked out. Bulgaria followed suit and most of the other satellites have become lukewarm. But even while the Soviet Union was a full member, no information on disease in Russia ever reached the experts in Geneva.

WHO still regards Russia as legally a member and regularly sends medical literature and periodicals to the Soviet Ministry of Health and to universities in Byelorussia and the Ukraine. The books are never returned, but neither are they acknowledged.

At WHO's first annual assembly in 1948, Czechoslovakia pressed for the establishment of a regional office in Prague to give special assistance to "war devastated nations" in eastern Europe. The proposal was turned down, mainly for financial reasons. Now, with more funds available, WHO would like to set up an eastern European office, but the Czechs are no longer interested.

Although political dissension has stalled progress in Europe, WHO is setting up "health regions" elsewhere to decentralize its war on disease. Regional organizations are already functioning in Southeast Asia and the Middle East, while the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau has become its regional organization for the Americas.

The various campaigns eventually will be controlled at regional levels, where cooperation of governments works more smoothly and WHO officials can remain in close touch with their workers in the field.

A Greek Orthodox priest has his chest X-rayed in a mass tuberculosis survey by the World Health Organization in Greece

An Eye on Drugs

IN ADDITION to its more dramatic crusades, WHO undertakes a multitude of tasks in a world-wide extension of national health department work.

In Geneva and Singapore, WHO maintains powerful shortwave transmitters which broadcast daily situation reports on the prevalence of dangerous infectious diseases anywhere in the world.

WHO experts keep watch on dangerous drugs and on the vital statistics of member nations. To place all national health and mortality figures on an equal basis, a standardized WHO list of diseases and causes of death has been formally adopted by most nations.

WHO legal specialists supervise operation of modern quarantine regulations and international health conventions.

WHO experts assist and advise many countries on the improvement of their health services. WHO fellowships help backward countries to train their medical students. Dr. Emilio Krapf, professor of psychiatry at the University of Buenos Aires, was sent to the Philippines by WHO recently at the request of the Philippine government to undertake a complete reorganization of Philippine mental hospitals. Even the United States Government requests expert advice from WHO.

Conferences of experts are convened regularly at Geneva to exchange information on progress. Special surveys are being prepared on such varied subjects as alcoholism, juvenile delinquency and schistosomiasis, a bladder disease transmitted by water snails to workers in flooded rice fields. A large-scale project is under way in Egypt and Israel to test new weapons in the fight against rabies.

In the heart of Communist China, Dr. Leo Eloesser of San Francisco is training nurses in elementary principles of sanitation and first aid. The Chinese Communists generally have cooperated with WHO and regularly send health information to the Singapore control station.

Acts in Emergencies

IN CASES of emergency, WHO coordinates relief and rushes doctors and medical supplies to the afflicted area. The Egyptian cholera epidemic in 1947 was checked largely with WHO help, and the organization received a gold medal from the Egyptian government. Similar help was given to Ecuador after the disastrous earthquake there last year. When a polio epidemic broke out in India, WHO flew in the largest supply of iron lungs ever available in that country.

Poliomyelitis is among the diseases which cannot be checked by WHO action because medical science has not yet devised an effective means of prevention. Cancer and leprosy also remain beyond the scope of worldwide preventive measures. The best WHO can do at the moment is to coordinate research of medical workers in these fields.

One of WHO's major problems, according to Dr. Chisholm, is the absence of a truly international outlook among some of its own medical specialists and the government delegates.

"People must learn emotionally to develop a sense of world citizenship," Dr. Chisholm said. "That is the basic problem facing not only WHO but all the specialized agencies of the United Nations.

"The ability of the United Nations to fulfill its destiny requires individuals and governments to develop a loyalty to the whole human race."

'I Have Committed Other Crimes,' Said Fuchs, and Left It at That

Bluecoated, brass-buttoned policemen sat in chairs in the near corners. An empty chair, for the prisoner, stood in the center, just behind the front railing.

Directly below, between the prisoners' dock and the judge's bench, were the pews where sat the wigged, black-robed barristers for the crown and the defense, and the broad, oak table where sat the men of the British security police, M. I. 5, to whom Fuchs had confessed.

Other lawyers, women and men, also wigged and robed, stood in the aisles alongside the dock or leaned against the walls. There may have been apathy about the Fuchs case among the housewives and the downstairs maids, but there was none in the legal profession.

It is the rule that any London barrister, if properly attired, may come to the Old Bailey as a spectator. There were nearly as many sightseeing lawyers in court as there were reporters, and it was one of the most completely covered trials in British legal history. American news agencies installed direct lines just outside the court room, covered the event on a running basis, a la Lindbergh kidnap trial.

For 15 minutes there was a hum of voices and the rustle of papers. There was a stir when the Duchess of Kent, serious and absorbed, entered the distinguished visitors' gallery just underneath the public balcony. The big, tweedy man next to me was asleep, but woke when the duchess entered.

"What's 'is name?" he asked.

"Whose?"

"The prisoner's, the bloke wot's bein' tried?"

"Fuchs," I said, "Dr. Fuchs. He is . . ."

"Ah, yiss. Fewks. 'E's the spy chap."

Unexpected Entrance

THE man settled back, but only for a moment. Somebody was pounding for attention and calling the court to order. Everyone stood up to behold the knickered mace-bearer and sword-bearer, the Lord Justice Goddard, the Lord Mayor and a couple of lesser functionaries come on-stage. The judge adjusted his quarter-moon spectacles, riffled some ribboned papers before him and the trial of Dr. Klaus Emil Julius Fuchs had begun.

One was suddenly and unexpectedly aware of the prisoner in the dock. He had come up the stairwell while interest centered on the pageantry of the judge's entry, or so it seemed to a spectator trying to catch everything at once.

Fuchs stood there, listening to the four counts charging him with communicating "information which might be useful to an enemy," a slight figure in a well-tailored single-breasted suit of light brown material, a beige shirt and a dark brown tie. He was of medium height with a sharp-featured face, thin straight lips, metal-rimmed eyeglasses and a magnificent head. He owned the long, high-domed cranial structure, thinly but darkly haired, which the anthropologists say indicates unusual cerebral development. The scalp shone healthily.

"Guilty," he said, in a small, phlegmy voice. He sat down, looping his right arm over the back of his chair, holding his long-fingered hands together, one in the other. Sir Hartley, reading from Dr. Fuchs' long, detailed, self-analytical confession, more the document of a psychiatrist than physicist, began the crown's case in conversational tones, addressing himself to the short, red-faced, imperturbable court.

Lord Goddard was alone now in his scarlet and ermine robes. The mace and sword bearers and the Lord Mayor had withdrawn. The Lord Justice looked like Charles Laughton playing the Lord Justice.

The 2 Compartments

NEARLY all that Sir Hartley had to say was familiar: The German-born Fuchs had joined the Communist Party in Germany to fight Nazism. He was persecuted for his political beliefs. He escaped to England, was interned in England and Canada and later released. His work in higher physics in British universities won him naturalization and a key $5000-a-year job at Harwell.

He broke his oath of secrecy when, on four occasions, in England and in the United States, he passed information on to Soviet agents. Fuchs' story: "When I learned about the purpose of the work (assigned to him at the Harwell atomic research center) I decided to inform Russia . . . I had no hesitation in giving all the information I had, even though I tried to concentrate mainly on giving information about the results of my own work.

"I used my Marxian philosophy to establish in my mind two separate compartments, one in which I allowed myself to have friendships and personal relationships, to meet people and be in all personal ways the kind of man I wanted to be and the kind of a man which in a personal way I had been before with my friends in or near the Communist Party.

"I could be, therefore, and was, quite happy with other people without fear of disclosing myself, because I knew the other compartment would step in if I approached the danger point. I could forget the other compartment and still rely on it. It appeared to me at the time that I had become a free man because I had succeeded, in the other compartment, in establishing myself completely independent of the surrounding forces of society. Looking back now, the best way of expressing it seems to be to record it as 'controlled schizophrenia . . .'"

100-Pound 'Token'

FUCHS began to worry about the information he was forwarding to the Kremlin, trying to sift what was his own as head of the theoretical physics division of the Atomic Energy Establishment at Harwell, from what represented the work of others, succeeding or failing according to the state of his "inner struggles."

In December, 1943, so important had his work become, Fuchs went to the United States as a member of a British atomic energy commission. He worked in New York and New Mexico, and while there, according to his confession, made contact with Russian agents, unsuspected. He returned to Britain in 1946, continued his dual spy-scientist existence and took 100 pounds in payment as a "token" of his subservience to the Communist cause.

Those "social forces" against which he believed he had insulated himself, got under Fuchs' skin. But was it this that induced him to confess? Or was it realization that he was about to be caught?

Last autumn information had come from the Federal Bureau of Investigation that there had been a leak in the British mission when it was in America.

"Most exhaustive inquiries were at once pursued in regard to the matter," said Sir Hartley in his conversational way, "and eventually suspicion narrowed down to Fuchs . . ."

Unsounded Depths

FUCHS confessed. He summoned M. I. 5 men and made his long, meticulous statement. It included these phrases:

"Before, I did not appreciate that most of the English people with whom I made personal contact were left-wing and affected to some degree or other by the same kind of philosophy.

"Since coming to Harwell, I have met English people of all kinds, and I have come to see in many of them a deep-rooted firmness which enables them to live a decent life. I do not know where this springs from, and I do not think that they do, but it is there."

In those words, Dr. Fuchs provided the clew to his undoing. In them he revealed a realization of the fact that he was not serving an ideal but mere men who desired to master other men. He had found in England men not so inclined. But he learned too late that communism was a chimera, that its realities no freedom-loving man could countenance.

Derek Curtis Bennett, one of Britain's most brilliant lawyers, was quietly, persuasively eloquent on Dr. Fuchs' behalf. He sketched, skillfully, the tragedy of Fuchs, the "scientist with a considerable position," the man who probably had "the No. 1 brain in Britain today," but who was, though the lawyer did not say this, a political imbecile.

Went On Giving

"SCIENTISTS are not all politically wise," was the way Curtis Bennett put it. "He ought not to be blamed too much if, during the fighting in the war, information was given and then, when Russia ceases to be our ally, he goes on giving information.

"Once it is accepted that this man was a Communist, one ought not to blame him too much for going on doing this after the war. Because of . . . the behavior of the politicians in the Soviet Union and Central Europe, he realized at long last that he has been wrong, and he is prepared to face it . . ."

A few minutes later he did. Fuchs stood up, put his right hand in his pocket, took it out again. He clutched the rail before him. His knuckles were white. In his small, still cloudy voice, he made a brief statement which disclosed nothing, or very much.

"There are also some other crimes which I have committed other than the ones with which I am charged. When I asked my counsel to put certain facts before you, I did so in order to atone for these crimes. They are not crimes in the eyes of the law . . ."

Then he thanked the court, his jailers, his counsel, everyone for a fair trial and for considerate treatment.

What "other crimes" had he committed? No one, probably, will ever know, but Fuchs' expiation began almost at once. The Lord Chief Justice faced him squarely, the epitome of British law, heavy, slow-moving, sure. Lord Goddard's were ugly words to hear in a British court, justified though they were.

Fuchs paled. If there had been a moment in which he had thought that, maybe, he might be given a light sentence, it died quickly within him. He looked, as the boxers say, out on his feet.

Lord Goddard spoke: "... You have repaid the hospitality and protection given to you with the greatest treachery . . . You have imperiled the right of asylum which this country has hitherto extended . . . Dare we now to give shelter to political refugees who may be followers of (your) pernicious creed and disguise themselves and then . . . bite the hand that fed them?"

Lord Goddard flung at Fuchs the maximum penalty allowed by Parliament, "14 years' imprisonment." Fuchs staggered almost imperceptibly. He was held on his feet by two policemen. He bowed slightly to them, stepped back and then down the stairwell to an oblivion that will last until he is 52 years old.

Of whether this great brain, certainly one of the nine finest if not the best in Britain, will be used during his incarceration, there was no official sign.

Dismal Possibility

FUCHS' trial had served to remove a dangerous enemy from Britain's and our midst. But it also served to illustrate the scope and ferocity of the struggle between West and East. In Lord Goddard's words about the "dangers" of giving asylum to political refugees, there was a hint of the dismal possibility of losing much that is vibrant and beautiful in democracy as it struggles for survival against autocracy.

"Dare we now to give shelter ..." Was the implied doubt ever before uttered in a British court?

It was noon when the trial ended. The lady with the sword and the scales up on the cupola glowed with the rare London sun. The fog was gone. Passers-by clustered about the main door of the Old Bailey to watch Fuchs come out. I hurried away.

Sir Hartley William Shawcross, the photogenic Attorney General, opened the Crown's case by reading Dr. Fuchs' confession in a conversational tone

Baron Goddard of Aldbourne, Lord Chief Justice of England, was the epitome of British law—heavy, slow-moving, sure. And he spoke ugly words

SCAP Unit Has Saved 1½ Million Jap Lives

impressive array of American talent and technical knowledge.

American steel experts are helping to raise production in that industry. The construction of 33 additional hydroelectric stations has begun. Japanese technicians are being sent to the United States in shoals to study the latest American techniques.

New high-yielding processes have been introduced into the pulpwood industry, one of the most important in Japan. To tap new forest areas for the logging industry, 276 miles of forest roads have been built and American foresters are supervising a five-year reforestation program to place timber on a self-sustaining basis.

Coal Needs Filled

THE coal mining industry is being modernized right up to 1950 American standards. The natural resources section of SCAP has directed a new survey of the nation's coal reserves; assisted in redesigning mining equipment; provided technical assistance in mine layout modernization; introduced modern practices in fuel utilization, and introduced an up-to-date mine safety code.

Japan's output of coal has more than doubled in the past four years—to more than 34 million tons annually—and for the first time since the occupation began, this winter brought no fuel crisis.

In regard to oil, a petroleum exploration advisory committee (staffed by Japanese) was established to introduce new drilling and production techniques. New oil reserves totaling eight million barrels have been discovered—representing a future saving on Japan's oil imports equivalent to 25 million dollars in scarce foreign exchange. American experts have taught the Japanese "directional drilling," whereby five oil wells can be dug at once.

Worker efficiency—a prerequisite to higher wages—has been stimulated in all fields with "incentive goods" from surplus United States Army stocks.

Under this scheme, 50 million dollars worth of clothing, shoes, blankets, etc., were distributed to workers by the end of 1948 and 6,500,000 workers now are eligible to participate.

Nation Vaccinated

JAPAN'S health standards, never high, degenerated during the war. In 1945 General Sams moved in to tackle one of the key jobs of the occupation. His motto was: "Every citizen has as much right to know how to live a normal, healthy life and prevent sickness and injury as he has to know how to read."

In the first year following Japan's surrender, 78 million Japanese—the entire population—were vaccinated against smallpox, one of the largest mass immunization programs in history; 34,500,000 were innoculated against cholera; 20 millions against typhoid, and 5,300,000 against typhus.

In March, 1946, there were 6304 reported cases of smallpox in Japan. In the whole of 1948, there were 29.

Since the beginning of the occupation, the diphtheria rate has been reduced 83 percent; the incidence of dysentery 87 percent; the typhoid rate 86 percent, and cholera has been virtually eliminated.

The death rate in Japan, which was 29.2 per 1000 persons at the beginning of the occupation, had been reduced to around 11 per 1000 in 1949. (For 1948, latest year for which detailed statistics are available, the death rate was 18 percent less than in 1947 and 59 percent less than in 1945).

More than 1,500,000 Japanese are walking around fit and well who would have been dead had the occupation never occurred. Of the 47,000 doctors in Japan when the occupation began, only 60 were Western-trained.

Big Training Program

DISEASE prevention, however, was only a beginning. SCAP experts instituted a total revolution in the fields of medicine, nursing, hygiene, public welfare and sanitation.

American-prepared training programs were established for doctors, nurses, pharmacists, nutritionists, sanitarians and public health engineers, plus courses in such subjects as the compilation of accurate health statistics, and insect and rodent control.

The net result of all this effort—unparalleled in history by a victorious nation in behalf of a defeated foe—is that Japan is today in a position, for the first time in its 2610 years of recorded history, to utilize fully its human and natural resources.

In the words of a SCAP "progress report," "The Japanese people, like a patient recuperating from a long illness, are being helped to walk unaided along the paths of justice, tolerance and international understanding." Whether or not Japan continues to walk that road, the record chalked up by selfless American experts is something of which the United States may be proud, and forms a blueprint for Point IV work in other backward lands.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Johnson Injecting 'Profit Motive' Into Defense

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A REVOLUTION is under way at the Pentagon. It's not, however, what you might think. While an essential part of the economy and unification programs, it is not involved in the acrimonious inter-service controversies which periodically wrack the Department of Defense.

On the contrary, it seems to be almost entirely a fight of Good vs. Evil, of Sound Progress against Reaction, with only ancient bureaucrats grumbling about the troublesome change.

Largely sponsored by some admirals, it has Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's wholehearted blessing, and may turn out to be his most notable contribution to national defense. Obscured, however, by the more spectacular rows of generals and admirals, the really live news story of the movement has been told to date only in the dry gobbledegook of official reports and CPA journals.

Will Operate on Fees

IN EFFECT, what is under way is a program to reorganize all of the defense forces' industrial, supply and commercial-type activities and literally "set them up in business."

Instead of receiving annual appropriations for their support based on estimated operations, the Nation's Government-owned shipyards, aircraft maintenance shops, laundries, bakeries, airline and steamship companies, arsenals, etc., are to be "incorporated" and made to stand on their own feet.

Under the program—just getting started—such plants and organizations actually will be chartered by the Government, given "working capital" and will have to exist on fees collected from their "customers." Their capitalization will consist of an evaluation of supplies on hand and a three-month advance of operating expenses set up in the Treasury.

It's not getting "government into business" for the "customers" will remain as now, the various branches of the armed services. It is putting "business into government." All of the approved tools of modern American private business, including cost accounting—one of the most vital of all—will be installed.

Prototype at GPO

A LAYMAN viewing the program wonders why it wasn't introduced before. It seems so "natural" and keyed to the so-called "American way." Recently, someone called the new system "capitalism in government."

Actually, something like it has been in existence at the Government Printing Office for years. And the Navy has had "working capital funds"—as the program is officially known—for 50 years, though limited to purely supply functions.

The full concept, with the big business elements of competition and close cost accounting controls, is new.

Two results are expected to be gained by chartering industrial, commercial and supply activities with working capital funds:

1. Each such plant or service will be kept constantly on its toes by "profit and loss" bookkeeping. Each subdivision must turn out a sufficient volume of work at the current level of charges—"or else." "Or else" means that efficiency engineers will come in and either reorganize or cut the payroll.

Under modern cost accounting, each subboss is responsible for the money he spends, the cost of each job and the most economical method of accomplishing his work. All of the costs of operation will be paid from the working capital fund, using standard commercial practices for the distribution of direct and indirect costs to jobs in process.

This is a far cry from the normal Government practice, with lump sum appropriations provided and work done on order from above, without close correlation of need to cost.

Department of Defense accountants will constantly watch the balance sheets of such plants. They'll compare their charges and caliber of work with those of private enterprise, but the services will have the right to take their business elsewhere in many instances.

2. The "customers" will have a constant check on their spending habits. They'll be billed for the work just as if it were done by a private company.

No longer will Government officials be able to say, "Oh, let's make the trip; it won't cost anything. The airplane is flying anyway." Or, "Of course, order the best equipment and plenty of spart parts; it doesn't count against our funds."

Examples of this already can be cited, on the basis of the "pilot" model of the new system now operating.

Late last year, the Department of Defense merged two separate Army and Air Force printing plants operating in the Pentagon with a Navy plant on South Courthouse rd. in Arlington. The merged shop—set up to do the bulk of the urgently needed printing and other reproduction required by the armed services in this area—was established at the old Army plant. Because the old Navy shop had quoted lower prices and generally seemed more efficient, the unified "Defense Printing Service—Washington" was put under Navy control.

Here are some of the results claimed for the setup after four months of operation:

Employment rolls have been cut from 400 to 300, with the same work load.

A total of $118,000 was saved by reduction of force this fiscal year.

An officer "customer" ordered 100 copies of a letter with the margins "justified" like this column of type. Learning that the cost—$375—was much higher than for uneven margins, he quickly learned an economy lesson and countermanded the order.

Another official ordered 50 charts prepared to demonstrate an idea he had in mind. When he found that each one would be hand-made and that the total cost of $171 would be charged to his office, he ordered a half dozen instead.

Still another official put in a requisition for 5000 copies of a new manual. When rudely educated to the high cost of printing—something like five bucks a copy—he cut the order to 1500.

Shipyard on the List

NEXT step in the plan is the merging of service print shops in two other localities April 1—to be chosen from New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco or Norfolk. One will be under the Army and the other under the Air Force—to give each service experience in the new concept.

After that will come a much longer step—the chartering of one of the major Navy shipyards under the working capital fund system. If that pans out, the other shipyards will be "incorporated" and will go into competition among themselves and with commercial shipbuilders.

Coffee roasting plants, aircraft modification centers, auto overhaul shops, instrument repair centers and all manner of production works will follow.

Secretary Johnson and other military chiefs have been unwilling to forecast savings from the program. But the economies promise to overshadow those from most of the immediate and more publicized cutbacks—whose wisdom is disputed.

A Unification Angle

THERE can be little question of the worth of putting the Defense Department's operations on a modern business basis and giving Congress for the first time an adequate yardstick for voting Government money. And the program probably can be applied to other Federal agencies.

Assistant Defense Secretary Wilfred S. McNeil, comptroller of the department, is highly enthusiastic about the program. He sees in it a chief hope for the success not only of economy but also of true unification.

Rather naturally, no one service is anxious to do work for another when it has to pay for the work from its own appropriations and gets only a "thank you" from the customer.

"This is the only way I know of to make cross-unification work," says McNeil. "Once started, the system should snowball."

'Gov.' Byrnes, Like It Or Not, Will Be Symbol

By Jack Bell

IN SOUTH CAROLINA, hotbed of Southern discontent over the ways of the Truman Administration, an old warrior has returned to the political battlegrounds in a move full of national significance.

Unless all advance signs fail, James F. Byrnes will be nominated by the Democratic Party for Governor of South Carolina in the State's July 11 primary. That would insure his election in November.

At 70, Byrnes is capping a career that has included 14 years as a member of the House, two terms as Senator, 15 months on the Supreme Court, service as War Mobilization Director and "assistant President" and a tour as Secretary of State.

Whether he likes it or not, when Byrnes goes into office he will become the symbol of Southern democratic opposition to (1) President Truman's civil rights program, (2) much of the President's "Fair Deal" program and (3) the Administration's spending program.

The little quizzical-browed fighter, affectionately known around Washington as "Jimmy," will be speaking from the Governor's rostrum in a State that takes its politics about as seriously as any in the Union.

Always Kept Center

BYRNES already has given a foretaste of his views. He is against the centralization of power in Washington. He doesn't like the so-called welfare state. He thinks the Federal Government is spending too much money.

Some may think this a far cry from the Byrnes of the mid-Roosevelt years, who wangled more New Deal legislation through the Senate than any other member. But long-time friends know that Jimmy's own views always were on the conservative side. They accept his assertion that always, even in the heyday of the New Deal, he was trying to stay in the middle of the road.

President Truman has read some of Byrnes' speeches. There is no doubt that he didn't like some of the things he read. When reporters asked about Byrnes' announcement for Governor, Mr. Truman said sharply that Byrnes is free to do as he damn pleases.

This marked publicly the end of a friendship that began in the Senate and survived a disappointing experience for Byrnes in 1944. In that year President Roosevelt let the South Carolinian get out on a limb in his quest of the Democratic vice presidential nomination — and then gave the nod to Mr. Truman.

When Roosevelt died, Byrnes was one of the first called to the White House by Mr. Truman. The new President soon made his old friend Secretary of State.

Cardiograph Proof

THERE has been a lot written and said about the break between Mr. Truman and Byrnes. Actually, the records show he quit the Cabinet post because of his health.

Before he went to Paris in April, 1946, for the Paris meeting of foreign ministers, Byrnes slipped out to Naval Hospital for a checkup. A cardiograph showed he had coronary sclerosis. The doctors said he had to slow up. Byrnes showed the medical report to the President and told him he was presenting his resignation, to take effect when the five peace treaties on which he was working were completed.

When that work was finished in December, 1946, Byrnes told the President he wanted to quit. His resignation was accepted.

Before Gen. George Marshall got back from China and qualified as his successor, Byrnes had another physical checkup. Inexplicably, a cardiograph taken by the same doctors showed no evidence of his previous trouble.

Today he says he feels like a man 20 years younger.

The cordial relations between the President and Byrnes continued until last July. Then Byrnes made a speech at Washington and Lee University which was interpreted as sharply critical of the Truman Administration's program.

Warning to Caesar

PREVIOUSLY, Byrnes had written a columnist denying a story that he had telephoned the President in December, 1946, and demanded that his resignation be accepted.

Byrnes sent a copy of the letter to the President. Mr. Truman's reply, evidently dictated before the Washington and Lee speech, was cordial.

But there was a postcript, penned after the speech. It said simply: "Et tu, Brute?" ("You too, Brutus?"—the question attributed to Julius Ceasar when he spied his friend Brutus among his assassins.)

Byrnes wrote the President that he ought not to fall out with his friends just because they happened to differ with him over his legislative program.

He was not any Brutus, Byrnes said, adding that he hoped the President wouldn't continue to think of himself as Caesar, because he just wasn't.

That apparently ended a friendship of years.

No Dixiecrat

BYRNES has renounced any national ambitions in connection with his return to politics. He is sticking with the Democratic Party, and friends say he won't advance the cause of those who went outside in 1948 to found the States' Rights Party. The man Byrnes hopes to succeed, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, was the presidential candidate on that ticket.

Always a man of many friends, Byrnes says he let his friends get him into the Governor's race. He previously has served in only one State office, that of prosecutor, for a two-year term before he first was elected to Congress years ago.

Reds Forge Intellectual Spearheads

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

WHILE many world leaders are still hypnotized by the H-bomb, Soviet strategists are driving hard for what they call "victory through ideas."

The Bolsheviks are confident that a well-directed ideological campaign is itself capable of "destroying" capitalism. This view has become more and more pronounced in recent months at party conclaves.

Emphasis is being placed on the importance of immediate action—action involving military readiness while gaining ground through ideological penetration. And for this penetration, the Soviet Union is mobilizing a "new Communist intelligentsia."

Unlike old party workhorses, often bold but brainless, this intellectual elite corps is to be educated without stint; is to be as cultured as any Western college man.

No Narrow Scholars

THE character of this new intelligentsia was revealed recently by S. V. Kaftanov, USSR Minister for Higher Education. He declared at a gathering of political leaders and educators:

"No man can be regarded as a true Leninist who has retired within his own calling—say, mathematics or chemistry—and who can see no further than his specialized training requires.

"A genuine Leninist cannot be an expert in just one particular field of science. He must at the same time be aware politically, concerned with the fate of his country, acquainted with the laws conditioning social development, able to make use of these laws, and striving to be an active participant in the country's political administration. . . .

"There is one branch of science the knowledge of which must be compulsory to Bolsheviks of all other branches of science: that is the Marxist-Leninist science of society, the laws conditioning the development of society, the laws of the development of the proletarian revolution, and the laws conditioning socialist construction for the victory of Communism."

Base for Future

KAFTANOV stressed Stalin's reiterated dictum that the development of such an intelligentsia is "one of the most vital tasks of the socialist state." No ruling class, according to Stalin, can survive without its own intelligentsia.

Stalin's conviction has been reflected in many ways since the war. For one thing, he has exerted every effort to create a school system for "new generations of Communists who have not known exploitation"—that is, who have known no other political system than Bolshevism.

In doing this, he has shrewdly laid a basis for perpetuating Communism in Russia—realizing, of course, that a dictatorship from above could not go on ruling forever without the people's consent.

Then, too, a Communist intelligentsia would serve as an ideological example as well as a spearhead in the unfolding battle of ideas with the West.

Satellites in Line

THE satellite states, meanwhile, have not been slow to form their own corps of party-minded intellectuals. As in Russia, they are wedding professional training to politics—and for the same purpose of creating literate advocates of Communism.

In Bulgaria, a special conference of top Communists was held earlier this month to lay out a program for "the creation of a socialist intelligentsia among the working class." The speeches warned that Bulgaria's socialist economy is "lagging" because of remaining bourgeois influences.

One speaker went on to say:

"For this reason true cadres are necessary. We are in need of a new socialist intelligentsia closely connected with the working class in our country."

Other speeches and party reports reveal how various aspects of the ideological drive are shaping up within the Soviet orbit. A two-day conference of writers was held in Poland last month for no other reason than to impress this little facet of Polish society that it must direct every effort toward promoting communism.

"We must admit," said Chairman Leon Kruczkowski, "the undeniable fact that our literary output during the past five years has failed to adopt a positive attitude toward the new life."

Kruczkowski then called upon the writers to get closer to "the daily life of a country creating socialism" so they could write of socialism for the people—and thus lead the people to socalism.

Commenting later on the conference, the official Polish newspaper Rzeczpospolita (Republic) declared: "The writer is being geared into the current of social creation. He is being made part of the production process."

Titoists Aware

SUCH pronouncements point to the conclusion that Communist leaders in Russia and the satellites are well beyond the preliminaries of an all-out ideological onslaught. So complete has this perversion of intellectuals been that even the Yugoslavs, Communists themselves, have called Soviet writers blind to truth, oblivious to all evils, in their efforts to write only what is pleasing to their masters.

To the Kremlin, this is entirely beside the point. The Kremlin's concern is to create the illusion that the people themselves want Communism. And this they are doing by means of the new Communist intelligentsia.

Point IV 'Escapes' Contented Siamese

he stated: "The interest of the United States in the welfare of the peoples of Asia is illustrated by what is known as the Point IV program. This is a program suggested by President Truman for the purpose of assisting the underdeveloped countries of the world to receive technical assistance in the development of their agriculture, their industry and their other resources."

This declaration made no great impression in Siamese government circles, because they could not grasp the full meaning of such assistance. They have no experience yet in this cold war and still believe that nothing short of superior military power can check communism.

The success of the Marshall Plan in Europe is hardly known to them, and economic aid leading to an improved standard of living for the masses is difficult to understand in a country where social discontent is practically nonexistent.

Democratic Pivot

INTERNATIONAL communism has chosen Bangkok for its base of operations. It seems evident that the opposing forces should center their activities in the same place.

Siam offers an ideal setting for an Asiatic Marshall Plan. This country, with the help of the United States, can become the pivot of a strong anti-Communist movement in this part of the world. The assistance it needs is mostly technical and advisory. It requires outside counsel in international affairs.

Few Siamese yet understand the important part their country can play in the fight against communism. The advantage Siam offers as a center for political activity and education lies in the fact that there exist no rival groups, as in Burma and Indo-China, which claim to be nationalistically minded but actually are under Communist domination.

Of even greater importance is Siam's geographic position. Situated in the center of an area full of unrest and political upheaval, where international communism is definitely on the offensive, it has become an important observation post. One can clearly see attempts from every direction to get closer and closer to this Asiatic rice bowl.

Outside Initiative

IT IS therefore from Siam, which remained independent through centuries and which in the past liberally offered asylum to political refugees, that the counterattack of the democratic forces must be prepared to prevent these countries from falling behind the Asiatic Iron Curtain. The initiative for any such plan, however, must come from outside.

People in these tropical regions have a static character. They lack the dynamic spirit of inhabitants of the moderate and cold belts, and are inclined to let fate take its course. If international communism is not stopped soon, these peoples will become the victims of an alien rule which intends to channel not only the rice, but also tin, rubber, vegetable oil and many other products of the fertile soil, toward Peking and Moscow.

Success in this aim would give international communism an impetus which not only would be very difficult to control, but whose containment would be much more expensive than the decisive help these countries now expect from the United States.

Hawaii And Alaska

In voting to admit Hawaii and Alaska to Statehood, the House recognized the overwhelming logic in the pleas of these two Territories. The situation of the whole free world argues for an extension of the principle of union, and the argument is particularly cogent as respects two American Territories prepared for Statehood by tradition and long years of tutelage. In the case of Hawaii the approval repeats similar action by the House nearly three years ago. It serves to confirm the fact that full membership in the Union for Hawaii is justified by every criterion. In the case of less populous Alaska, legislators gave weight to her strategic national defense position. Statehood also would open the door to the full economic development that Alaska now lacks.

Although the prospect seems to be for harder going in the Senate, we hope Senators will have no truck with the many irrational and groundless objections to Statehood. Communism in Hawaii, for example, is a perpetual red herring. The question has been explored at length, and there is no reason to believe that Hawaii is less competent to cope with it than any State. The contention that Alaska does not have enough population is countered by the fact that some 12 States had smaller populations when admitted to the Union, and that territorial status probably is holding down expansion.

The one argument that does have some merit is that of disproportionate representation in Congress. The argument is far less applicable in the case of Hawaii, which now has more population than half a dozen States, but it is true that Alaska would be on a par in the Senate with several States more than 100 times her size. It is precisely because of such differences, however, that the Founding Fathers devised the two-house system, with House membership apportioned on the basis of population. Alaska's total representation of three—two members in the Senate and one in the House—would not give it undue influence. Moreover, the fact that Senators serve for six years tends to encourage thinking on a national level, at least after a period of service.

Although there have been no new admissions to the Union for 38 years, it was never intended that the Union should remain static. Indeed this is a time when the United States ought to be giving an example—and an invitation—to the free world.

Lewis As Bargainer

What is the test of a shrewd bargain? That is the question raised by the terms of the agreement between the UMW and the coal operators. Superficially viewed, the wage contract appears to be a tribute to Mr. Lewis' skill as a tactician who succeeded in outmaneuvering the Government and the operators. True, he did not obtain all that he asked for, but no doubt he got more than he expected in the form of direct and indirect wage increases, and considerably more than the steel workers were able to obtain in their recent agreement. Moreover, while Mr. Lewis agreed to drop the "willing and able" clause from the wage contract, the union shop is to be continued "to the extent and in the manner permitted by law." Presumably that means retention of the union shop, pending a final court decision as to its legality—challenged because the UMW has not complied with the requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act in respect to union shop elections. Mr. Lewis will also tighten his control over administration of the welfare fund under the new agreement.

Yes, the contract looks good, from the viewpoint of the miners. Against its benefits, of course, they have to count the cost of workless days and a prolonged period of part-time work. However, a good part of those losses would have been inevitable, anyway, even if there had been peace in the coal fields, because the industry is not able to find markets for all the coal that would be produced if miners worked full time throughout the year.

Yet we ask again: Has the UMW really made a shrewd bargain? In our opinion, the answer is no, for the simple reason that the cost of mining a ton of coal has again been increased. J. A. Livingston noted in his column published the other day in The Washington Post that the latest agreement will add an estimated 16½ cents per hour to miners' wages, bringing total postwar increases in pay up to 94½ cents per hour. These successive wage increases mean fewer jobs for miners, because higher prices for coal speed up mechanization of the industry to reduce mining costs, and result in the substitution of other fuels for coal.

The Lewis agreement is, in fact, a victory the rewards of which will be shortlived. From the long-range viewpoint, it means that a "sick" industry will go from bad to worse unless steps are taken to deal with the problem of overproduction constructively—in other words, to rescue the coal industry from the plight in which it finds itself because of insatiable union demands that raise coal prices, and aggravate the unemployment resulting from the displacement of coal by competing fuels.

Pettifoggery

Senator Wherry has often demonstrated his willingness to throw any kind of mud that serves a partisan purpose, but his attack upon Secretary Acheson because of the latter's request for the deportation of Valentin Gubitchev seems to set a new record in pettifoggery. While ignoring the most pertinent facts in the case, Mr. Wherry accuses the Secretary of State and Attorney General of "conspiring" in order "to free a Russian spy and appease Russia." The Senator undoubtedly knows that he is talking nonsense. Gubitchev is being deported for the simple reason that the United States does not wish to give the Soviet Union a pretext for abusing American citizens and United Nations personnel who have been or may be arrested behind the iron curtain.

So far as we can determine, this newspaper was first to suggest nearly a year ago that, if Gubitchev should be found guilty, his punishment should not exceed deportation from the country. The reason for this suggestion is clear to any informed and unprejudiced mind. Gubitchev had been a member of the United Nations secretariat for 2½ years. Of course, that did not give him diplomatic immunity. The Muscovites' blatant claim that Gubitchev could not be prosecuted because he remained an employe of the Soviet Embassy while serving the U. N. never had any substance. But it was quite obvious that if one country should make a precedent of imprisoning U. N. personnel others would follow the example. That would have exposed any U. N. commission functioning behind the iron curtain to imprisonment on trumped-up charges and possibly to torture in accord with the well-known Communist practice.

In our opinion, the State Department would have been on more solid ground if it had based its request for deportation of Gubitchev primarily on the necessity for protection of U. N. personnel. Instead, the department explained its action by saying that it did not wish any Soviet misunderstanding of the Gubitchev case to prejudice "the situation of American citizens now in Eastern Europe, including diplomatic officers and other Government officials." This is, of course, the more immediate consideration before the department and it affords ample justification for the action taken.

Senator Wherry seems to think that if Gubitchev was to be only deported, he should never have been put on trial. But in the absence of any international court that can try U. N. personnel, it was necessary to establish Gubitchev's guilt in an American court to rid the U. N. of a spy. The Government has accomplished its purpose; nothing would be gained from locking Gubitchev in an American prison, and a great deal might be lost. Unquestionably Moscow propagandists will distort the incident, as they do everything else. But we doubt that this propaganda will be half as valuable to them as the ruthless partisan attack that Senator Wherry and some of his colleagues have launched against the director of our foreign policy because he has followed the dictates of common sense.

Fly-By-Night Schools

The President's recent request for a crackdown on veterans' education abuses has run into a barrage of propaganda. The National Federation of Private School Associations has unleashed a campaign vilifying the Veterans' Administration. Charging "gross inefficiency" and asserting that "VA underlings must be put in their place," the association declaims: "To enforce its arbitrary orders, VA wages a 'war of nerves' against the schools, by continued harassment and withholding of payments such as never appeared in previous dealings between Government and business." This sort of name-calling is designed to mislead Congress as to the real meaning of what the President asks.

No legitimate school, and no veteran honestly taking vocational training, has anything to fear from the report prepared by Veterans' Administrator Gray and Budget Director Pace. This report is directed against the fly-by-night institutions which have sprung up largely for the purpose of cashing in on the GI Bill of Rights. It is significant that two thirds of the trade and vocational schools below college level have come into existence since passage of the GI bill. Since 1947 the number of veterans enrolled in such schools has increased from 20 to 31 percent of the total taking training under the GI bill.

The trouble is that there are no uniform standards for such schools, many of which have from 90 to 100 percent veteran enrollment. Staffs of the State agencies charged under the law with approving these schools often are hopelessly inadequate. Just to take one example: courses in barbering vary in length from 11 to 104 weeks. Moreover, some schools have used flagrantly misleading advertising to entice veterans into overcrowded trades. These rackets have played into the hands of veterans using subsistence payments as a dole.

The correctives recommended in the report are mild enough, and indeed they suggest that the VA has been remiss in not suggesting them earlier. They call merely for the prescription of minimum training standards and Federal grants to help States administer them; for a requirement that schools must report promptly when veterans discontinue courses to avoid overpayment; for continuation of the ban on training in schools established less than one year; and for no extension of the July 25, 1951, deadline for initial training. These reasonable precautions, which would work no hardship on schools giving genuine training, commend themselves to the support of veterans and veteran organizations interested in protecting the GI bill from debasement by grafters. We hope that Congress likewise will resist the protests of the fast-talking proponents of courses in sword swallowing and how to become a diving helmet salesman in 543 easy lessons.

No Place For Dummies

We hope that the movement to modernize our electoral machinery will not be abandoned because of the present setback due to a combination of special interests. Perhaps the amendment can be further improved. No one has supposed that it is perfect. But the facts that stand out most strikingly are that the present system gives votes cast for one candidate to another, puts a premium on fraud, concentrates presidential election campaigns in a few doubtful States, gives a great advantage to special pressure groups, and makes it possible for individual electors to thwart the will of the people. In the face of these critical weaknesses the fight for electoral reform cannot be abandoned. It must go forward with attempts to meet the criticism that has been raised.

There are some who feel that the resolution offered by Representative Coudert offers a better approach than the Lodge-Gossett resolution. Instead of dividing the electoral votes of each State among the candidates in proportion to their popular votes, Mr. Coudert would have electors chosen in the same manner as are members of Congress. In other words, one elector would be named from each congressional district and two at large in each State. As under the Lodge-Gossett resolution, the evils of block voting would be abolished. This plan might also minimize the conflict between the President and Congress because they would both be elected by the same constituencies.

But the Coudert resolution has the grave defect of retaining individual electors. Under it the people would still be voting for "dummies" instead of presidential candidates, and we cannot help thinking that electors nominated and elected on a local basis would be less inclined than electors chosen on a State-wide basis to play the role of Charlie McCarthys. There would be a strong temptation for such electors to break away from the instructions of their national party and use their own discretion in casting their electoral votes.

Any amendment to the Constitution in the year 1950 which would deny the people a chance to vote for the actual candidates of their choice and be certain of having the votes counted that way falls tragically short of the objective that should be sought. Mr. Coudert says that his plan is the one advocated by Hamilton, Jefferson and Madison. But the founding fathers were trying frankly to prevent the people from electing the President. Today the first reason for changing the existing system is to confirm the right of the people to elect the President without the intervention of dummies who might change the result. We cannot help thinking that this reform effort must continue to be grounded on the idea behind the Lodge-Gossett resolution.

Central Transfer

Washington's School Board has resolved a knotty problem in transferring Central High School to Negro use. In any such situation it is not possible to be completely fair to all persons involved, and the decision here was doubly difficult because of the emotions and tensions that had arisen during nearly a year of delay. In this instance it is the white students now attending Central who will be incopvenienced; the large night school program also will be displaced. But at least there is plenty of capacity in other white high schools to absorb these students and the night school program without overcrowding. This was not the case in the Negro schools. Inevitably some students were being shortchanged in the jamming at Cardozo High School which required three shifts a day. The transfer will permit the abandonment of the ancient Cardozo building and at the same time probably save some millions of dollars of expense in building new Negro schools.

"Evidence Of Contempt"

Your "Evidence of Contempt" of March 7, like so many of your other editorials on labor matters, is a dangerous compound of venom and ignorance.

First, following Senator Taft's angry lead, you believed "that the Department of Justice had been negligent in not submitting the kind of evidence that would have been convincing" of contempt. Then someone (an apologetic Mr. Morrison?) having explained to you that that evidence "might have confirmed the UMW's contention," you approve its suppression.

What actually, if perhaps unwittingly, you and Mr. Morrison advocate are these noxious doctrines: (1) Contempt is proved where an injunction fails; (2) a union is responsible for the unauthorized acts of its membership exercising basic, constitutional rights; (3) a court may not coerce persons to work for the private profit of others but may coerce a union to coerce persons to work for the private profit of others.

Your eloquent concern for "the national health and safety" is less than persuasive. Had Judge Keech—with your enthusiastic approval and that of countless others who have been hysterically shrieking national emergency since last October—ignored elementary rules of law and evidence, the UMW might have been bankrupted, but so would the Nation's coal bins.

Perhaps you will one day accept and adjust to the obvious fact, so well stated by Justice Frankfurter, that the labor injunction is an ineffective, discredited "weapon in American industrial conflicts. It does not work. It neither mines coal, nor moves trains, nor makes clothing. As an adjuster of industrial conflict the injunction has been an utter failure. It has been used as a short cut—but it has not cut anything, except to cut off labor from confidence in the rule of law and of the courts as its impartial organs. No disinterested student of American industry, or of the American law, can have the slightest doubt that, beginning with the Debs case, the use of labor injunctions has predominantly been a cumulative influence of discord in our national life." HENRY KAISER.

Sothoron Bill

The passage of the Sothoron bill to "reorganize" government in Prince Georges County is a slap in the face to those citizens who earnestly seek to save their community from becoming to Washington what Cicero was to Chicago. Most of those who opposed this bill are registered Democrats, deeply loyal to the fundamental principles of the National Democratic Party. They are concerned lest those principles suffer locally.

When Senator Sothoron publicly said that he expected 50 or 60 to attend the hearing on his bill, when he was confronted by hundreds of citizens opposing it, when the only ones who spoke in favor were obvious "plants" of the party machine, when the Senator then says "no one" opposes his bill and proceeds to force it on the community, one asks oneself, "Whom does he think he is fooling?"

If they only knew it, the "manager" form of government is the key to heaven for machine politicians who get control of it—as Kansas City found out some years ago after adopting one of the most perfect of charters.

We citizens, in turn, must not fool ourselves that the "manager" form in itself will cure our ills.

We must be organized and willing to run if before we get it. Our first step must be to perfect a citizens organization for political action in Prince Georges County.

What we want is to place our increasingly complex problems of county government in the hands of men and women who will face them squarely, assign their solution to competent employes, feel their responsibility to the whole citizenry, and not fool themselves or anybody else as to what they are doing or why.

"Attlee's Boner"

I have read your March 4 editorial describing the transfer of Mr. John Strachey from Food to the War Office as stupidity. Believe me, millions of the boys here who fought in the last war quite agree with you. I myself would not like to express my thoughts for fear of this paper becoming a blazing fire. These are the things we have to put up with after we fought a six years war. It is no use me telling you about the rationing question. I guess you know quite enough of this matter. FRED FRYER, Blackburn, England.

"Loyalty Files"

In your March 6 editorial "Loyalty Files" you defended the President's right to refuse to release files to an investigating committee of the Senate. You state that the directive to produce by subpena amounts to a direct legislative challenge of executive authority.

The standing rules of the Senate, Sec. 134 (A), state that a committee, including a subcommittee, of the Senate has the right to acquire by subpena books, papers and documents as it deems advisable and each such committee may make investigations into any matter within its jurisdiction. This particular rule was included in the Reorganization Act of 1946 and signed by President Truman.

Senator Ferguson's amendment was intended to leave no doubt in anyone's mind that the subpena procedure was the committee's right.

You say that the President should not even respond to the subpena. The subpena was not directed at the President as you imply. He need not be involved unless he chooses to step in.

You label Senator McCarthy's charges absurd before the investigation has even begun. I don't want a witch hunt, but communism is an insidious menace to everything we stand for. Let's not have a whitewash.

Flaws In Kennan's Formula

The Washington Post is to be complimented on publishing in its February 26 issue Mr. Kennan's Reader's Digest article, "Is War with Russia Inevitable?"

It is reassuring to be authoritatively told that our policy can be based on these assumptions: Russia is not planning war. Unlike Hitler, Stalin's strategy of conquest is not based on armed attack, but counts on revolution from within non-Communist countries. It moves only as the time is ripe. Currently it is directed chiefly at under-developed areas of eastern Europe and Asia.

Russia fears attack.

The Russian A-bomb makes the outlook no worse than before.

The H-bomb does not help.

Most of us, I think, will find the basic elements of Mr. Kennan's policy sound, if he would agree that they are adequately described as:

1. Make the spread of communism improbable. Take risks for peace.

2. Reassure peoples in countries feeling Communist pressure.

3. Perfect democracy in the United States. Keep our self-respect.

4. Act in a spirit of justice and good will.

5. Strengthen the United Nations.

But Mr. Kennan's presentation of the first two points of this policy is, I think, unfortunately fogged in a belligerent atmosphere which tends to nullify the basic soundness of the whole structure. It seems to me that the effectiveness of our efforts for peace will be reduced to the extent that this belligerence dominates our thinking and action.

Countries under Communist pressure will not be reassured by an arms race led by the United States. They will not find security, military or otherwise, in the knowledge that their countries would be the battleground in any attempt to protect them from communism by military means.

Mr. Kennan's policy with respect to communism and his four points for security would ring true if expressed wholly in constructive and friendly terms. Our foreign policy must not be anti-Communist per se. It should be to prevent war by removing the causes of war to the extent this lies in our power.

Mr. Kennan says the things which might cause war in the present situation are, (a) Russia's fear of attack, (b) an accident resulting from tension between armed forces or emphasis on national prestige, and (c) misunderstanding which results from Russia being so largely shut off from the rest of the world.

Maintaining a "military posture" with armed forces in Europe will not alleviate the danger from any of these sources. But there are concrete steps which can be taken. I think the recently published Quaker proposals for peace do tend to overcome the causes of war listed by Mr. Kennan. At the same time they are entirely consistent with the basic objectives set forth by him.

Briefly, the Quaker proposals include major emphasis on President Truman's Point IV program of technical aid to underdeveloped areas, including those within the Communist sphere of influence; reducing export restrictions and cultivating both trade and cultural relations with Russia and her satellites; working to unify Germany and admit her to the United Nations; strengthening and making more use of the United Nations and its affiliate organizations; working for international disarmament (not only for A-bomb control); and working for world government.

Such a program does not require full agreement with Russia; but it would not preclude talks with Stalin. Nor is it a "vainglorious scheme for changing human nature". On the contrary, it maintains a "sense of proportion and Christian humility." It would enable us to "go about international business with heads high and eyes clear" as many of us cannot do with the H-bomb in the making and militarism dominating our foreign policy.

Split Over The Saar

By Andre Visson

Europe's Defeat

GERMAN political leaders in Bonn last week denounced the French-Saar agreement signed in Paris as a defeat for the idea of organizing western Europe. The trouble is that the hue and cry raised in western Germany over the French-Saar pact constitutes a much greater defeat for the idea of western European unity than the criticized pact.

Everyone agrees—in Paris and in Bonn, as well as in Washington—that French-German understanding and cooperation is the cornerstone of a western European union. And all diplomatic observers have been unanimous in stressing that western Europe's best chance was the mutual esteem and confidence between the French Foreign Minister, Robert Schuman, and the Western German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer. Both are Christian Democrats and long-time personal friends. Both have been eager to find a basis for lasting cooperation between their respective countries within the framework of a united western Europe. Both have been working toward that goal, undisturbed by the difficulties of their task and the criticisms showered upon them at home.

Now, for the first time, M. Schuman has ground for questioning Dr. Adenauer's good faith. In his criticisms of the French-Saar pact, Dr. Andenauer declared that M. Schuman made him certain promises with regard to the future status of the Saar which were not kept. French diplomatic sources deny that M. Schuman ever made such promises to Dr. Adenauer, and those who know M. Schuman know that he is not a man to break his word.

FURTHERMORE, in expressing his indignation over the French-Saar Pact, Chancellor Adenauer used what in diplomatic language can be described as a "pressure," but which in plain English has the less delicate name of threat. Dr. Adenauer, echoing the more violent threats of the German Social Democratic leader, Dr. Kurt Schumacher, let it be understood that should France stick to her pact with the Saar, Germany will refuse to join the Council of Europe in Strasbourg!

This shows the incredible progress in German self-assurance. Only a year ago the invitation to join the Council of Europe seemed one of the main immediate objectives for political leaders in Western Germany. Now they have developed such confidence in the future, they are so sure of the place that will be theirs in the Europe of tomorrow, that they make conditions for condescending to take a seat with other European nations in the Council of Europe!

This writer is not too surprised at this German talk. Last August he was on the balcony of "Maison Rouge" at Strasbourg, overlooking the Place Kleber, where over 10,000 people had gathered to hear the eloquent appeals for European unity by Winston Churchill of Great Britain, Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, Paul Reynaud of France, and other prominent Europeans. Two Germans who were also on the balcony shrugged their shoulders: "What sense does all this talk make so long as we are not in the Council of Europe? Europe cannot be made without us!"

It is perfectly true that western Europe cannot be made without Germany any more than it can be made without Great Britain. And the great tragedy of western Europe is that Great Britain is unwilling to accept a western European union that would not be a part of the greater sterling area, and Germany conscious of its importance in the Europe of tomorrow, is in no hurry to help western European counties build their community. She is sure that her bargaining power will increase and that five years from now she will be in a position to make conditions which cannot even be imagined today.

BUT WHAT is this controversy over the Saar in which the German leaders considered it important enough to show their hand? The Saar is a small territory covering only 738 square miles, with a population of 926,000—predominantly German. Although in the course of centuries the Saar has been subjected to French rule, its inhabitants have remained German; they speak German and they feel German.

No French leader — and M. Schuman less than any—would ever dream of trying to turn the Saarlanders into Frenchmen. No Frenchman is foolish enough to imagine that the annexation of the Saar would increase France's security. All the French want from the Saar is coal, which they badly need and which would at least in part cover the damage caused to France in the last war. The French wanted a 50-year lease on the Saar coal mines because they have invested 12 billion francs in them during the past two years and plan to invest 25 billion francs more by 1954. They accepted the clause specifying that the final status of the Saar will be determined by the German peace settlement, and this has been approved by both Washington and London.

But the German leaders in Bonn refuse to be satisfied with the "peace treaty" clause. They just do not want the coal mines ceded to France. Perhaps they do not even see why France is entitled to any economic reparations!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

ECA Nations Supplying Russia

By Drew Pearson

ONE side of the Marshall Plan that has been hushed up is the way Russian satellite countries and even Russia itself are benefiting from United States help.

This isn't happening behind Uncle Sam's back, but right under his nose. Critical supplies such as tool steel, Diesel engines, locomotives and ball bearings are being shipped to Russia by the same 16 nations that draw Marshall Plan aid from the United States. The unbelievable fact is that 95 trade treaties now exist between the Marshall Plan countries and the Soviet satellites.

Though the State Department knows what is in these trade treaties, publication of the facts has been discouraged. Not even a United States Senator—Nevada's dry George Malone—could crack through the secrecy barriers. He was allowed to thumb through some treaties, but was warned not to make public the contents.

Some treaties were in foreign languages that he couldn't understand, while others were considered so secret he wasn't permitted even to look at them. Even the treaties he was permitted to see were brought to his office by a State Department courier who hung on to them while Malone inspected them.

Senator Malone said afterward he had found that Russia was being supplied everything from railroad rails and rolling mill equipment in hydrogen peroxide.

"We are simply making the same mistake over again," Malone warns. "Twice in 15 years we are arming our potential enemies. We assisted Japan in arming for World War II by shipping petroleum and scrap iron. Then, after they hit Pearl Harbor, we sent our boys into the Pacific to catch that scrap iron coming back out of Japanese guns.

"We are now doing the same thing on a larger scale. We are indirectly furnishing Russia and the satellites with the processed and manufactured supplies which they need for World War III."

Malone's answer is an amendment to the Marshall Plan, blocking aid to any country that does business behind the Iron Curtain.

Short Haul

HOME-GOING traffic was surging up West Executive ave., just west of the White House. A cop strode importantly to the middle of the street and halted the cars.

Two black limousines purred down the winding White House driveway and out into Pennsylvania ave. in front of the tooting and panting line of traffic. A woman waved gaily, "Hi, Harry," she shouted.

This is a nightly ritual as President Truman is driven half a block "home" to Blair House across the street. The Secret Service will not allow him to walk the few steps across Pennsylvania ave.

Note—Ever since Truman took such a ribbing for running through red lights on the night of the Jackson Day dinner, the Presidential limousine has been meekly stopping for the traffic lights on the nightly drive home.

Stockpiling 'Way Behind

IN A secret report to Congress, the Munitions Board has warned that the United States is dangerously behind schedule in stockpiling strategic material.

It was supposed to take only five years to accumulate whatever critical materials would be needed in case of war. Yet nearly four years have passed and the stockpiles are still less than half complete.

The exact figures were spelled out in the secret report, handed to a Senate subcommittee behind closed doors at the Pentagon. Since these figures may not be known to the Russians, this column will not mention them.

Generally speaking, however, the United States has fallen behind in stockpiling all strategic materials, but the most important are manganese, rubber and copper.

Manganese is so essential that steel can't be manufactured without it, and, in the past, Russia has supplied most of our needs. This source has now been shut off, and American steel mills are desperately seeking manganese in India, Africa and South America

Though more than one million tons were imported last year, this was still not enough. Domestic production of manganese dropped to less than 125,000 tons, and poor transportation held down the shipments from Brazil. Thus the lion's share came from India and from the African Gold Coast—both vulnerable in case of war.

The stockpile of raw rubber is also so low that Senator Lyndon Johnson, Texas Democrat, suggested storing synthetic rubber as well. The munitions Board's rubber experts replied that synthetic rubber deteriorates too fast—though this is denied by the industry.

One reason for the low stockpiles, the board explained, was that too much buying boosted prices beyond range. The board also complained that Congress hasn't granted enough money to keep up the five-year schedule.

NOTE—The same subcommittee that is studying strategic stockpiling will also do some stockpiling itself. Headed by efficient Senator Lester Hunt of Wyoming, the subcommittee will stockpile legislation. In other words, legislation that may be needed in case of war will be written in advance, and be kept ready to rush through Congress without delay. This will include legislation for civilian defense, Selective Service and industrial mobilization.

Matter of Fact

Taft Filling Strong Hand for '52

By Stewart Alsop

IT IS probably too early to predict the outcome of the fight for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in Ohio. Yet all observers seem convinced that victory is in the bag for the amiable political hack, State Auditor Joseph Ferguson.

It is undoubtedly too early to predict the outcome of the Ohio elections in the fall. Yet all observers seem equally convinced that Senator Robert A. Taft will beat Ferguson unless the Ohio voters have gone mad.

It is certainly far too early to predict the outcome of the 1952 Republican presidential nomination. Yet if the two probabilities stated above are translated into fact, it is obvious on the face of it that Senator Taft will have a huge lead on all contenders for the nomination.

Ferguson's chief rival is Mayor Michael DiSalle of Toledo. But the most powerful portions of the Democratic organization in Ohio are lined up solid behind Ferguson (who, as a malleable political regular, was the first organization choice), and DiSalle is given little or no chance.

Ferguson, according to those who have followed his career, is something of a caricature of the genus American politician. He is a small turkey cock of a man, with a real genius for the broad smile and the warm handshake; he is said to know an incredibly large number of the Ohio voters on a first-name basis. But he is no speaker, is virtually illiterate (his fierce battles with the English language are classics of their kind), and he has never pretended that his interests extend very far beyond the simple aim of getting himself elected to office.

Labor Unenthusiastic

IT IS thus believed highly unlikely that Ferguson could beat Senator Taft, who (whatever one may think of his political views) is obviously a man of real national stature. It is true that Taft won a very narrow victory in 1944, when he was challenged by a comparative unknown. But on this occasion Taft has a number of striking advantages, aside from the caliber of his opponent.

In the first place, having failed to nominate their favorite, Farm Leader Murray Lincoln, the labor leaders are by no means enthusiastic about Ferguson. They will work for him, and there will be a pretty fat dollop of labor money at his disposal. But the enthusiasm and drive from the labor men and their liberal allies, which could have been expected in a Taft-Lincoln campaign, will certainly be lacking in the prospective Taft-Ferguson campaign.

In the second place, this is an off-year election, and this time there will be no Roosevelt coattails for Taft's opponent to cling to. Moreover, it is universally recognized that the Ohio election is the most crucial in the country, and all eyes will be upon it. It will be surprising if, under such circumstances, the Ohio voters substitute a political hack for a man of Taft's undoubted prestige.

In the third place (although his supporters like to talk about "$1 contributions from the little guys"), Taft will have all the financial support he will know what to do with, and more. According to all reports, Republican money, which has been trickling with such agonizing slowness into the national Republican hope chest, has reached flood proportions in Ohio.

Chalking Up Some Debts

THIS FACT has a further significance. Taft is surrounded by conservative Republicans in the Midwest whose political lives are at stake: Wiley of Wisconsin, Millikin of Colorado, Capehart of Indiana, Hickenlooper of Iowa, Donnell of Missouri and Gurney of South Dakota, to name a few. And it is reliably reported that Taft's already overflowing political coffers have been opened to a number of these threatened Republicans.

The meaning of this is obvious. There have been no "deals." But it is a sound political rule not to bite the hand that feeds you. The mere act of winning in Ohio will make Taft the man to beat for the 1952 nomination. Add to this the fact that Taft's help in 1950 will almost automatically commit a whole series of State organizations to his side at the 1952 convention, and it becomes clear that Taft may logically hope for commitments on a majority of the delegate votes long before the convention is called to order.

Thus the logic of the situation clearly suggests that Taft is already an odds-on favorite for the Republican nomination. Yet politics is rarely strictly logical. And Taft clearly suffers from two major disabilities.

Three Straight Losses

IN THE first place, although Taft himself is fond of pointing out that he has never lost an election, it is almost an article of faith among many Republicans that "Bob Taft would make a wonderful President, but he could never win the election."

In the second place, it must be borne in mind that the conservative-isolationist forces which Taft symbolizes (although he himself is less conservative and less isolationist than he is sometimes pictured) have been beaten three times handrunning in the last three nominating conventions. Thus there is always the chance of a counter-boom developing, for an Eisenhower, or a Warren, or a Cabot Lodge, to halt the Taft bandwagon.

But there are no real signs of anything of the sort on the horizon. And if the Ohio situation has been accurately interpreted, it is a great deal later than the anti-Taft forces in the Republican Party appear to think.

Our Political Economy

Feast and Famine

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

ONCE more in China, millions are threatened with famine, while in the United States it is estimated that surplus crops, filling bins and elevators and even the holds of Victory ships, are costing the American taxpayer $1000 a minute in storage and deterioration.

To the American farmer, worried over his declining income, and to the taxpayer, worried over the cost of price supports, these stories do not add up.

Two years ago there was a spate of alarming books which claimed that there was a permanent, perhaps an incurable, world food shortage. In the words of one author, "we had better enjoy our steaks now, since there will be many less of them within the lifetime of most Americans."

World population—so the argument ran—is growing at the rate of 50,000 people a day. At the same time, human greed and ignorance have conspired to mine the soil, overgraze the grasslands, strip forests and denude the watersheds. The result is a growing and probably insoluble world food shortage.

Some of the facts seem to bear this out. In Asia and parts of South America, hundreds of millions of human beings live on the verge of starvation. On the other hand, Argentina, New Zealand, Australia, Canada and the United States cannot find enough customers for the food they raise.

Like crazy pieces in a jigsaw puzzle, the two parts of the picture must fit together. But how?

Erosion Outstripped

THE population alarmists never distinguish between Asia and Latin America on the one hand, and Europe, North America and Australia on the other.

In the latter regions, the birth rate has been declining for nearly a century. At the same time—despite the more emotional conservationists—farm productivity has outstripped by a considerable margin the effects of erosion and overgrazing, destructive as these have been.

It is estimated that the yield of wheat per acre in the United States is today 18 percent above the average for 1935-1939, even though farm labor has dropped. In the same period, the yield of potatoes has risen 22 percent; of corn, 31 percent.

This country has never had to practice intensive farming. Most of our technological improvements have been aimed at saving labor, not increasing yields.

In spite of this, farm output quadrupled between 1870 and 1940. In fact, sometime around 1916 it passed the point where farmers could sell all that they were capable of raising.

It is important for us to make a distinction in our own minds between biological need and effective demand. True, Asia is hungry, and we have food surpluses. But in China or India, capital is so scarce and productivity so low that these people have almost nothing to exchange for our surplus grains.

It would be no solution for us to ship these as a gift. Given their subsistence standards of living, increasing their food supply would merely tend to increase their population. It would not relieve their hunger.

What is needed in these countries is to raise effective demand by a technological revolution in both agriculture and industry.

With the Industrial Revolution, Europe was able to double her population in less than a century. At the same time, her people ate better than they ever had.

It does not, of course, follow that this would be as easy for Asia. Europe drew much of her food from the United States, and was also able to exploit large colonial areas.

Cultivation Spurred

WHEN a country industrializes, its death rate tends to decline much faster than its birth rate. This makes for rapid population growth.

Presumably we could expect this result in both China and India. But in all countries with rising production, living standards have tended to increase faster than population.

With the gradual rise in living standards we would see an effective demand for food. When people are not merely hungry but productive, there is incentive for better cultivation of the land. Eventually we could also expect these countries to import food from such surplus areas as Argentina and the United States.

If we did no more today than share our food with them, this would be at best a self-defeating act. What they need from us is the agricultural and industrial know-how to help them work out their own solutions.

Food experts at the Hot Springs Conference came to much this same conclusion. Their pronouncements were three: that food enough can be produced in the world to give all peoples the food they need; that this task is primarily the responsibility of each nation; but that it can be done more effectively if the nations help each other do it.

'Shotgun' Checks Find Many Ills

By Alton L. Blakeslee

NEW YORK.—Would you like, in 20 to 30 minutes, to be checked for 10 diseases that could kill or blind, or spoil years of your life?

You may get the chance soon in your own town. The cost—probably nothing.

One chest X-ray could be examined for suspicious signs of tuberculosis, an abnormal heart or shadows that could mean lung cancer.

One sample of blood could be checked for signs of diabetes, anemia or syphilis.

Your blood pressure could be taken at the same time.

A urinalysis would check on signs of the killer kidney disease, nephritis, and also for diabetes.

Your eyes could be tested for glaucoma, the disease that often blinds when it is detected too late. You could be checked for defects in vision or hearing.

This kind of multiple checkup, quick and easy, is a new idea in health protection. It is spreading fast, and proving worthwhile.

It's like hunting for diseases with a shotgun, instead of a rifle.

The rifle approach is fairly old. Examples are getting a chest X-ray for TB only, or a blood test for diabetes only.

The multiple checkup is a logical outgrowth. Why not look for a number of diseases when a person shows up for a screening test?

The idea had its first large-scale tryout last fall in San Jose, Calif., in a cooperative venture of the Santa Clara County Medical Society, San Jose City Health Department and California State Department of Public Health.

There, 495 employes in four industries were screened for diabetes, tuberculosis, nephritis, heart disease and syphilis. Those with any suspicious signs were referred to their own doctors for diagnosis and treatment.

The tests can be one big gun in a stepped-up war on chronic diseases, declares Dr. A. L. Chapman, medical director of the Public Health Service's division of chronic diseases.

About 25 million Americans suffer from some form of chronic disease, he said. Late discovery often means serious trouble or a death warrant.

The multiple tests mean more diseases can be found early, at less overhead expense for clinics and less personnel.

"The patient always wins," Dr. Chapman said. "If nothing is wrong, there is no cost to him. If something wrong is found, he is referred to his family physician. He gains all the benefits of early diagnosis and treatment.

"Literally, what is happening is that epidemics of chronic diseases are being uncovered."

Of every 1000 apparently well people, it is estimated there will be 976 cases of disease or physical trouble, Dr. Chapman added.

"Twenty-two will have diabetes, 20 glaucoma, 75 anemia, 18 or more tuberculosis, 48 syphillis, 38 high blood pressure, at least 39 will have heart disease. Another 250 will have a partial hearing loss, 266 vision defects, and 200 will be too fat. Obesity is downright dangerous, for it is associated with diabetes and high blood pressure, and aggravates heart disease."

Later there might be a good blood test to spot cancer. Or tests for serious forms of heart trouble. The screening some day might even be able to hunt for people with signs of mental or emotional illness.

HOW TO MAKE a little money go a long way is a matter of brains, brass and the willingness to take a chance. Two articles this week tell how it's done. In Pageant, a high school teacher reveals how he and his wife live like the country club set on $4200 a year. In the Saturday Evening Post, two English college boys describe their travels all through America on $20 last summer. They returned to New York with $21.65.

The students, one the son of an Episcopal bishop, came here planning to work their way around the country. When they discovered that it was against the law for visitors to work, they set out anyway, and by a hilarious mixture of American hospitality and their own ingenuity, came out ahead by $1.65. They hitchhicked, of course, and spent the night in jail upon occasion (voluntarily), lived on bread and cheese at times and on thick steak at others. Main source of revenue was radio give-away programs. They didn't count the Post article in their reckoning, either. By the time they were paid for this, the two boys must have been way ahead.

Main element stressed in both stories is the willingness to take "crazy" chances. George O'Neill, author of "How to Live Beyond Your Income," decided during the war to abandon his higher paying job and do what he really wanted—teach. Starting out at $3600, the O'Neills promptly rented, unfurnished, a fine duplex at $3000 a year. By the time they got through subletting rooms on the top floor and their own apartment in summer, the bill for rent was only $16.66 a month.

Other advice given by O'Neill to those with budget problems is to buy things from people who don't want them, make use of the barter system, cash in on hobbies and, when vacationing, "go where other vacationers don't go."

Also in Pageant is an important story on the size and political influence of gambling in this country. Profits probably amount to more than the combined net profits of General Motors, United States Steel and American Telephone & Telegraph, says Murray Teigh Bloom. Gambling is the greatest single source of corruption of State and police officials, the greatest source of income for organized crime. Yet "there is not now a single national body studying the problem," the author points out.

MORE THAN 50 million of the country's adults bet on something at least once every six months, says a Gallup Poll. And no bet is more intriguing than a sure thing, adds Mort Weisinger in Cosmopolitan. He gives "Twenty Ways to Win a Bet," thus, I suppose, encouraging the national habit. Bet your friends you can throw a paper match in the air and have it land edgewise instead of flat. Mix pepper and salt, then bet you can remove the pepper grains again. Put a hat on the floor, then bet the owner he can't jump over, it. But before you bet, you'd better bone up on the answers.

ONE REASON women so rarely reach important executive positions has been overlooked, says Agnes Rogers in Harper's. Often they don't want the responsibility. They like being invaluable assistants for the front man. They lack self-assurance, take too humble a view of their own powers. Miss Rogers mentions several explanations for this, but the most important is they want to be liked by men. Whether in business, politics or civic affairs, the author recommends to her sex that it cease to shrink from responsibility, and set its sights a little higher.

In the first of three articles, Denfeld charges that his being fired means that national defense "is to be rigidly controlled by political appointees as distinguished from Congress." ## Hainan Iron Ore Alone Is a Prize

HAINAN ISLAND, where Nationalist troops are dug in against the threat of invasion by mainland Communist forces, is a prize worth having. Its high grade iron ore holds a key to the eventual industrialization of Southeast Asia.

Hainan means "sea-south," notes the National Geographic Society. Chinese for 2000 years, it fell to Japan early in 1939. It first yielded iron ore on a large scale to the resourceful Japanese waging World War II in the Pacific.

They brought in mine machinery and made the rugged hills of the strategic island off China's southern coast outproduce the long established Manchurian iron mines. They built airports at several points and a sheltered submarine base at Samah, near the southern tip. Since VJ-Day, however, iron ore traffic has ceased.

Hainan, nearly twice the size of New Jersey, lies in the tropical latitude of Haiti and Puerto Rico. Its 2,500,000 inhabitants are largely Chinese. Hoihow, a seaport, and Kiungshan, governing center inland, are the chief cities.

Commager Follows Transition

Crossing the Watershed Of American Thought

THE AMERICAN MIND, an Interpretation of American Thought and Character Since the 1880s. By Henry Steele Commager. Yale University Press. 476 pp. $5.

HARDY Historian Henry Steele Commager, holding that "there is a distinctively American way of thought, character and conduct," has attempted to appraise its development since the 1880s.

A considerable task, Commager performs it admirably. His volume will be read alongside Parrington's "Main Currents in American Thought."

Though it does not contain the many surprises that featured Parrington's unfinished work, Commager's book organizes the material of more recent decades and completes the former—and this is not to be construed as saying that "The American Mind" is a mere supplement or does not have its own individuality and integrity.

For Commager, the mid-'80s and '90s "constituted something of a watershed in American history and thought," with a self-confident, self-absorbed agricultural America on the one side, and on the other an urban industrial America "troubled with the problems that had long been peculiar to the Old World."

Men and Movements

THE transition is reviewed in a series of chapters, some of which revolve around individuals such as William James, Thorstein Veblen, the remarkable sociologist Lester Ward, Oliver Wendell Holmes of the Supreme Court and Roscoe Pound; and other chapters of which are centered on topics such as determinism in literature or architecture.

Writing with the historian's long view, Commager on one occasion dryly observes that "the champions of fundamentalism in the twentieth century were men and women like Sam Jones, Gypsy Smith, Billy Sunday, John Roach Stratton and Aimee Semple McPherson, who compared somewhat unfavorably with their predecessors in orthodoxy like Jonathan Edwards, Bishop Asbury, Charles Finney or even Dwight L. Moody."

In other chapters he observes that Frank Lloyd Wright has been "the first major architect since the days of the early Republic to consider the house as a whole"; that history may record that Franklin D. Roosevelt "did more to advance democracy than any President since Lincoln and as much to strengthen capitalism as any statesman since Hamilton"; and that "the cult of irrationality" in literature was "from the beginning doomed to self-destruction, for no literature built upon the quagmire of futility can survive."

Tardy Explorers

IN ANOTHER passage on literature, Commager scores a critical thrust at the novelists who explored sex in the name of psychology and "discovered little that Hawthorne had not guessed or that, in their own way, Henry James, Willa Cather and Edward Arlington Robinson did not know."

That Americans, with so heterogeneous a European background, should have so homogenous a character suggests that environment was decisive in shaping that character, Commager says.

The American character as described by foreign observers—Toqueville, Bryce and Denis Brogan—today "seem substantially the same; the differences are quantitative and material rather than qualitative and moral."

The American today has less confidence in the idea of progress than ever before. There is an atrophy of the creative instinct on the part of the average American. It is not certain that Americans as a whole are either better informed or better educated than they were in the last century.

'New Intolerance'

THERE is a growth in snobbishness and a more widespread demand for conformity, and a shift in intolerance from the religious to the political and economic spheres, with "the new intolerance" distinguished "not only by its quasi-official character but by a certain moral flabbiness, a weakening of intellectual fiber."

"The American Mind" concludes with a series of questions—can the American retain and develop the character evolved in North America, can he preserve himself from decadence and corruption, can his intelligence solve the problems of the future?

Obviously, only some future Commager can answer these questions, but the reader today can have a better understanding of his world by reading, if not always agreeing with, "The American Mind." —LEE GROVE.

AND WHEN SHE WAS BAD SHE WAS MURDERED. By Richard Starnes. Lippincott. $2.50.

MR. STARNES, a young Washington newspaperman who used to live in Alexandria, has written a light-hearted and even comic mystery about some specimens who might be presumed to infest the wainscoting of historic old houses. The story is told by an unemployed newspaperman whose highly insolent Airedale leads him into the thick of an artists-and-models murder. An oil lobbyist enters the picture with a Senate investigating committee right at his heels. This lad has a love nest across the river, and his FFV wife is in love with a Navy hero, so he, too, is an obvious murderee.

STARNES

There is a rare old doctor who solves such things when he isn't lapping up bourbon, or teaching at Charlottesville, or carving up cadavers—quite legally, of course. There is also an antique dealer who needs a bath, and a librarian who needs hormones. A good bit of Alexandria, the Potomac River and the Mount Vernon Memorial blvd. are covered before all of these people are brought into proper focus with the aid of a pirate cipher. But any dull moments that might be apparent in this synopsis are enlivened by wisecracks designed to curl the hair of the inevitable detective sergeant.

Political History Made 'Spot News'

By J. R. Wiggins

THE PRICE OF UNION. By Herbert Agar. Houghton, Mifflin. $5.

THIS is a study of American political history that is certain to be read with interest and debated with ardor.

The former editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal has set down in these pages many frank personal views on the unfolding story of American Government.

The system which he observes in action obviously is not the system struck off in the Philadelphia convention. It is a method of democratic rule so altered from that launched in 1789 that it is at once apparent that we, too, in large part, have an unwritten constitution.

Agar's writing technique gives to his work a surprisingly contemporary feel. His organization is chronological but he does not hesitate to leap nimbly down the decades beyond a critical decision under immediate examination. This method endows the remotest historical episode with the vitality of current reporting.

Agar has well-matured theories about American politics. His conclusions on the nature of and the importance of the political parties are most arresting. His appraisal of the Supreme Court is more conventional than otherwise. His estimate of Congress is not flattering to that great legislative body. His analysis of the Presidency emphasizes the flexibility and expansibility of that office and stresses the enormous powers available to the President as a party leader, whenever strong executives choose to use them.

Cause of Straddling

IT is as a history of the American political parties that the book will be chiefly remembered and debated. These instrumentalities (not provided for by the Constitution and expressly abhorred by its creators) are viewed realistically, if not cynically, by Agar.

He thinks the country learned in the Civil War crisis to mistrust political parties based on principles. It has been taught that "in a large federal nation, when a problem is passionately felt, and is discussed in terms of morals, each party may divide within itself, against itself."

Fears of this division, he believes, prompt political leaders to dodge problems, inspire the parties to take both sides of hot issues.

Our straddling parties, he concedes, have faults. "Brains and energy are lavished, not on the search for truth but on the search for bargains, for concessions which will soothe well-organized minorities, for excuses to justify delay and denial."

HERBERT AGAR
. . . The touch of a contemporary

Still, he thinks that "successful federal politics will tend to follow Calhoun's rule of 'concurrent majorities'" and that "every interest which is strong enough to make trouble must usually be satisfied before anything can be done."

It is his conclusion that:

"Obstruction, evasion, well-nigh intolerable slowness—these are the costs of America's federal union."

Constitutional Dictatorship

HE foresees a possible alternative, in this closing paragraph:

"The United States, of course, may some day attain such uniformity (or have it thrust upon her) that she will abandon her federal structure and become a centralized constitutional dictatorship; but until that happens she will be governed by concurrent majorities, by vetoes and filibusters, by parties which take both sides of every dangerous question, which are held together by the amusements and rewards of office-seeking, and which can only win an election by bringing many incompatible groups to accept a token triumph in the name of unity, instead of demanding their full 'rights' at the cost of a fight."

Not all students of American political history will see the parties as ramshackle and lacking in principle as Agar does; and not many will agree that the only alternative to this ordered disorder is some kind of "centralized constitutional dictatorship" (upon which Agar does not elaborate).

Those who long for neat and tidy party divisions on all issues no doubt are politically naive. Many will be more bothered than Agar is, however, about the effects of smothering political divisions and smudging political issues. Sometimes a mature democratic people ought to choose between alternative courses of action.

There seems small reason to worry any longer over the geographically divisive effects of such conscious choices (the country is somewhat less a federal union than it seems in Mr. Agar's estimate). The risks of city and country divisions do not seem great. Division on class lines is the worst surviving threat.

Flaw Can Be Serious

THE slow-moving "concurrent majority" method, or lack of method, may not be as adequate in the future as it has been in the past. It is not easy to be as complacent about its delays as Mr. Agar seems to be in "The Price of Union."

As one of many great powers, this country had many of its foreign policy decisions thrust upon it and made for it. As the greatest power in the world it may be forced, increasingly, to make its own choice of courses, to make its own decisions on the issues. At such junctures a system recommended chiefly by its success in avoiding, concealing, evading and smothering the lines of choice may prove to have flaws more serious than any Mr. Agar contemplates.

It will be a good thing if this book stimulates more study of the structure of our institutions. They may be more or less faulty than he finds them. At least we need to look at them more closely; not only in the light of past performance but in the light of future needs.

It would be unfair to dismiss Mr. Agar's book as though it were a tract on the anatomy of American politics. It is that, but it is enriched by some fine portraiture of the great figures of American politics. Mr. Agar writes about American politicians with the familiar touch of a contemporary. He pronounces his judgments freely upon men and measures.

The man who wrote this book obviously enjoyed writing it. He plainly took pleasure from his industrious excursions into the rich American past. And those who read it will equally enjoy their part of the bargain.

"I didn't suspect him, exactly, but I was watching him like a hawk."

A FAMOUS Virginia triangle involving Richard Randolph of Bizarre, his wife and her sister, is the subject of a forthcoming novel, "The Bizarre Sisters," by a new husband-and-wife writing team, Jay and Audrey Walz, of 403 S. Lee st., Alexandria.

Jay is assistant manager of the Washington bureau of the New York Times and is a former staff member of The Washington Post. Mrs. Walz is "Francis Bonnamy," the mystery writer, and even while working on "The Bizarre Sisters," she found time for whodunit writing.

In collaborating on the book, which will be published April 19 by Duell, Sloan & Pearce, Mrs. Walz said that she and Jay each wrote portions, then went over the other's work. It was easy, since they react to everything similarly, she said, neglecting to pun on two hearts in Walz time.

The Randolph triangle, climaxed by a trial for infanticide in which John Marshall, Patrick Henry and Alexander Campbell were counsels for the defense, was "a fine American tragedy" about which "very few people know the straight of it," Mrs. Walz said.

Hiss and Coplon

IN "Treason, The Story of Disloyalty and Betrayal in American History," Nathaniel Weyl of 1718 P st. nw., has written what is believed to be the first such book on the subject in this country. It will be published March 23 by Public Affairs Press.

Weyl, a native of New York who was graduated from Columbia University in 1931 and later studied at the London School of Economics, in 1931 coauthored with his wife, Sylvia, "Reconquest of Mexico."

"Treason" is his first book since then. Among the rascals he encountered in writing the book was Gen. James Wilkinson, commanding general of the United States Army, who between 1790 and 1804 received $38,000 from the Spanish government in payment for services as a secret agent.

Weyl's book concludes with the Hiss and Coplon cases.

Cat's Nine Lives

THROUGH the instrumentality of Duncan Emrich, chief of the Library of Congress's folklore division, and at the invitation of Librarian of Congress Luther Evans, the library has been given by Walter Van Tilburg Clark the manuscripts of "The Track of the Cat" and "The City of Trembling Leaves."

The manuscripts, now on display at the library, consist of a series of dime store notebooks and show various changes made in the writing. In the instance of "The Track of the Cat," it is revealed that the following titles were considered and discarded: "The Black Panther," "The Cat and the Shadow," "The Panther Shadow" and "The Cat."

Emrich, by the way, has signed a contract with Doubleday for a novel.

Red Letter Day

JOY ELMER MORGAN, National Education Association editor, is one of the members of the Hawthorne Centennial Committee, organized to observe next month the 100th anniversary of the publication of "The Scarlet Letter." Mark Van Doren is chairman.

Hawthorne, who was afraid the book "will be too somber" for readers, said that when he read the latter part to his wife, "It broke her heart, and sent her to bed with a grievous headache, which I look upon as a triumphant success."

War Correspondence

POKING through the books on the sidewalk table of a Washington antiquarian bookseller 15 years ago, Mrs. Lida Mayo, a partner in Alexandria's Chequire House bookshop, noticed a 50-cent item. It was "Campaigns of a Non-Combatant," by "Gath," published in 1866 in New York and then generally forgotten.

"Gath" (George Alfred Townsend) in this book was a sort of Civil War Ernie Pyle who later wrote a Washington column for out-of-town papers and died in 1914.

Mrs. Mayo found the "Campaigns" vivid reporting. Under the title of "Rustics in Rebellion: A Yankee Reporter on the Road to Richmond, 1861-1865," the book is being republished April 22 by the University of North Carolina Press. Editor of the book is—Mrs. Mayo.

Magnificent Female's Story All Ready for the Cameras

Edited by John Barkham

UNTAMED. By Helga Moray. Putnam. 314 pp. $3.

AFRICA has a way of doing things to a person. And when the person happens to be a "magnificent female" like red-headed Katie Kildare, there's no saying what the Dark Continent won't do. In this Technicolor tale, it does them all.

Katie was a proud Irish beauty, "half angel, half devil," who went to South Africa a century ago as the Boers were trekking to the hinterland. Many loved her, but she reserved her passion for Paul van Riebeck, a "blond giant of a man;" who was leading the Boers in their fight for political freedom. In no time at all, Katie is facing charging Zulu warriors inside a Boer stockade, a far cry from her native potato patches.

Miss Moray is clearly no stranger to South Africa, but she tosses so many ingredients into her story as to make the concoction a trifle indigestible. With a little cutting here and there, her script is all ready for filming, right down to the final silhouette at the end.

PAGEANT OF THE POPES, by John Farrow. Sheed & Ward. 394 pp. $4.50.

TO tell the story of all the Popes, from Peter to Pius XII, in one volume is a task that might cause the stoutest heart to quail. (The standard histories run to about a hundred volumes and encompass more than five million words.) John Farrow has winnowed that mountain of material into a readable book by concentrating on the salient and significant figures in the history of the Church.

The book suffers from a certain heaviness of matter and manner that is not altogether inseparable from the subject, but Mr. Farrow compensates for this by his scrupulous fairness. He does not close his eyes to the venality of some of the "tonsured scoundrels" who once held office in the Church, or to the "wild profligacy" that for a time became the tempo of the papal court.

So, even if the going is sometimes heavy, the book will reward the persevering reader with its wealth of fascinating, little known material. It makes especially appropriate reading, of course, in this Holy Year.

Book Lunch Features Four Leading Authors

ONE OF America's best known women novelists, a story-writing naval officer, a crusader against communism and the creator of two nonfiction best sellers will be the speakers at the next Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon, to be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler on Friday, March 24.

Margaret Culkin Banning, the woman novelist, is the author of nearly 30 books and of many magazine stories. Her latest book, "Give Us Our Years," will be published by Harper's March 29.

Comdr. William J. Lederer, United States Navy, is the author of a book that is taking Washington by storm—the hilarious "All the Ship's at Sea," just published by William Sloan Associates, Inc. Commander Lederer is also a magazine contributor.

James Burnham, well known for his "The Managerial Revolution" of several years ago, has attracted considerable attention, and very favorable reviews, with his new book, "The Coming Defeat of Communism," published by John Day.

Clare Barnes, jr., is an author who lets pictures do most of the talking. His "White Collar Zoo" and "Home Sweet Zoo" not only rank in third and fourth place among best-selling nonfiction books; they have started a new fad, with a host of imitators.

A New Classic of French Canada

By Sterling North

THE OUTLANDER. By Germaine Guevremont. Whittlesey House. 290 pp. $3.

HERE is a story of French Canada worthy to stand beside Louis Hemon's gentle classic, "Maria Chapdelaine."

Like Hemon's story, it is unpretentious and unsensational, seeking to convey the mood and pattern of a pastoral existence guided by the church, village gossip, the changing seasons and the elemental needs of a vestigial people.

MME. GUEVREMONT

Madame Guevremont, who writes for the magazine Canadien, was born in the Laurentides north of Montreal. Her first writing was done as a correspondent from the village of Sorel for the Montreal Gazette. Thus she comes honestly by her knowledge of and sympathy for the farmers, hunters and fishermen who live along the St. Lawrence River.

She has wisely refrained from over-plotting her strong but simple story of Didace Beauchemin and his family, realizing instinctively that the ordered life of the community is in itself sufficient to give the novel form.

The catalytic agent dropped into this quiet backwater is the character for whom the novel is named. He is known only as "The Stranger" from the moment he knocks at the door of Beauchemin's farmhouse one evening in autumn until he leaves without warning during a night of the following spring.

It is the influence exerted by this handsome, vital, restless, courageous wanderer which subtly alters the lives of all the other characters in the book.

Too Honest to Wed

TO Didace Beauchemin, he becomes almost a son; and it is The Stranger who introduces the widower to an Acadian woman who becomes his second wife. To Amable, Didace's weak and whining son, the red-headed outlander seems first an enemy, later a stimulating challenge. Amable's timid wife gains her first self-confidence when The Stranger lets her hear the only words of praise she has ever known.

Admired by the whole community which at first mistrusted him, The Stranger could have married shy Angelina Desmarais, the catch of the neighborhood. But he is well aware that he is too restless for monogamy; that all his life he will occasionally go off on Homeric fighting and drinking sprees. He is too honest and kindly to burden Angelina with such a husband.

No summary of the story, and no thumbnail sketches of the very real and convincing characters, can give more than an inkling of the magic of this book.

It is imbued with the power of the deep-flowing and treacherous river. It is orchestrated to the haunting and lonely trumpeting of wild geese wedging across the sky. Beneath the coarseness and earthiness of the villagers lies a certain rude poetry of thought; a community of spirit, a selflessness which gives dignity and meaning to life.

By "civilized" standards, the outlook of these people might seem mean, narrow, bigoted, shockingly circumscribed intellectually. And yet how much more dependable they seem than the sophisticated and urbane citizens of our selfish cities!

No tragedy failed to bring all the neighbors to help the unfortunate. "The parish comes first." Willing hands nursed the sick, buried the dead, and took in the orphan. Beneath the sharp tongues of the women and the inarticulate gruffness of the men lay warm hearts.

Product of a Culture

THERE is a profound reason for the artistry of such novels as "Maria Chapdelaine" and "The Outlander"—an explanation deeper and more significant than the mere genius of the author.

A "classic" is seldom written by a single man or woman. It is the product of an entire culture; a patterned and orderly composite derived from long tradition. Thus England in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, France until very recently, Concord 100 years ago—these and many other orderly communities of homogeneous citizens have furnished the matrix for "classic" writing.

Few human beings who have ever lived have been able to both create and criticize a civilization. It takes god-like power to derive anything but chaotic literature from a chaotic era such as our own. There is no stable civilization to satirize. Comedies of manners cannot be written in an age which has no manners. True tragedy is difficult when man has lost his dignity. True poetry is virtually impossible without a known background of accepted and understood ethics and aesthetics.

But an almost static society like French Canada furnishes all the needed points of reference. Whatever else it may lack, it has pattern, design, form, ritual, faith. Out of such ready-made material the sensitive artist can occasionally create a "classic."

Nutshell Reviews of Recent Books

AMERICAN CITY GOVERNMENT. By William Anderson and E. W. Weidner. Henry Holt. 616 pp. $4.25.

THIS is a thorough revision of a respected text originally published in 1925. It is brought up to date to take cognizance of such developments as the rapidly increased trend toward larger cities, the expansion of suburbs at the expense of a city's heart, increasing professionalization (and unionization) of municipal services and the response of the cities to the social needs of their citizens.

The authors stay clear of municipal administration as such and concern themselves almost entirely with broad questions of policy. There are excellent discussions of minorities and national origins, relations with State governments, principal forms of city governments, political parties, merit systems and municipal reform.

KNEE PANTS. By Emile C. Schurmacher. Illustrated by Donald McKay. Crowell. $3.

THE day Emile made friends with the billboard "decorator," Mr. Beadle, and watched fascinated as he filled in a gold tooth in the mouth of a smiling woman, his "knee pants" career hunt was on the way. If he wasn't fighting an epidemic with his father, a veterinary, he was exploring the Hudson in his motorboat. Emile gets "longies" about page 184, but only one pair, until the knee pants he still has wear out. This leads to pawnbroker trouble when he sees a two-trouser suit for 50 cents down. The author tells on himself in a series of crazy happenstances which make a couple of hours of enjoyable light reading.

CLINICAL SONNETS. By Merrill Moore. Twayne Publishers. 72 pp. $2.50.

MERRILL MOORE is a psychiatrist as well as a poet. In "Clinical Sonnets," he writes with the insight of both, presenting a series of vignettes that shock the reader into attention with their lean, hard impact. Dr. Moore, incidentally, is probably the author of more sonnets—he is past the 50,000 mark—than any man who ever lived. Some future candidate for a Ph.D. degree is going to find him a fascinating subject for a dissertation.

How Assemble 50?

Flag-Decked D. C. Is Counting Stars

AS THE flag-flyingest community in these United States, Washington faces a major switchover if another star or two—Alaska and/or Hawaii—is added to the Union.

Far from being a strictly intellectual problem of where the stars would fit, it may involve as many as 60,000 flags in the Washington area alone. No telling what the effect would be throughout the Nation.

It's this way: Under law, if a Territory becomes a full partner in the Union, its star is to be added to the flag the following July 4.

And flying the number of flags it does, for the number of state occasions it has, the District would have to follow flag etiquette to the last standard.

It wouldn't be too difficult for the flag-makers if just one new State were added. With 49 stars, the arrangement would be a simple seven up and seven down.

But how do you get 50 stars arranged?

Actually, there's no precedent for either move.

Taft's Pattern

THE United States has had the same flag since 1912, when the forty-eighth star was added. President William Howard Taft by executive order established the precise proportions of the flag and made the first official arrangement for the stars.

The President now could make

Conservative arrangement of 49 stars

the change by executive order again, or Congress could move in and say just how many stars are to appear and how.

There's no shortage of theories on the point, at least. Interior Department's Division of Territories and Island Possessions has a whole file of suggestions.

Submitted mostly by school children and housewives, the ideas range from setting the stars in constellations or in the form of an eagle, featuring one large one—Texas?—in the center.

Arthur E. Dubois, chief of the heraldic branch of the military planning division of the Quartermaster General's Office, has been receiving inquiries.

Halted in Senate

RIGHT NOW, the questions are still pretty much theoretical.

The bills for admission of Hawaii and Alaska have passed the House but are still in the Senate Interior Committee. Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said yesterday that his Senate group would eventually hold hearings on the bills, but he could not say when because of the pressure of other legislation.

"New Era speed design" using 50 stars

The minimum change using 50 stars

On the other hand, both Hawaii and Alaska have pressure on to become States.

These figures would give some idea of the scope of the change-over problem:

The Post Office Department purchased 11,396 flags, including about 40 for use in the District, in the 1949 fiscal year. The National Capital Park Service has about 60 flags flying regularly, another 100 for special occasions, about 50 maintained for the District Recreation Board and a score for replacements.

There are about 55,000 graveside flags in Arlington National Cemetery that must be put beside the graves each Memorial Day and which last only about three years.

About 325 flags fly over District Government installations, and there are about 600 more used for decoration of lamp-posts on special occasions.

On the Hill, there is one flag each flying over the Capitol, the House and Senate office buildings and the Supreme Court. The Library of Congress has two flags. There are also flags over the District Court buildings and the Court of Claims.

For Veterans' Kin

THE Veterans Administration has a flag flying over Mount Alto Hospital, as well as over 133 other hospitals and veterans' homes in the country, and annually gives a large number of flags, retained by the next of kin, for veterans' funerals.

In Government departments under General Services, there are about 100 cotton flags in use here and 600 throughout the country.

General Services, which has been experimenting with the longer-wearing but more expensive nylon flags, and which spends about $10,000 a year for flags, would probably use up its 48-star flags first, unless told otherwise, a spokesman said.

You can figure a total of at least 50 flags over Washington area military installations. And in the fiscal year 1949, the Army purchased 12,540 flags of all types.

There's no estimate of the number of flags in use by private homes in the District or throughout the country.

All in all, it makes for a lot of flags; and whether they'll stay at 48 stars or jump to 49 or 50, they'll still look pretty good.

'Gambling' Probe a Bit Confusing

By Harry N. Stull

THE INVESTIGATION of District crime by the Davis Subcommitte has brought a sense of confusion to civic Washington. The testimony concerning the Police Department has indicated that all is not well with this law-enforcement agency. Sufficient facts have been elicited to justify the committee in proceeding further to determine who is to blame for local conditions.

STULL

We have been told of the business methods of certain professional bondsmen. The operations of certain after-hours clubs have been explained, together with an opinion as to their patrons. We are told that more police are needed and that they should have better pay and shorter hours. A night police court is suggested. An alleged gambler appears before the committee and refuses to state his business on the ground that it might incriminate him. Various police officers contradict one another, and one testifies that he was compelled to alter a report. It is no wonder that the average citizen is confused.

On the face of it, there seems to be a lack of understanding or cooperation among the higher officers of the department. What started out to be an investigation of gambling has degenerated into a series of charges and countercharges, allegations and denials in the Police Department.

Many civic organizations have been seriously considering the advisability of recommending a 5-day, 40-hour week for policemen. It is probable that in some cases action now will be withheld until further light is obtained on the inside affairs of the department.

Inexpensive Possession

AS THE TIME approaches for the Sesquicentennial celebration, the publicity going out to the country stresses the fact that the District of Columbia belongs to the entire Nation. This is a familiar theme, and it cannot be gainsaid that at one time it contained some element of truth, for the Nation, as a whole, bore a substantial part of the cost of operation of the District. But many queer things have happened in the past quarter of a century.

When the annual cost of the District was in the neighborhood of 50 million dollars, the Federal Government paid 50 percent of the sum. Gradually the cost of government has increased and the proportion of Federal payment has decreased, until now 12 million dollars is the limit of Federal payment, or approximately 10 percent of the cost of the city's annual upkeep. One wonders if it still can be said with entire accuracy that the city belongs to the entire Nation, when 90 percent of its cost of operation is borne by the taxpaying residents of the District.

Year after year, due to the hostile attitude of certain members of Congress in key positions, our national legislature has refused to increase the Federal payment. If the present trend continues, the Federal Government will soon be making only a token contribution.

The remarks of Congressman Sasscer of Maryland at the annual dinner of the Federation of Citizens Associations give hope, however, that there may be a change of feeling in the House. Generally lost sight of, however, in this ever recurring controversy is the fact that the Kefauver home rule bill, which has been so bitterly attacked by certain interests, sets up a permanent fiscal policy for payments by the Federal Government. From the standpoint of the District, it is a much more liberal arrangement than the present haphazard system.

The 800,000 Outsiders

IT IS INTERESTING to note that in the past week the House has voted to admit Alaska (with its 100,000 population) and Hawaii as States. This is the same House which permits its District Committee to pigeonhole the Kefauver home rule bill, involving the political rights of 800,000 persons. The only recourse for District residents is to attempt to convince members of the House that they should sign the discharge petition and permit the bill to be considered by the entire membership. The will of the House is now being thwarted because of the unwillingness of a small group to permit the bill to issue from the committee. The membership of the House is, slowly but surely becoming convinced that the people of the District are entitled to have this measure discussed before the House itself.

Billion Dollar Incubus

SENATOR LEAHY'S subcommittee investigating tax exempt property in the District has been given information by the District Assessor indicating that more than a billion dollars' worth of local property pays no taxes, either because it is Government-owned, has been exempted by special acts of Congress or is owned by foreign governments, churches or charitable and scientific institutions. Attempts have been made to bring some of this property into the tax producing field, but without success. There would seem to be little hope that any material part of it will be returned to the tax rolls.

Byrd Machine Stayed in Low Gear

By Benjamin Muse

THE TUMULT and the shouting die, and the 140 members of the General Assembly are wending their way back over hill and dale to their homes. Some will not get there before tomorrow.

MUSE

Good old Senator Lloyd Robinette, for instance, has 360 miles to travel, to Jonesville, out there where men are men. That is also Virginia.

They go home lighter in pocket than when they went into Richmond 60 days ago. Few, if any, managed to live on their salary of $720. Most of them spent twice that amount. (It will be $1080 next time.) The trunks of their cars are bulging with baggage, augmented by batches of letters and telegrams and a stack of House and Senate bills, most of which did not pass.

They're asking: "How did we do?"

Well, you did several remarkable things. One was the famous 45 million dollar appropriation for school construction. The Mine Seizure Act was a first-rate achievement. You gave the Governor an executive assistant to carry on with reorganization, and you established optional jury service for women. The plan for real estate assessments every six years, with limited State assistance, was a step forward, even though it fell short of the Gray Commission's recommendations. You abolished rent control (although with very little consideration for the localities that wanted to keep it.)

The Signal Never Came

YOU LEFT many things undone, including most of the 52 varieties of reform proposed by the Tax Study Commision. But the commission's report was thrown into your laps too late, as this column has repeatedly pointed out, and other matters were passed over for lack of time.

You could have done better with more leadership. The General Assembly lost no time in attending to the Governor's limited program. But he didn't prod you much, beyond that, and there was no one else to prod—except Bob Whitehead.

There was a conspicuous lack of leadership—Byrd machine leadership. Lacking directives, too many stalwarts fell back upon a cruder machine precept: "When you haven't got a signal, do nothing."

The committees, in whose bosom many a good bill was killed or wounded, were about as pusillanimous as usual. The committee considering the antisegregation measure heard a mass of testimony in its favor, including indorsement by former Governor Darden and the Virginia Council of Churches—and then killed the bill. Five members of the committee still refuse to stand up and say how they voted.

The nearest thing to Byrd machine leadership that developed was in the 35-year-old son of Harry Byrd himself. Harry, jr., editor of the Winchester Star and a former lieutenant commander in the Navy, is still serving his first term in the State Senate. Tactful, alert and resourceful, he was a refreshing contrast to the generally heavy-handed lethargy of the upper body.

Whitehead Outstanding

THE SENATE did not sparkle. More inspiring things happened at the other end of the Capitol, where Delegate Armistead Boothe and company fought the gallant antisegregation fight, where 41 delegates followed Walter Page in a move to discharge the committee on privileges and elections and bring out a poll tax repeal plan, and where the gentleman from Nelson held forth.

Whitehead, the opposition leader, was easily the ablest legislator in either house. Without an organization of his own, but with an extraordinary grasp of State problems, he wrestled with every bill that came along and wielded an influence second only to that of the Governor himself.

On the floor, it was a very free session—a minimum of machine-like tactics, no whispered coercion, no arbitrary rulings from the chair. There was unusual camaraderie among men of opposing views and a high level of good will.

For no small part of that, the new Speaker of the House of Delegates was responsible. Blackbourn More was one of the session's notable successes. Blackie's unexceptionable fairness and his painstaking consideration for everybody won respect and something like affection even from the opposition.

When he heard that Whitehead had called him "the most courteous and fairest of Speakers," Moore said:

"I think that's the best thing that's happened to me as Speaker."

Nothing more to worry about now—except reelection for one and all in 1951!

Duke Display Shows Original Of First Haphazard Census

By Bob Wilson

Duke Bureau of Public Information

DURHAM, N. C.—"How old are you? How many in your family? Do you have a bathtub in your home?"

These are samples of questions an army of Government interrogators will fire at Mr. and Mrs. America when they start ringing doorbells early in April as the seventeenth decennial census gets under way. The work will fill 50 volumes and will cost 60 million dollars.

In recognition of 1950 as a census year, the Duke University Library has prepared an exhibit of documents tracing the history of the national nose-count from the initial census in 1790. Under the direction of Assistant Librarian Robert W. Christ, the display includes one of the rare original volumes of the first census.

The census of 1790 was an informal affair conducted by field agents who wandered about the country counting heads. They used no printed blanks and carried most of the information in their heads or on scraps of paper that they chanced to have in their pockets.

There were only five classifications. The Government wanted to know the number of free white males over 16, free white males under 16, free white females, all other free persons and slaves. The total for the entire country was 3,929,214.

The results were published in a paper-backed volume of 56 pages. Much of the proportional representation in Congress was worked out from the figures in this little book. The whole operation cost about $44,000.

In the third census, in 1810, there was an attempt to appraise the industrial wealth of the United States. North Carolina, for instance, had 128,484 spinning wheels, and 1,500,000 gallons of spirits were produced in the State.

In 1840 the United States had increased to more than 17 million people, and the Government was interested in school attendance, illiteracy, insanity and the number of persons living on military pensions. The industrial report became more detailed, and for the first time an entire section was devoted to agriculture.

The 1850 census marked a change in organization as the newly created Interior Department took over the job.

The census reports grew constantly and the 1940 edition ran to 32 volumes and cost 55 million dollars, while the population totaled in its pages was more than 131 million.

Straphanger Feels a New Lurch

By James P. Connolly

THE BALTIMORE TRANSIT CO.'s application for a higher fare, now being heard by the Public Service Commission, is evidence that in the long run the public will be asked to pay the cost of whatever union wage increases public utilities anywhere might grant.

CONNOLLY

One effect, if not one deliberate purpose, of the higher fare asked by the company would be to pass on to the straphangers the bill for the last wage raise the company gave its help, members of the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railways and Motor Coach Employes.

The raise, totaling more than one million dollars a year, was allowed several months ago, and it was known then that the company soon would seek a fare increase, based in part on its increased labor costs.

The company had done somewhat the same thing in obtaining its last fare increase in 1948. Just prior to making its application it had granted its employes a wage raise also totaling more than one million dollars a year.

The Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. also have won rate increases in the last year, and in the telephone company's case, too, increased labor costs played an important part. A company vice president testified that its labor costs were 24 million dollars a year, more than four times the prewar figure.

Evidences of a Policy

THE PRESIDENT of the transit company is August B. Haneke, who formerly headed the telephone company. Could these similarities and coincidences mean that the utilities have decided that the way to handle union labor demands is to meet them but make the people pay?

There may be some argument for thinking so. For one thing, the more and the sooner the people have to pay, the quicker and the stronger will come the public reaction against excessive demands by organized labor.

For another thing, a utility's rates are based on a fair rate of return on its plant valuation. Critics have charged that both the transit company and the phone company have two valuations, one for rate-making and another for taxes. They have charged further that the rate-making valuation is exaggerated. In the 1948 fare hearing, a witness testified that the transit company's valuation of 19 million dollars was inflated by 13 million dollars.

However that may be, once a company's valuation and its fair rate of return have been established, its problem of maintaining that fare rate is simplified. If its expenses go up, it has only to ask an increase in its service rates. If the Public Service Commission denies the increase, the company can always go to court, claiming that compulsion to operate at a loss or less than a fair profit amounts to confiscation of property.

Letters Actually Applaud

THERE HAVE been some rather unusual sidelights to the transit company's pending appeal for a higher fare. Ordinarily, any suggestion for a higher fare automatically brings forth a flood of protests to the PSC. In this case, for a change, there was a minor flood of letters of approval.

The letters came, however, from somewhat unusual quarters. They came, for instance, from the president of a trust company, the head of another big business firm and from people in general who could hardly be called, by any stretch of the imagination, average straphangers.

Another oddity about the transit company's request for a fare increase is that the labor unions are among its strongest foes, although union demands partly inspired it. The PSC set one day of the fare hearing aside for opponents, and union representatives were among the few who showed up.

Griff Wants Vindication—In 1st-Division Club

With Shirley Povich

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 11.—At 80 Clark Griffith wants little more of this world's goods. There's the mansion-like manse on 16th st., quite comfy with its broad lawns and underground sprinkling system. Long before Pearl Harbor he was buying defense bonds. All the kids are nicely on their way in careers. The dollar was very useful.

POVICH

It's vindication now that Griffith wants. He'd like to get his Washington baseball team into the first division, and the profit motive is secondary. He's been challenged, and hurt.

The specter of John James Jachym, the young man from Jamestown, N. Y., is goading Griffith to a supreme effort to disassociate his team from the second division—without Jachym's help. After 30 years as president of the Washington club, the Old Gentleman finds himself squarely on the spot, with his stockholders.

They stuck by him, those with the balance of voting power, last January. After Jachym's sudden intrusion with a 40 percent purchase of the club's stock. Griffith is eager to justify himself before another annual stockholders' meeting rolls around in 1951.

He made it plain last January that he didn't need the help of any young whippersnapper like Jachym in running the Washington club. He'd give the stockholders a better ball team, he said. "I know you're my friends who are sticking with me," he said, "but I also know that all stockholders like dividends as well as a better team."

He'd like to walk into next January's meeting in triumph, with a first-division club to show for his 1950 stewardship. That would shut the door securely against Jachym, and convince any wavering stockholders. To that end, he's working furiously.

In the wake of the Jachym investment of $550,000 in the Nats, most of it with borrowed money, there were pointed references to the club's haphazard and inadequate farm system. Jachym, it was pointed out, was a young man with considerable experience and savvy in farm systems and might stock the Nats with young talent.

Quietly, Griffith has been working to get his farm system out of the line of direct fire of his critics. He tried and failed to buy the Yankees' Newark franchise, discovering the Cubs had a prior option. He did buy Augusta in the Class A Southeastern League. He talks about the two baseball schools he is running in Florida, and how much money he is giving Farm Director Ossie Bruege to spend for young players. "We have 200 players on the way up," he says.

The threat of Jachym actually is driving Griffith to new and desperate measures. In September he made the biggest cash buy of his career to bring the Nats Outfielder Irv Noren from the Coast League for $70,000. In the smug ante-Jachym days, Griffith was not in the market for $70,000 rookies.

So fierce is his pride in what he is now doing that Griffith is actually miffed at the fact that certain of his attempts to strengthen the club have gone unrecorded. "Why was it never published," he asks, "that I offered the Browns $100,000 for Gerry Priddy last December? Ask the Browns. You'll verify it."

Thus he was admitting another desperation effort to bolster his team. He was admitting a mistake of three years before by trying to rebuy Priddy for four times the $25,000 for which he had sold the player to the Browns.

It was a worried, much-harassed Griffith who suffered through the last half of the 1949 season with his dismal eight-place team. He couldn't buy the seven percent of the stock that was necessary to give him 51 percent control—and he knew that there was spirited bidding for the 40 percent chunk held by the Richardson family.

Against the day when the 40 percent might be sold to a hostile buyer, Griffith tried to corral enough of the other 16 percent to give him control. But most of it was in the hands of feudal estates or shareholders who wanted to keep it out of their sentimental interest in the club. They'd vote with him, Griffith learned, but wouldn't sell to him.

Sure enough, Jachym did buy the Richardson 40 percent and ask to be taken into the club as an assistant to Griffith. Jachym's approach was friendly enough, but Griffith had his back up, gave him the brush-off, and gambled successfully that the scattering of stockholders with the balance of power would go along with him.

That was in December. But two months before, Griffith had

Weik Walks Five in Row; Noren 0 for 3

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

West Palm Beach, Fla., Mar. 11.—The Nats, looking suspiciously like the club that finished eighth last season, finished second today—to the Philadelphia Athletics, 7-3. Twenty-five hundred alternately sun-drenched and rain-drenched fans didn't see the Nats win by a large margin.

They made some serious gestures about opening their first grapefruit league test with a victory by scoring three runs in the first inning, but then they lapsed into the gentlest sort of people and couldn't get another runner past first base.

If it was mildly distressing to Manager Bucky Harris, then consider the high displeasure of Mr. John J. Jachym, who was sitting in the stands and getting the first 1950 look at the club in which he recently invested $550,000 for a 40 percent share.

Clark Griffith's junior and unwanted partner, who is wintering in these parts, began to have doubts of the soundness of his purchase and the size of his dividends, as early as the second inning. That was when the Nats tossed away their 3-0 lead.

Five Walks in Row

And if Jachym was not exactly smitten with young Dick Weik, the rookie on whom the Nats' bosses are relying to bolster their pitching, no wonder. In the eighth inning, with the contest still a 4-3 ball game, young Weik walked five hitters in a row before getting anybody out. That wild display led to three more Philadelphia runs.

In fact, for the Nats, the game was a double dud. Not only did Weik revert to the wildness that he was supposed to have subdued, but Irv Noren, the $70,000 rookie, banged nothing beyond the infield and went hitless.

Against three of Connie Mack's first-line pitchers, the Nats cracked out nine hits, a tolerable number. But after Lew Brissie was solidly smacked in the opening inning,

Terp Boxers Beat Miami, 6-2

The University of Maryland closed its regular boxing season with a 6-2 win over Miami before 4123 fans at College Park last night.

Three consecutive wins in the middle weights gave the Terps a 5-1 edge. Miami's only points were tallied in the 135 and 175-pound classes.

Andy Quattrocchi, winner of 15 knockouts in 24 fights for the Old Liners, failed to see action. He copped the 130-pound division on a forfeit. Miami's Herbie Holmberg suffered a cracked rib Thursday night against South Carolina and could not compete against the Terp knockout artist.

Bill O'Brien, Maryland's 145-pound representative, scored a second-round TKO over the Hurricanes' Bill Johnson.

Terp Dan Oliver once again used his roundhouse right uppercuts to win a clear-cut decision over Ed Segall.

Capt. Bob Gregson scored the deciding point for Maryland by decisioning Jim Bernardo in the 165-pound class.

In the 175-pound division, Carl Bernardo, Miami's National and Southern 1949 champion, won an easy decision over Maryland's Harry Swartzwelder.

Maryland's two other points ame as Al Glass decisioned Mickey Demos in the 125-pound class to avenge a 1949 defeat, while Fuller won over John Donohue in the unlimited class.

Giants Rally, Down Indians

Tucson, Ariz., Mar. 11 (AP).—Driving in four runs in the eighth inning, the New York Giants defeated Cleveland's Indians, 5 to 3, today as the two clubs launched their exhibition season.

There was some cause for rejoicing in the Tribe camp, however, as Southpaw Gene Bearden showed signs of returning to his 1948 form. Although charged with the loss, Bearden allowed only four hits in five innings and gave up but one walk.

Three Giant hurlers, Larry Jansen, Sal Maglie and Clint Hartung, limited the Indians to seven hits. The New Yorkers got to Bearden and Sam Zoldak for nine.

Halbert's Foul Beats Bombers For Caps, 92-90

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The Caps got some valuable pressure practice for the NBA playoffs last night at Uline Arena.

Trailing in the last minute by four points, and apparently doomed, they rallied to down St. Louis, 92-90, for the sixth time in as many tries this season.

Although 7-foot Don Otten and St. Louis' 6-foot-8 easy Ed MacAuley both were ejected on personals, a big man decided the issue.

Lanky Chuck Halbert, 6:09 Texan, took over for Otten in fine style. Going in cold, he dropped a basket to make it 90-88, St. Louis Caps.

Scolari Ties It Up

Dermie O'Connell then missed a free throw for St. Louis and Freddie Scolari drove in to tie it up with 35 seconds remaining.

Again Halbert took over. He was fouled with 21 seconds to go. Notoriously weak from the foul-line, Chuck made the big one good to clinch the victory. Bob Feerick added another for insurance.

It was ironic that O'Connell's miss gave the Caps their chance to win. The Boston cast-off looked good enough for any team in the league, sinking eight baskets.

As the first half ended, O'Connell let fly a shot that traveled nearly 70 feet. It was the longest field goal in the memory of veteran Uline observers.

As usual, last night's game was practically a privtae viewing. With the Caps already assured of third place and St. Louis definitely out of the playoff, only 971 were on hand.

Opening Round

Frisco Ousted by CCNY, 65-46; W. Kentucky Whips Niagara

New York, March 11 (U.P.).—Western Kentucky, CCNY, LaSalle and Syracuse won opening round victories in the New York Invitational Basketball Tournament today.

In afternoon games CCNY ousted defending champion San Francisco, 65-46, and Western Kentucky defeated Niagara, 79-72. In the night doubleheader, LaSalle won over Arizona, 72-66, and Syracuse routed favored Long Island U., 80-52.

The four seeded teams—Bradley, Kentucky, Duquesne and St. John's—were idle in the opening round, having drawn byes.

The some 18,000 fans who packed Madison Square Garden were treated to two remarkable individual performances during the matinee session.

Bob Lavoy, Western Kentucky's 6-foot-7 center from Aurora, Ill., almost personally ousted Niagara with his dazzling shooting.

Although a bit wild in the game's early stages, he finally found the range to ring up 32 points, including 12 field goals. He has scored more than 600 points this year and has a .44 percent hitting average on field goals.

The other heroic performance

See NIT, Page C-3, Column 1.

If the first game of the night double-header, LaSalle rallied in the last six minutes to eliminate Arizona.

With 7 minutes remaining, Arizona, 13-point underdog, led, 66-64. But LaSalle rallied quickly and swept into the lead with Frank Comerford and Jim Phelan leading the drive.

They tallied two baskets each in the last four minutes as Arizona found the pace too torid.

Phelan and Comerford scored 17 each for LaSale while Leo Johnson had the same number for the losers.

Disdaining its underdog role, smooth-working Syracuse rolled to a 34-26 halftime lead over LIU.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Taking advantage of six errors, the New York Yankees defeated the St. Louis Cardinals in the opener of their spring exhibition series today, 15-4.

A crowd of 7701, second largest ever to attend a game here, saw four of Eddie Dyer's hurlers pounded for 17 hits.

George Stirnweiss, with three singles, paced the Bombers attack.

The New York pitchers, Fred Sanford, Wally Hood and Don Johnson, held St. Louis to four blows, one a homer by Marty Marion.

'Very Doubtful Taste'

Gussie Wins Tourney in White Panties After Black Ones Cause Editorial Row

Cairo, March 11 (AP).—Gertrude (Gorgeous Gussie) Moran, who got an editorial spanking for wearing black panties in an international tennis tournament here yesterday, won the championship today—wearing traditional white ones.

She whipped Mrs. Heraldo Weiss of Argentina, 6—2, 6—3, to run her string of singles championship victories on her world tour to four.

Gussie wore black shorts—not regulation white—when she and Mrs. Pat Todd won ladies' doubles in the Egyptian International tennis tournament yesterday and Cairo papers didn't like it and proceeded to say so in front page editorials.

The Egyptian newspaper Le Progres called the black shorts "shocking" and said: "Miss Moran has proven to have very doubtful taste . . . We shall leave this young player to the final judgment of posterity."

The British-owned Egyptian Gazette used typical restraint in declaring that the California tennis star "caused a mild sensation." The Gazette said the rules "emphatically state that white should be worn."

The Journal De Egypte, cocking an editorial eyebrow, merely said: "Gorgeous Gussie won the crowd's attention with her good game—and her black shorts."

Gussie, who crashed front pages last summer when she sported lace panties before a staid Wimbledon crowd, was a little bewildered by it all.

"I'm just a nice girl who plays tennis," she said a little plaintively. "Everything I do seems to get into the papers."

Gussie said she wore her black practice shorts because she had only one clean white costume left and she wanted to save it for the women's singles finals today.

"No one complained before or during the match," she pleaded, "and now all this bursts loose."

Some who saw the match agreed that the black shorts were neither particularly short nor revealing. It was the color which upset Cairo.

The Name Is O'Rourke

He's Red-Headed, Hot-Headed, Left-Handed And No Man Ever Was on First Off Him

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

I've just made the greatest baseball discovery since the game itself.

I'm utterly amazed that the exploits of my guy, who's 19, have been kept a secret for so long. To give you an example: he's got the color and temperament of Dizzy Dean and if he can back up one tenth of his self-attested performances, he'd be even greater than Ozark Ike.

This baseball H-bomb that it is my pleasure to explode before your very eyes this morning is Dick O'Rourke of the White Plains, N. Y., O'Rourkes.

Ready Richard isn't even a member of the University of Maryland's baseball team, but that's Coach Burton Shipley's fault. Ship simply doesn't recognize genius, it seems.

Just the other day for instance, young Mr. O'Rourke, who throws lefthanded, was whizzing a few fast ones over in an intra-squad game.

When O'Rourke took the mound, there was a runner on first, put there, of course, by his predecessor.

Well, O'Rourke took a full, lazy windup and as he did the runner on first simply trotted to second base.

Shipley, old fuddy-duddy that he is, stormed out to the mound.

"What in the name of blazes are you doing?" he demanded of O'Rourke.

"Why, did I do something wrong, Coach?" innocently asked our hero.

"Nowadays," shouted Shipley, "pitchers don't wind up with a runner on first base."

"Oh, I didn't know that, Coach. You see, I've never had a runner on first base before."

"What?" bellowed Shipley, "have you ever pitched before?"

With all the nonchalance in the world, young O'Rourke answered: "Yes, Coach, nine games—eight of them no-hit, no-

Navy Swim Team Finally Wins Meet

Annapolis, Md., March 11 (AP).—Navy swimmers hauled themselves out of Davey Jones' locker today after nine straight defeats and swamped Columbia, 62-13, to win their final dual meet of the year.

Columbia won only one event, as the Midshipmen took firsts in the remaining eight events.

Most of the races were contests between Navy men for first and second, with the visitors winding up third.

In the long-distance 440-yard freestyle race, Midshipmen Bob Turnage and Bill Miles finished in a first-place tie after swimming neck and neck for the last 300 yards. Four laps behind, one Columbia man was still swimming when the joint winners were out of the water and receiving congratulations. The time was 5 minutes 36.1 seconds.

Engle Paces Navy Rifle Team Victory

Annapolis, Md., March 11 (AP).—Midshipman Ray Engle led the Navy rifle team to victory today over Johns Hopkins by a score of 1416 to 1363.

Engle was high with 289 points out of a possible 300 as Navy closed out its season with a record of 7 wins and 2 defeats. He shot 99 prone, 98 kneeling and 92 offhand.

Bill Fader shot 283 to lead Hopkins. Two Navy men, Emmons Woolwine and Charles Gillespie, duplicated that score.

Plebe Fencers End Season Undefeated

Annapolis, Md., March 11 (AP).—Coach Andre Deladrier's Navy plebes closed out an undefeated fencing season today, outclassing John Hopkins freshmen, 22½ to 4½.

Plebe Ray Paulsen, Hemlock Grove, Ohio, sabre star, stood on the verge of a perfect season after winning his first two bouts only to lose the last one to Jim Bellah of Hopkins.

Paulsen polished off Charles Browne and Phil Corbidge for his tenth and eleventh consecutive wins of the year. Bellah then stopped Paulsen, 5-3, in the final sabre bout.

He Reports To New Job Next Month

By West McLean
Post Reporter

George Fazio, one of the better tournament professionals, was named home pro of the Woodmont Country Club last night. He succeeds Gene Larkin, resigned.

Fazio will assume his new duties about mid-April. He will come here from the Masters tournament at Augusta, Ga., April 6-9. Fazio qualified for the select Masters event by finishing in the top 20 in the National Open last year.

Fazio will move with the Woodmont club to its new location near Rockville, Md., on May 30.

Played in Celebrities

Fazio played in the National Celebrities Tournament last June at the Army-Navy Country Club with such headliners as Sammy Snead, Cary Middlecoff, Lew Worsham and others.

Fazio is 37 years old and previously played for the Conshohocken Country Club in Pennsylvania. His most important tournament triumph was in the 1946 Canadian Open.

In 1948, Lloyd Mangrum defeated him in a playoff for the Utah Open title, and he was a quarterfinalist in the PGA championship that year, losing to Jimmy Demaret.

Woodmont, which is being crowded off its present location at Wisconsin ave. near Bethesda, by new Cancer Association buildings, will allow Fazio time off during the season to make part of the winter circuit. However, he will devote most of his time to the establishment of the club in its new location.

When Woodmont moves to its new location, nine holes will be left of the old course. This nine-hole layout will run as a public links, under the direction of Roger Peacock, Sligo Park pro.

FRANK EMMET, junior golf director for the District, has been named to the United States Golf Association's Junior championship committee . . . Frank does a wonderful job with the junior golfers in this area. One of the highpoints of this year's junior program will be a Junior Day at all the clubs to raise funds for the program and to collect old sticks, to be distributed among the juniors, as well as veterans at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Tom Wheeler, golf committee chairman, will head a delegation of 28 from Congressional to Sedgefield Inn, Greensboro, N. C., . . . They leave this Wednesday and will spend four days there. The District Golf Association at its annual meeting voted to amend its constitution so that each of the 15 member clubs would have a representative either as an officer or on the executive committee.

The joint schedule prepared by the District, Maryland State and Middle Atlantic Associations will be released next week . . . It is the most comprehensive ever attained in this area . . . Next year the three associations hope to have the big member-guest tourneys also accommodated on the schedule.

The member-guest and club invitational tournaments will be among the biggest of the coming year . . . The fad has expanded terrifically since its start three years ago . . . At least six clubs will hold similar tournaments this year. The Middle Atlantic Golf Association will hold its men's and women's championships concurrently this year, at Hot Springs, Va. . . . Date will be early in June.

Virginia Wins 2 Titles, Syracuse Top Team

Syracuse, N. Y., March 11 (AP).—Syracuse University's boxers walked off with four individual titles and piled up a team total of 26 points tonight to win the twenty-seventh Intercollegiate Boxing Association championships.

It was the ninth time Roy Simmons' lads have won the Edward J. Neil trophy in his 25-year tenure as boxing coach.

Second place went to Penn State with 11 points; Virginia, third with 10; Catholic University had 9, and Army 8. Western Maryland and Cornell failed to score.

Virginia won two championships as Allen Hollingsworth retained his 130-pound title by optpointing Jack Redmond of Catholic, and Joe Miragliotta decisioned Catholic's Bucky Ennis to win the 155-pound crown.

Miragliotta won the 155-pound title in 1948 but did not defend it last year. The only other Catholic University boxer to gain the finals, defending 125-pound titlist Tommy Cronin, was outpointed by Syracuse's Jim Huba to start the Orangemen on the way to their sweep.

In spite of Ennis' loss in the finals he turned in the outstanding performance in the afternoon's semifinal round by slugging Syracuse's defending champion, Chuck Rigoglioso, into submission in 1 minute and 20 seconds of the first round.

Nats Regain 1949 Form, Lose to A's

the Nats collected no hits at all against Brissie, Dick Fowler and Bobby Shantz when a hit could be translated into a run.

Cuban Conrado Marrero opened the game for the Nats and gave up three runs in the second inning with the unwanted assistance of Eddie Yost, who bobbled a ground ball off Brissie's bat. The thing was scored a hit, for some reason, otherwise Marrero pitched very pertly.

Lloyd Hittle gave up the run that moved the A's in front, 4-3, in the fifth, and he also had the dubious help of Yost, who made a two-base wild throw over first base in an attempt for a double play.

Weik, working the last two innings, pitched hitless ball, you might say. He didn't give up any of the A's six hits, but that was chiefly because the A's were rarely bothering to swing. Particularly those five who drew walks with none out in the eighth.

Gil Coan, who singled to left and doubled to right in his first two times up, opened the game with his single and the Nats had a rally under way when Valo misjudged Dente's drive for an error. Noren walked to fill the bases and Robinson singled them both home. Mele's long fly got the Nats their last run.

Marrero had one out when he walked Chapman in the second. Rookie Ben Guintini drove a grounder past Yost and it went as a single for no solid reason except Yost's reluctance. Marrero had no luck at all. Tipton eventually scored both runners with a drooping double into short center.

Joost Starts It Off

In the fifth against Hittle, Joost led off with a single and Kozar booted Valo's grounder. It was at that point that Yost grabbed Dillinger's soft grounder, stepped on third for one out, and missed a double play by 30 feet with a heave over Robinson's head that let Joost score.

IN SHORT . . . Marrero was probably yearning for the superior support he got in the Cuban Winter League after he watched Yost let Guintinis' single get away in the A's three-run second . . . Coan lost a third straight hit when Valo leaped up for his liner in the fourth inning . . . Harris used a pair of pinchhitters, and replacements at every position except third base, in an attempt to get everybody into action . . . Tomorow, the two clubs meet again, here, with Sid Hudson and Joe Haynes due to see action on the mound for the Nats.

N.C. College Wins CIAA Title, 74 to 70

North Carolina State College of Durham, N. C., defeated defending champion West Virginia State College, 74-70, to win the fifth annual Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament yesterday at Uline Arena.

It was a close contest all the way with the lead changing hands 29 times and the score being tied on 12 occasions. Troy Weaver paced the victors with 22 points. Bob Wilson led West Virginia with 23.

In the first game of the doubleheader, Lincoln University won the consolation trophy by downing Virginia State College, 64-57.

Two More Girls Win Places in Beauty Contest

Wanda Nicholson, 24, Alexandria, and Delberta Libby, 17, 3901 Burns pl. se., won last night's National Guard Armory round of a beauty contest to decide 'Miss Outdoors of 1950."

Four previous winners and last night's victors will be in the final round at 2:30 this afternoon at the armory when the queen will be chosen. The winner will receive an all-expenses paid trip to Fontana Village in the Great Smokies of North Carolina.

The winners who will compete today along with Misses Nicholson and Libby are: Lois Agee, 22, of 3411 30th st. nw.; Betty Lee Place, 17, of 2118 Kearney st. ne.; Norma Lambert, 19, of 508 North Kenmore, Arlington, and Jane Tomlin, 20, of 2500 Q st. nw.

A. U. to Meet Pepperdine 1st

Kansas City, March 11 (AP).—American University of Washington, D. C., will meet Pepperdine College of Los Angeles in the first round of the Intercollegiate Basketball Tournament beginning here Monday. The American-Pepperdine game is scheduled for 10:30 (CST).

Meanwhile, the College of Puget Sound, Takoma, Wash., was picked to replace Nevada. Nevada was denied a berth yesterday after a question was raised as to how they planned to finance the trip. A gambler had offered to put up the $1000 necessary.

Lawson Little Has 208 To Hold Second Place

Miami Beach, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Samuel Jackson Snead fired a dazzling 7 under par 65 today to take a 6-stroke lead in the Miami Beach tournament with a 54-hole total of 202.

The White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., professional, last year's "golfer of the year" and current leading money winner this year, was 14 strokes under part at the three quarters mark in the 72-hole medal play tournament.

Leading by two strokes at the end of 36 holes yesterday with 137, Snead carded a 4 under par 32 on the front side of the Normany Isle Golf Course and came home in 3 under par 33 in today's round. He scored four birdies and two eagles during the remarkable round.

Nearest competitor, 6 strokes behind, was Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., whose brilliant 33, 33—66 gave him 208 for 54 holes. He had scored 142 for the first two rounds.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, lanky St. Andrews, Ill., pro was seven strokes off Snead's torrid pace for third place at 209. He fired a 32, 35—67 to add to his previous 142.

Henry Ransom, also of St. Andrews, Ill., and Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., were deadlocked for fourth position with 210. Ransom shot a 5 under par 67 and Harper, who led with a 69 at the end of the first round, carded a 2 under par 70.

Dapper Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif.; Fred Hawkins, El Paso, Tex., and Roberto Di Vicenzo, Buenos Aires, were in a three-way tie for fifth position with 211.

Ft. Richardson Ousts Brooke

Fort Richardson, representing the Alaskan Command, eliminated Brooke Medical Center of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., 60-45, in the U. S. Army world-wide basketball tournament last night at Fort Belvoir.

Corpl. Don Fanoni, bed-ridden until yesterday in a hospital with an appendix ailment, sparked the victors with 33 points, high for the tournament.

Fort Richardson plays Fort Knox, undefeated in the tournament, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. A Fort Knox victory would give the Kentucky boys the tournament championship. A Richardson triumph would necessitate an 8 o'clock playoff.

Kovaleski Wins Title

Kingston, Jamaica, March 11 (AP).—Top-seeded Fred Kovaleski of Detroit today captured the Caribbean Tennis Championship with a 6—4, 6—4, 6—1 triumph over Frank Guernsey of Orlando, Fla., in the final round.

Redland Bowl Feature Won By Furr Horse

By Harry DeMawby, Jr.

Sure-footed Brown Stockings churned through fetlock-deep mud to score a half-length victory in the featured Redland Bowl point-to-point race yesterday at Oakdale, Md.

The Middleburg, Va., entry owned by D. O. Furr and ridden well by Nicholas de Felsovany, outlasted Jane Aitcheson's Merry Lee, from Burtonsville, Md. Another length back was Tony Auth's Carverdale, with Bill Carroll up.

A sizable crowd braved the rain and saw Thomas T. Mott's Chen, last year's victor, relinquish the lead under pressure by Merry Lee after the first mile. Chen then folded, finishing far back to the surprise of the crowd.

In the Terpenning Cup pair race, the opening event, Col. and Mrs. B. Wilson, riding Black Velvet and Jack Rabbit, were the winners. The latter was first across the finish line. Joseph Richards, 3d, on

Guepe Decides To Stay at Virginia, Signs

Charlottesville, Va., March 11 (AP).—Arthur L. Guepe today signed a new contract as head football coach at the University of Virginia after reportedly turning down an offer from a Pacific Coast school.

Terms of Guepe's new contract were not made public by Norton G. Pritchett, Virginia's director of athletics.

It was reported from another source, however, that Guepe was given a three-year contract. Since the early 30s, Virginia's football coaches have been employed on a year-to-year basis.

Pritchett said that the "West Coast school" bid for Guepe "as late as Friday." The name of the school was not revealed. However, the only Pacific Coast school currently in the market for a coach is Santa Clara, which recently lost Len Casanova to Pittsburgh.

Yale Nips Harvard

New Haven, Conn., March 11 (AP).—Ted Anderson's three points a minute and a half before the game ended gave the Yale basketball team a 1-point victory, 56-55, over Harvard here tonight.

Around The Town . . .

The Trinidad Boys' Club yesterday took on another athletic coach, Sal Trapani. Trapani will be the assistant boxing coach and instructor in drill and Judo.

There are still openings for other volunteer workers as coaches, instructors and assistants. Anyone interested should see Fred Nalley at the club, 1119 Wylie st. ne. or call him at Franklin 1324 on weekdays.

Silver Spring Will Practice Baseball

The Silver Spring baseball team of the Montgomery County League will practice from 1 to 5 this afternoon on the Rock Creek No. 2 diamond.

Team members and prospective candidates are asked to attend. For further information, call Ed Bladen at SH. 5779.

Junior Girls Swim At American U. March 24

The Junior Girls' Swimming Association of Washington meet will be held at 7 o'clock Friday, March 24, at the American University pool. Competition will be in the diving, form and speed events.

There will be awards for the first three places in individual events and for first place in the relays.

Competition will be held in classes ranging from 8 years and under to 14 and under.

Two Soccer Games Listed Here Today

Martin's Bakery plays the Greek Americans and Marlboro meets Charles County in the only two games scheduled for today in the Washington and Suburban Soccer League.

The Martin's-Greek Americans game will be at 16th and Kennedy sts. while the Marlboro-Charles County contest will be at Hughesville, Md. Both games are set for 2 p. m.

John Gilbert Junior Rifle Winner With 192 of 200

John Gilbert, 18, a freshman at the University of Maryland, yesterday won the 1950 individual junior rifle championship of the District of Washington on the Maryland range with 192 of a possible 200 points. The Arlington, Va., Junior Rimfire Rifle Club won the team championship with 737 of a possible 800 points. Richard Waters, Silver Spring, 1949 individual champion, could do no better than eighth place while Randolph-Macon Academy, 1949 team champion, finished second with 729.

Second to Gilbert, from New Rochelle, N. Y., was Richard Johnson of 480A 24th rd., Arlington, Va., with 190. Third, Roy Oster, Haverstown, Pa., with 188; fourth, University of Maryland freshman, Robert Hodes, 187. Fifth place went to Montgomery-Blair High School's shooting star, George Tolson of 220 Lexington dr., Silver Spring, Md., with 186.

Members of the winning Arlington Rimfire Club were Richard Johnson, with 191; Fred Gunn of 3102 Ravenswood rd., Alexandria, with 189; William Hoeck of 4916 Rock Spring rd., Arlington, with 174, and James Dyer of 3504 Hulsted dr., Chevy Chase, with 183 for the team total of 737. The Arlington club placed its No. 2 team third with 714, followed by Randolph-Macon's No. 2 with 710. Montgomery-Blair was the first local high school, grabbing fifth place with 710, followed by George Washington High at 687.

The 1950 District girls' crown went to American University Freshman Janis Thompson, of 2 Middlequist rd., Silver Spring, Md., with 167. She was followed by Nancy Funk, of the Honeywell School, with 163, and Donna Schmidt, of 2330 N. Gable st., Arlington, Va., with 159.

In Television, Too

Dizzy Dean at Last Becomes a Yankee

By Red Smith

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11 (NYHT).—It was opening day of the baseball exhibition season, an event which is hailed annually in St. Petersburg as the biggest thing since invention of the wheelchair. As the citizenry hobbled into Al Lang Field, reporters were handed a typewritten bulletin which announced:

SMITH

"The New York Yankees have signed Jerome H. (Dizzy) Dean to a full-year employe contract. The former star pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs will assist in several departments for the World Champions. He will be part of the radio-television picture, will go on scouting trips and will be given other special baseball assignments."

So at long, long last Jerome Herman Jay Hanna Dean, the man of multiple names and innumerable birthplaces, meets destiny face to face and becomes a Yankee. The stadium will be a happier place than ever this summer, and the television set an instrument such as Marconi never dreamed of.

At long last it will be possible to sit in the living room or lounge at the bar and be advised that Tommy Henrich, who looked great all through spring training, has just slid into second on a bunt by Bill Johnson and now the players are returning to their respectable positions.

Jay Hanna arrived on the field during batting practice.

He was modishly attired in an aura of greatness and slacks of explosive green, which he had selected under the misapprehension that color television was already in commercial production. He said he would be wonderful on television.

"I PHOTOGRAPH GREAT," he confessed under relentless grilling, "and the women really go for me."

He probably does, too. Even before his debut, one can estimate that here is a television actor who combines the personal magnetism of Howdy-Doody, the winsome quality of the Super Swedish Angel, the homely informality of Godfrey and the timorous, appealing shyness of Berle.

With Diz, the quality of difference has always been negligible. Away back in the winter of 1931-32, when he was a rookie with a major league background of one game, he underwent the testing experience of a salary discussion with Branch Rickey. At least two hours passed before Rickey staggered out of his office in St. Louis' Sportsman's Park. His collar was open, his eyes and hair wild, his whole figure sagging from an excess of eloquence.

"If there were one more like him in baseball," quoth the Great Persuader, "I'd quit the game. Do you know what that busher had the brass to tell me? He said, 'Mr. Rickey, I'll put more people in your parks than anybody since Babe Ruth'."

It is a matter of record that he did, too.

Al Zarilla Bats in All Boston Runs

Sarasota, Fla., March 11 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, paced by the hitting of Al Zarilla, launched their Florida Grapefruit League season successfully today by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 1, before a record crowd of 3666 fans at Payne Field.

The Reds jumped into a quick first inning lead, when Johnny Wyrostek lashed Joe Dobson's initial pitch deep down the left field line for a triple and scored on Grady Hatton's long fly to center.

Zarilla put the Sox back in the game in the fourth after Ken Raffensberger held them well in check over the first three innings.

Dom DiMaggio opened with a single off Rookie Frank Smith and Johnny Pesky drew a walk. DiMaggio moved to third on Williams' long fly to right and, with two away, scored on Zarilla's single.

Pesky opened the sixth with another walk and Williams drew another pass. Doer sacrificed them along and both scored on Zarilla's long single to right field, which Ron Northey just missed.

Joe Ardcock, rookie Red first baseman, was forced out of the game in the sixth when struck on the left wrist by a Charlie Schanz pitch. At a Sarasota hospital X-rays showed no break. Litwhiler, who replaced him in the batting order, was hit by Pitcher Gordon Mueller in the eighth, but was unhurt.

Braves' 6-Run 9th Wins

Phils Score In 10th, Beat Detroit, 9-8

Clearwater, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Willie Jones scored from third base on a fly ball in the last of the tenth inning today to enable the Philadelphia Phillies to edge the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 8, in the opening Grapefruit League game for the two teams.

The American League Tigers took an early 3 to 0 lead on ace Phillies' Righthander Russ Meyer with Dick Kryhoski's three-run homer. But the Phillies rallied for five runs in the fourth, including a two-run home run by Catcher Stan Lopata.

With Dizzy Trout on the mound for the Tigers, Willie Jones reached second on a two-base error by Shortstop Johnny Lipon. He moved to third on Ed Sanicki's infield single and scored the National Leaguer's winning run on Gran Hamner's long fly.

Chisox Barely Beat Cubs, 8-7

Pasadena, Calif., March 11 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs lost 8 to 7 today after staging a six-run ninth-inning rally against the Chicago White Sox in their 1950 exhibition baseball opener.

It took four Sox hurlers to complete the deal, the victory becoming a certainly only after Randy Gumpert had struck out Pinch-Hitter Hank Edwards for the final out.

Scoreless for five innings, the Cubs finally picked up one run in the sixth. The Sox tallied two in the third, one in the fourth and five in the fifth frame. They were powerless, however, to score thereafter.

Marshall's 2-Run Bingle Whips Dodgers

Miami, Fla., March 11 (AP).—The Boston Braves exploded with a six-run ninth inning today for a 9-3 victory over the National League Champion Brooklyn Dodgers, as the teams opened their spring exhibition game series before 10,384 fans in the new Miami Stadium.

The clubs were deadlocked, 3-3, going into the final frame with bonus pitcher Billy Loes on the mound for Brooklyn.

Bob Addis, hitting for Pitcher Dick Donovan who twirled two hitless frames, opened with a single past third.

Connie Ryan followed with a double to left and Sam Jethroe, who collected two hits in his major league debut, was walked intentionally.

Willard Marshall, Boston purchase from New York's Giants, pulled the first pitch into right field for two runs and the speedy Jethroe, running half way down the third base line, forced a throw which went wide, and another Boston marker was across.

Hopkins Wins Wrestling Title; Gallaudet 2d

Baltimore, March 11. (AP).—Johns Hopkins captured four individual titles and won its fifth straight Mason-Dixon Conference wrestling championship tonight with a team score of 35 points.

Gallaudet finished second with 28 points under the NCAA 6-4-2-1 scoring system. One bonus point was scored for each fall.

Other schools in order of finish were: Catholic U. with 16 points, Towson Teachers 15, Loyola College 14, Baltimore U. 12, Western Maryland 7, and American U. 0.

Marshall Sets Swim Records

New Haven, Conn., March 11 (AP). Jet-propelled John Marshall, the Australian Olympic swimmer now a member of the Yale freshman team, broke two world records today as he led the Eli yearlings to a 46-29 victory over the Harvard freshmen.

Marshall broke both marks while winning the 440-yard freestyle, as he was clocked at the 400-meter mark also. His time for 400 meters was 4:33.1, two-tenths of a second better than the world mark which he and Hironshin Furukoshi of Japan held jointly. He was clocked at 4:34.8 for the 440.

A. U. Swimmers Upset Loyola

American University shattered Loyola University's hold on the Mason-Dixon Conference swimming championship by piling up 56 points to Loyola's 48 in the conference championships yesterday at the American U. pool. Loyola had held the title for the past three years.

The two schools made it virtually a private contest, with Loyola winning five and American four of the nine events.

Catholic University took third place with ten points, followed by Roanoke and Randolph-Macon with five each and Johns Hopkins with four.

San Francisco Eliminated

was turned in by Ed Warner, a 6-foot-2½-inch sophomore forward for CCNY.

Warner's afternoon inventory showed 8 field goals and 10 free throws for 26 points.

CCNY was never headed, rolling up a 32-19 lead at the half and doubling the score shortly afterwards on three great shots by Warner.

Western Kentucky, picked by many as a good title bet, had some uneasy moments against Niagara.

The first half was knotted six times and Niagara led at one time by six points before the Blue Grass athletes finally got going under Lavoy's improved marksmanship.

Shipley promptly excused O'Rourke, suggesting, in no uncertain terms, that he turn in his suit. Which the non-plussed O'Rourke did.

Richard didn't like the bawling out.

"Heck, I don't go in for fundamentals like that warm-up business," he explained last night.

Did he tell Shipley of his phenomenal eight straight no-hit, no-run, no-man-to-first games?

"Heck no, let him find out for himself. He's a coach, he ought to be able to tell if a player's got it or not."

And when did young Richard do all of his phenomenal pitching?

Up in Yorktown, N. Y., for a team known as the Yorktown Cornhuskers. We were in a Kiwanis League, bunch of boys between 17 and 20. I didn't pitch last year, played the outfield to sharpen up my batting."

And how in the world did anyone manage to hit a homer off him to break up his string of eight straight "perfect" games?

That was only an exhibition in Yankee stadium. Besides, I was tired."

Gadzooks, what a guy!

If Pittsburgh paid Paul Pettit $100,000, I'm latching on to O'Rourke, but firmly. He's left-handed, red-headed, hot-headed, Irish and 6 feet tall

Oklahoma Wins; Race in 3-Way Tie

Norman, Okla, March 11. (AP).—Oklahoma whipped Kansas, 52-49, tonight and threw the Big Seven basketball race into a three-way season-ending tie.

POVICH—From Pg. 1-C

At 80 Griffith Seeks Vindication

started to mend his fences. Floundering in his dilemma at the two-pronged threat of Jachym's intrusion and the effect his eighth-place team might have on the stockholders, Griffith turned to an old friend—Bucky Harris.

He released Joe Kuhel as manager, and brought back Harris in a move that showed him groping to restore some of the former glories of the Washington team under Harris. Here was at least a reminder that they once won pennants for Washington. And this was not going to be temporary. He proudly announced a three-year contract for Harris.

No Washington manager ever was given so complete a blank check as Harris. On Bucky's recommendation, Griffith paid $70,000 for Noren, sight unseen. He raised no objection when Harris drafted Pitcher Fred Nagy, Catcher Mickey Grasso and Infielder Mike Genovese from the Coast League for $30,000 more. The Old Gentleman quietly went on a spending spree.

The Griffith-Harris team is going to impress the stockholders this season, Griff thinks. "I don't know a better judge of ball players than Harris," he says. "If I don't need him as a manager, he'd be my top scout."

Since his regulars reported here on March 5, Griffith has been taking his first long breath. The eyes have it again, that sparkle which betokens a high satisfaction with things as they are. Griffith is beginning to like his 1950 ball team a whole lot, and in his minds eye he is beginning to vision that first Tuesday in January, 1951, when in triumph he again will ask the stockholders for their votes.

With the Noren deal, he's already satisfied. "Bucky spent our money smartly," he says. "From what I've already seen of Noren, we got him cheaply. I don't blame Harris for liking him."

Twenty-six years ago, when he gave Harris his first job as manager, Griffith recalls he also gave him a bit of advice. He doubts that it will apply in the Noren deal because he expects that young man to make good, emphatically.

"But I told Harris in 1924 that a manager should never be wedded to a ball player just because he happened to be the man who selected him," said Griffith. "I told him I wanted to give him the benefits of all the mistakes I had made as a manager. There's a temptation to carry too long a flopping ball player, just because the manager chose him. I told Bucky to drop that kind quick, even if it was admitting his own mistake."

Griffith's lone worry in this Washington training camp is his thin line of pitchers. "We're taking more gambles with our pitching than I like," he admitted, "and it will be a shame if we don't get the kind of pitching that could make this club a real first-division outfit. That's all we need—pitching."

Both Griffith and Harris are high on their outfield, and quite content with their infield and catching. Noren, they both declare, is not only a "can't miss" type, but could rocket immediately into one of the good hitters of the league. "And Dom Di Maggio is the only center fielder who can go farther for any kind of ball," adds Harris.

Noren, Gil Coan and Sam Mele is the outfield Harris visions as his regular trio. Of the baffling Coan, Harris says, "he could be even more valuable than Noren. Why he hasn't been one of the good ones already, I don't know." Mele will round out a defensive outfield that "may even make our pitching look a lot better," says Harris.

The Nats' bosses are confident this is the year for Eddie Yost to "arrive" as one of the good hitters of the league. They're content with his third-basing, point out that he was on his way to a .300 batting average before he was hurt last year. On all counts they like Sam Dente at shortstop, Eddie Robinson at first base.

"Al Kozar at second base will make or break our infield," says Harris. "I've never seen much of him and I'm surprised how he can sting that ball. Maybe I can brush him up on the business of playing second. I'm surprised at some of the things he doesn't know about it."

This 1950 club will hit, declares Griffith. Noren, Robinson, Coan, Yost and Vollmer will rattle the fences and park many a homer outside, he thinks. They're a heap better off in infield and outfield reserves this year. And to Griffith, the satisfactory item is that it's mostly his doing—none of Jachym's. He'd like to let the stockholders know that, at 80, there's a lot of baseball in him yet.

Even Haver Lets Big One Get Away

By Ralph Murdock

PERCY P. HAVER, kingpin muskellunge angler, has spent nearly 30 years of fishing the fresh waters of America and Canada. In the last 10 years alone he has brought in over 3000 muskies. At least 400 have weighed 40 pounds or better.

Murdock

Haver's proudest catch of all was a record musky that tipped the beam at 62½ pounds. The hefty was caught in the Detroit River.

The fishing champ is touring the country on a mission to encourage greater appreciation of the outdoors with special emphasis on the thrills and benefits of successful fishing. Percy is making his tour in a Kaiser "Vagabond" fitted out as a camp on wheels.

When "Perc" goes fishing he just ain't kidding. He carries a complete camping outfit, a tent, an eight-day supply of food for as many as four persons and a 10-foot aluminum boat. Nimrod Haver is appearing at the the Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show at the Armory which closes tonight.

Percy explained that his nemesis is a huge muskie which inhabits a spot in Lake St. Clair, situated between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

To the champ's experienced eye, the big fella weighs between 60 and 100 pounds, if he weighs an ounce. Not once, but three times has he hooked the big bruiser and on each occasion the fish escaped after breaking up a lot of expensive tackle in the process. As Haver puts it, "the big ones always get away."

Herb Goodman, Remington Rand big-wig, Vernon Palmer, of McLean, Va., and yours truly are leaving today for a two-week fishing trip in Florida.

AN ELIMINATION contest was held by the members of the National Capital Casting Club to select a representative team in the tournament at the Sports Show at the Armory. Scores and the order in which they finished in dry-fly competition:

Gay Pilate Beaten Out By a Neck

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, March 11.—W. B. Worthington's Little Brandy, a hunch on a rather rugged day here, was a driving winner of the Shenandoah purse, featuring the second weekend program of the Charles Town Jockey Club.

Under the urging of Apprentice Mike Sorrentino, the son of Big Brand scored by a neck margin over Mrs. V. Fitzgerald's Gay Pilate. A length and a half further back came Justin Funkhouser's Endear to be third in the field of six.

Little Brandy, winner of the final race on the closing day program here last December, was making his first start and brought his backers a $15.60 mutuel. He was clocked in 1.29 3/5 for the about 7 furlongs over a track labelled "good."

Snow Falls Before Noon

Despite snow which fell before noon and turned to rain in the early afternoon, a crowd of 6500 reported for the sport and betting was slightly over last weekend. Precipitation failed to more than dampen the racing surface.

W. C. Ensor's Love Lock ran the fastest about 4½ furlongs at this meeting when she whipped seven other 3-year-olds in the day's secondary feature, the fifth event. Love Lock scored by three lengths and registered a time of 0:49 3/5 while under the handling of Jockey Willie Downs.

Pen-Mar Stable's Make Hay, the favorite, was second, with Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Boston Hero third. The winner paid $6.

Easy Homer added his name to the list of Washington-owned horses to win here by taking the third event under the colors of Richard Melvin. Apprentice Eddie Danhauer rode the winner, a $7.60 shot, clocked in 1:22 4/5 for the 6½ furlongs.

Double Pays $30

A pair of second choices figured in a $30 pay-off on the daily double combination of 8 and 1. Jimmy Baird opened the program by winning with J. B. Royston's Whizz Happy, getting the 6-year-old home five lengths in front of a tight fit for place between Stanley Green, jr.'s Pinkey Darlin and Flood and Sechrest's W. M. Green. The winner stepped the about 4½ furlongs in 0:52 3/5 and paid $7.40.

Sammy Palumbo was up on R. M. Finn's Mix Man in the second race and the combination proved the right one. Mix Man came around the leaders to win going away by three lengths. G. P. Strong's King's Guard was second ahead of J. K. Wynkoop's War Spy. Mix Man went the 6½ furlongs in 1:22 3/5 and returned $7.20.

He Tries Shooting to Improve Eyesight

HANK CROSS, GEORGETOWN'S ALLAMERICA RIFLEMAN

Through Thick Glasses

It Works and Georgetown's Hank Cross Is All-America

It hasn't been bandied about, but Georgetown University has a genuine All-American on the campus.

Henry D. (Hank) Cross is the gent and rifle marksmanship is his forte.

As a sophomore last season, Cross was named on the 10-man All-American by the National Rifle Association. Averaging 283 points in 10 matches this year, he's a good bet to repeat in the National Intercollegiates at Annapolis, April 1.

Remarkable thing about the 19-year-old is that, without glasses, he can't even see the target at 50 feet, let alone the bull's-eye that's a microscopic .15 inch in diameter.

Hank was a polio victim as a baby and the dread disease struck eye muscles. Even today, vision in his shooting eye is only 20/100. Roughly, that's 2 percent normal.

Thick-lens glasses correct his sight and he manages to overcome the handicap of having them on when he has to snuggle close to his rifle's iron sight to squeeze off bulls-eyes.

Sergt. 1/c Calvatore Gagliemo, attached to the ROTC at Georgetown and rifle coach, said, "I've seen good shooters wear glasses, but I've never seen any as expert with eyes as bad as Cross has."

Hank says shooting is good for him. He took up target shooting after consultation with his doctor. It's been lots more fun than eye exercises.

Hank's father, a Holmdale, N. J., farmer, gave him a gun when he was 9.

Hank tied fabulous little Arthur Cook in the Intercollegiates last year and even beat him in a New York Metropolitan match.

And how many times has Cook beaten him? "That's just it," Hank smiled, "too many times. Arthur's great. Once in a while, another shooter can get hot and beat him, but you have to get awfully hot."

Washington is the center of good marksmanship. The fact that the National Rifle Association has headquarters here has a lot to do with it. The NRA offers utmost cooperation to clubs and schools in the vicinity.

In addition to Cook and Cross, George Washington's Woodward G. Eicke, jr., made last year's All-American team. A dozen other local collegians are close to the big three. JACK WALSH.

Horse Injures Jockey

Charles Town, March 11.—Apprentice Jockey John Dickey suffered a broken nose this morning when a horse he was galloping reared and struck him in the face.

Bill Bennings . . .

At Charles Town.

Dear Folks:

Virginia adds another excellent horse to its breeding colony. Trainer C. M. Feltner sent word here that Kitchen Police, owned by Gustave Ring of Washington, will stand at the Alpine Farm in nearby Berryville, Kitchen Police, bred and run by the Vanderbilt Stable, proved a capable horse, particularly in sprints. He was disqualified after winning at Pimlico while under Vanderbilt colors, much to the surprise of the wise guys who yelled, "they'll never take that number down at this track." Riders Nolan Griffith and Ray Ardunini, the latter a Washington boy, are busy these days. They work out horses each morning at Pimlico and then motor here to perform in the afternoon. BILL.

Exercise Boy Hurt After Colt Throws Him

Laurel, Md., March 11 (AP).—Albert Bocson, 32-year-old exercise rider, was in "fair" condition today at the Prince Georges Hospital after being thrown from a colt yesterday at the Laurel racetrack.

Bocson, a former jockey, was tossed into the outside rail off a 2-year-old. He suffered head and possible internal injuries.

Bocson is employed by Trainer H. Guy Bedwel of Savage, Md.

Titone Fights Newcomer Here Monday

Brooklyn's Charlie Titone takes on Calvin Leigh of Rochester N. Y., in the feature 10-round bout at Turner's Areana Monday night with national ranking for the Brooklynite hinging on the outcome.

Titone, who has lost only six of 52 fights and only twice in the past two years, has been recommended for a ranking by Col. Harvey Miller, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association.

Titone's two recent losses were to Jimmy Cooper and Bobby Bell, both of whom he beat in later matches. A loss to Leigh, however, would ruin his chances of gaining national acclaim.

Leigh has a record of 15 decisions, 11 KO's, two draws and seven losses and he will be trying for an upset tomorrow to increase his own prestige.

The Titone-Leigh scrap headlines a card which sees the return of local flyweight Puggy King after a layoff. King meets Coffy Wilkinson, also of Washington, in a five-round semifinal.

Four-round preliminaries pit Eddie Green against Scott Richardson, and Jimmy O'Brien against Angelo Marini in two middleweight bouts, and a lightweight fight pair, Bobby Busick and Tommy Rupard. One more will be arranged.

Hoya Football Drills to Open

Spring football practice at Georgetown University opens tomorrow with a squad meeting in Ryan Gym. On Tuesday, the 50-odd candidates begin outdoor drills.

Coach Bob Margarita begins his second year at the Hoya helm. The 29-year-old mentor finished with a 5-5 record last year after Georgetown won four of its first five games.

Kramer, Gonzales Play Here Friday

Jack Kramer and Pancho Gonzales, on a world's professional championship tennis tour that already has carried overseas, return to Uline Arena Friday at 8:30 p. m.

Kramer defeated Gonzales in a previous appearance here last fall and holds a 66—19 margin in the scores. Bobby Riggs, former world's amateur and pro net champion, meets Pancho Segura in a second singles match.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Production Efficiency Cuts Jobs

Efficiency is beginning to creep up on us—on labor, on management, on Congress, and on President Truman. You can see it in the unemployment statistics. In February, 3,700,000 people were out of work. That constitutes 7.6 percent of the labor force, the highest proportion since January 1942. And it's not because new jobs haven't been created. It's mostly because postwar technological improvements are coming home to roost.

Livingston

You can understand what has happened. Ever since the end of the war, manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers have been installing new equipment. Ditto the railroads, the public utilities, and the telephone company. Gradually, these improvements begin to pay off. Fewer men or less time is required to do the same job.

The industrial downturn during 1949 accelerated the trend toward efficiency. As companies had less work to do, they laid off the least productive workers, union rules permitting. Then, when business picked up again and companies rehired, they took back the more efficient workers.

A Clue and Its Consequences

Here's a clue to what happened. Employment in manufacturing and mining between January 1949 and January 1950 dropped 6.2 percent. But production during that same period declined only 4.2 percent. Thus manufacuring and mining companies were able to reduce their work forces faster than their output, as the following table shows:

| | Jan. 1950 | Jan. 1949 | % Drop |
|---|---|---|---|
| Employment* | 14,803,000 | 15,773,000 | 6.2% |
| Production | 183 | 191 | 4.2 |

*Manufacturing and mining.
Federal Reserve Board index.

Another way to look at it is this. According to the Bureau of Census, 50,730,000 persons were at work in February in non-agricultural occupations, an increase of more than 500,000 over February 1949. Yet unemployment was up 1,500,000.

Of the increase, only half is attributable to newcomers to the labor force—college and high school graduates seeking jobs. The other half is attributable to higher output per worker.

The boon of technology is bound to force politicians, labor leaders, and businessmen to take a new look at the world around them. How can they deal with the problem? Will increased efficiency raise hell with full employment?

Coal Is an Extreme Instance

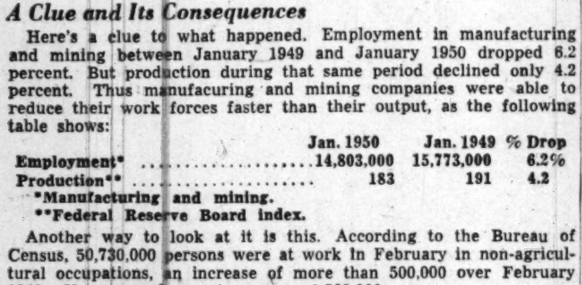
John L. Lewis is only too well aware of what technology is doing to his United Mine Workers union. Production per miner per day has risen from four tons in 1920 to five tons in 1930 to 6.3 tons in 1948 and perhaps to 6.5 tons last year.

During the recent coal negotiations, Lewis demanded a cut from eight to seven hours at the same rate of pay. He finally dropped the demand, but it's likely to come up again. He got instead a higher wage. Presumably Lewis hopes to get wages up to where miners will make a living on three and a half to four days a week. For coal consumption is declining while production per man is still rising—because of increasing mechanization.



Shorter work days or weeks could well become a pivotal labor issue. In 1946, 1947, and 1948 unions went after higher wages. Last year pensions were the big issue. And this year and next, labor leaders may call for shorter work weeks—presumably at the same rate of pay, so that workers' purchasing power won't decline.

Business Men Must Face It

Labor leaders may well demand increased wages at the same time. They might argue that increased payrolls are necessary if production is to expand and sufficient new employment created to offset technological disemployment.

By no means is that the sole solution, however. Conceivably, industrial production and employment may start expanding again. After all, the recovery from the recession of 1949 had hardly begun when the coal strike intervened and steel and other industries had to throttle down.

Since the issue is bound to arise sooner or later, business men must get ready for it. They can lower prices, thereby widening markets, which would make possible increased production and employment. They can increase wages and thus enlarge demand. They can shorten hours. Or they can use any combination of all three. Of one thing they can be certain. If unemployment rises another million, Congress and the President will surely try to do something about it. Far better would it be if business could turn the trend itself—without Government aid.

Retail Sales in Dead Heat

Meanwhile, department store sales reflect the rise in unemployment and the effects of the coal strike. Sales in the week ended March 4 finished in a dead heat with the corresponding week of 1949. And at that time the retail business was in a slump from the 1948 high and near the low point of the year.

There's a saver, however. This year prices are about 6 percent lower than a year ago. Therefore the volume of goods moving into consumer hands is larger. But since merchants count their dollars, not their unit sales, they're not too optimistic at the moment. They figure they are merely holding their own. For this they are grateful to furniture, sales of which have flourished.

D. C. Nonchain Sales Up 3% In January

By S. Oliver Goodman

January sales of Washington independent retail stores showed an over-all increase of 3 percent, compared with the same 1949 month, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

Principal factor in the gain was a 28 per cent sales upsurge in the auto field. Otherwise, the trend was irregular with nine fields displaying upturns for the month and nine showing drops.

Also prominent on the upside was the electric appliance line with a spurt of 21 per cent for the month. Smaller gains were reported for food stores, shoe dealers, lumber-building equipment, auto accessory, filling stations and jewelry stores.

Men's and women's apparel was the leader on the downside, with other drops being shown by fuel, liquor, furniture, hardware and restaurants.

The normal seasonal drop from December to January was estimated here at 38 per cent, with only the auto dealers able to show an increase.

Comparative sales figures for Washington nonchain sales, as reported by the Census Bureau, follow:

| | Jan. vs. Jan. '49 | Jan.vs. Dec. '49 |

MAGNITUDE: Did you know that annually more than 775 million forms for Federal income tax returns are printed? And it costs about 1½ million dollars. For the familiar Form 1040 alone, 27½ carloads of paper stock is consumed. If all these 1040 forms were unfolded and placed end-to-end, they would extend twice around the world (and good riddance too).

PEPCO SALES: Sales of Potomac Electric Power Co. in February totaled 177,912,172 kilowatt hours, compared with 173,875,809 kilowatt hours in 1949, an increase of 4,036,363 kilowatts and 2.32 percent. Sales in 1950 to date aggregated 363,855,339 kilowatt hours, an increase of 11,157,374 and 3.16 percent over 1949.

HOTEL TREND: Occupancy rate of hotels continues to decrease, according to Horwath & Horwath, statisticians for the industry. The January rate nationally averaged 80 percent of available rooms, against 83 percent in same 1949 month; 86 percent in January, 1948, and 90 percent in January 1947.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ralph D. Yates, assistant to the director of the traffic department, American Trucking Associations, Inc., has been named chief of the associations' government traffic section. G. D. Sentheimer, director of safety of the group, has been named a member of the executive committee of the National Committee for Traffic Safety . . . George C. Kopp, banker of Kansas City, Mo., has been elected a director of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad . . . E. Jenny Graff has been appointed vice president in charge of radio and television for Kaufman and Associates, Chicago advertising agency.

Corn Whisky Poisons Boy, 2; Accidents Kill 9

People get into more trouble than anybody.

A two-year-old boy was poisoned last week when he drank three ounces of corn whisky.

A three-year-old swallowed an entire jar of metholated salve.

A mother caught her hand in an electric mixer and in an attempted rescue the hand of her 5-year-old daughter was also caught.

These were the highlights of the weekly Home Accident Survey prepared by the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service.

Nine deaths were reported due to falls and burns at home. The total injury breakdown listed 50 falls, 14 burns, 10 accidental poisonings, 13 "foreign bodies," 21 cuts, 5 bruises, and 15 miscellaneous.

Injuries reported thus far in 1950 amounted to 1110, 50 less than at the same time in 1949. Deaths due to home accidents thus far in 1950 reached 40, eight less than in 1949 for the same period.

Other accidental poisonings were reported last week from the consumption of kerosene, cough syrup, rubbing alcohol, insecticide and coal oil.

Templars' Chief To Take Part in Easter Service

Gaylord

Robert B. Gaylord of San Francisco, grand master of Knights Templar of the United States, yesterday advised Richard E. Titlow, chairman of the April 9 Easter Sunrise Services of the Templars at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, that he and other members of the Grand Encampment would participate in the program here.

Gaylord also informed Titlow that grand commanders and their staffs from many States have indicated their intentions of coming here for the pageant.

Titlow said that Maryland's black-plumed Templars and commanderies from nearby Virginia would participate in the procession.

The Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonary for the Valley of Washington announced yesterday Easter Services would be held in the Temple, 2800 16th st. nw. The Rite also will hold Maundy Thursday services.

C. U. Procurator To Speak on Spain In Forum Lecture

The problem of full diplomatic recognition of the Franco government in Spain, by the United States, and conditions in that country, will be discussed Thursday before the Charles Carroll Forum of Washington.

Fr. Magner

The discussion will be by The Rev. Dr. James A. Magner, procurator of Catholic University, at the Forum's last lecture of the 1949-50 season, at 8:15 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Magner is regarded as an authority on Spain. He has visited there during the past two years to bring up to date his observations on earlier visits dating back to 1929. A question-and-answer period will follow the lecture.

Burglars Truck Off With $1080 Groceries

Husky—and apparently hungry thieves broke into a Safeway grocery store early yesterday and took $1080 worth of meat and groceries, police were told.

The store is at 4865 MacArthur blvd. nw. Missing were 113 Smithfield hams, quantities of other meat, poultry, fish, butter, eggs, coffee, and flour. Police said the burglars apparently used a pinch bar to force the back door and to break a padlock on a dairy products cooler.

Police believe they must have used a truck to haul away their loot.

School Assembly To See A-Energy Show

Atomic energy devices will be demonstrated to students of Anacostia High School at a special assembly Tuesday at 9:10 a. m. at the school, 16th and R sts. se. X-ray tubes, Crookes' tubes, a radium compound, a Van De Graaff generator and a Geiger-Muller counter will be shown.

The assembly will be presented by a group of science students and the science department to acquaint the non-science students with the meaning of atomic energy.

Philippines Pact Extended

Manila, March 11 (U.P.).—The United States-Philippines military assistance agreement, which provides American military equipment, was extended today to 1953. The pact, signed in 1947, was to expire in 1951. The United States Embassy said equipment should begin to arrive early this summer.

SAR to Hear Dean Rusk

Dean Rusk, deputy Under Secretary of State, will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution, at 9 p. m. Wednesday in the Carlton Hotel. Annual election of officers will also be held.

Labor Radio Series

A weekly series of broadcasts titled "Labor Speaks" will be inaugurated Tuesday at 10 p. m. over Station WWDC in support of the United States Bond Savings Program.

The five-minute broadcasts, aimed at the 250,000 members of organized labor in the Washington area, will feature talks by local labor officials.

MEN READ CAREFULLY
Monday morning at 10 a. m. sharp, I want to talk to 20 men who are really ambitious in securing a position that will give them steady employment the year 'round. In other words, there are no laying-off periods and consistent income is the income that really counts. It doesn't matter what your past employment has been, all we ask is that you be willing to study and learn as we teach you our work. It will also be necessary that you be willing to get along on $75 to $85 per week for the first 4 or 6 weeks while learning our work. A car is essential. You must also be able to give the names of 3 people who will vouch for your honesty and integrity. We prefer men who are married or men who have some measure of responsibility. I would also like to talk to a few men who are mechanically inclined and who know a good thing when they see it. Therefore if you are honest and of good character, willing worker, neat in appearance, come and talk with me.

VIRGINIA FARMS

Ranging from 30 acres to 5000 acres in size and from $20,000 to $500,000 in price. These farms are located in beautiful northern Virginia, from the Tidewater to the mountains. Many are within commuting distance of Washington. Cattle, dairy and general purpose farms are a specialty. If you want to live out of town, be it in a modest cottage or in a state's Colonial mansion, see MASON HIRST, Annandale, Va., at the end of Columbia Pike. Phone FA. 7447. Closed Sun.

5 A., 6-r. bungalow, elect., water and phone. 16 miles of D. C. $6,500 cash. 160 a., 7-r. $23,500, half cash. 300-a. dairy farm. $28,000, one-third cash.

45 a., 7-r. and b. $15,000, half cash. 1 a., 8-r. mod. 14 miles on bus rt. $14,700, half cash.

Other small farms.

A CHARMING PLACE

Found after 7 weeks of interrupted searching by "Our man on the road." It was located only Friday. This 100-acre farm earns money and at the same time is one of the most charming country homes in Loudoun County. Artistic house with every modern convenience including oil heat; beautifully placed on property, fine barn and outbuildings; not too close to residence. 5 well proportioned fields, all in pasture, well-fenced and well-watered; 6-acre wooded lot, rear of property bounded by Catoctin Creek, which is a superior bass stream. A perfect place for a man about to retire who needs a further income. The house has only 2 large bedrooms, but a cottage a few steps from the house could take the guests. In the Waterford area, not recommended for the commuter, unless he is willing to give up an hour and a half on the road each way; priced $19,500, with a good amount of cash. Call F. E. Osler, OW. 3007 or Waterford 2291.

CHEVY CHASE

Lot 90x120, all utilities: Conn. and East-West hwy. transportation: close to churches and schools. Attractively priced. Build your home with confidence in a restricted community. JU. 7-6943.

SPRINGBROOK

Sacrificing, $5750; over 4 acres. Large frontage on Colesville rd. Beautiful site with stream; suitable for immediate use or speculation. This is one of Montgomery County's finest estate subdivisions and at price asked is far under market value. SH. 1011.

YOUNG-BOWERS CO.

ARE YOU A SUBDIVIDER? If so, here is your chance to make a fortune and a name for yourself all in one transaction. Nearly a mile and a half of acreage fronting River and Bradley rds., overlooking Congressional Club, River rd., you know, is going to become Massachusetts ave. extended. We have here the most beautiful hills of Greater Washington's Capital City. I expended $1640 on each acre of these hills on landscaping and grading. As a suggestion: Build George Washington's Mt. Vernon home on the most beautiful hills you ever saw in your life right opposite the Congressional Club entrance. And another suggestion: Build a White House of the type President Truman lives in (except to reduce the size to meet the needs of your family) on the big adjoining hill. These famous homes would be the sensation of Greater Washington's Capital City. You have a spring, a stream, and you can have your own swimming pool. You can have your own private bridle path as this is horse lovers' country. You can have your own private golf links right on your own property. There is a 5-acre lot right where all these important roads come together. You can have a Giant food store there to supply everything you need from the automobile to the table. Reach me at my home.

It Could Only Happen in Washington

Top Benefit Taps 51 'States' for Glamorous Table Tops

By Peggy Preston

BENEFITS, like the Government, are big business in Washington. And, like the cherry blossoms, they flourish in the spring.

That's the season when the wheels of Government are all operating in high gear . . . when the city directory reads like a world-wide Who's Who, and a patroness list can be top-heavy with "big names." It is also the season of fashion shows which are Washington's favorite medium for attracting record crowds to its giant "parties with a cause."

The ramifications of planning and producing these huge benefits reach out to the four corners of the globe. What would be purely a local affair in Kokomo, Ind., can, in Washington, involve the wife of a European ambassador, the costumes of the Far East, orchids from Hawaii, and personnel from every State in the Union.

Hundreds of wives of prominent officials engage in the months of work that precede such an event, and thousands of dollars change hands before the curtain comes down to the tune of $10 per ticket.

Biggest and Best Coming Up

CLASSIC example of what a benefit party can mean in Washington is this spring's spectacular event planned for April 12 by the Woman's National Democratic Club. Principal aim is to raise funds for improvements on the 26-year-old clubhouse. But, while they're about it, the ladies intend to stage the season's biggest and best party of its kind.

It's to be a three-star production—luncheon, fashion show and State table decoration contest. Two of the Statler Hotel's largest banquet rooms, the Presidential and Congressional, have been reserved, and the guest list headed by Mrs. Truman will number well over 800.

Resources far removed from the Nation's Capital are being tapped for the party. Christian Dior, the French designer, is coming from Paris, and his entire American collection will be paraded on a 115-foot runway for which the hotel has ordered a specially made carpet.

From the 48 States

BUSINESS firms and chambers of commerce in the 48 States and three Territories are sending decorations for the tables. Advertisements for the souvenir programs are coming in from New York and points across the country. Fabulous special gifts, pouring in from everywhere in the Union, include such items as $65 bottles of perfume, a round trip plane trip to Puerto Rico, and a Dior gown.

For the luncheon itself the hotel is bringing out its handsome white, blue and gold Presidential china, used for all important state functions. It is estimated that 4500 pieces of this china will be used for the luncheon, along with approximately 4800 pieces of silverware. A series of sample menus were fork-tested by a committee before one was finally settled upon.

Harris & Ewing

INTERNATIONAL flavor is added to the Women's National Democratic Club benefit by virtue of the fact that the fashion show will feature the entire American collection of Christian Dior, French designer, who will be among the guests. Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, at left, and Mrs. James A. Murray, general chairman, discuss plans for the party over the tea table in the Embassy drawing room

She's Admiral of the Fleet

PULLING together the myriad details of this ambitious enterprise is Mrs. James A. Murray, who, as general chairman, is in the position of a fleet admiral. It is her job to see that no serious breakdown occurs in the tightly knit organization she has built up to carry out the party plans.

So far, the sailing has been relatively smooth. Mrs. Murray, daughter-in-law of Senator James E. Murray of Montana, took over the position of general chairman last November. By Christmas she had most of the ground work laid, the bulk of her committee chairmen appointed. These in turn selected their own committee members, and as of this date approximately 200 women are engaged in plans for the project.

This is how Mrs. Murray mapped out her campaign. First she divided the States and Territories into six regions, and named the following as regional chairmen: Mrs. John Boyle, Mrs. William Warne, Mrs. Frederic Halsted, Mrs. Edward Wheeler, Mrs. Braxton Jones and Mrs. Frank Rogers. Next, table chairmen were named for each of the 48 States and three Territories of Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Program Chairman Important

TO THE all-important job of chairman of the souvenir program committee she named Mrs. Laurence P. Sherfy, who then named 48 women as subchairmen. The post of chairman of patronesses went to Mrs. Charles Brannan. Other women well known in official circles were named to head committees on judges, publicity, tickets, invitations, special gifts, decorations, volunteers, music, etc.

State Table Contest

SHROUDED in secrecy, and generating more interest than any other feature of the party, is the State table contest. Here the idea is that the States and Territories be represented with huge centerpieces, emblematic of the resources, industries or history of each. Since the stakes are State pride and some handsome prizes, no State is letting the other know what it is up to. There's to be no "borrowing" of ideas if the women can prevent it. So little or no feminine chit-chat is going on in this division.

However, the Michigan committee goes so far as to say the Ford Motor Co. has offered to decorate one table. Admitted, also, is the fact that every part of the Nation will be represented with its native flowers.

If things work out as they did last year when the contest was initiated, each and every table will be a spectacular success. Among the contributions were a silver mine from Nevada, a cow made of butter from West Virginia, a sugar-spun replica of Virginia's Monticello, and a scene from California's gold rush days.

Competition is so keen that States are pleading for additional tables. The Missouri delegation, with Mrs. John Snyder as chairman, and Mrs. Truman as guest, has taken four tables. Mrs. O. Max Gardner and Mrs. Gordon Gray are planning four for North Carolina, and Texas, California and Michigan have all reserved the same number.

Mrs. Barkley Honor Guest

PRACTICALLY every table can boast a top Administration name. Mrs. Alben Barkley will be honor guest at the Kentucky table, with Mrs. Paul Porter as chairman. A United Nations table, headed by Mrs. Leslie Biffle, will seat wives of the Diplomatic Corps, including Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, and Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador.

Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, will preside at Hawaii's table. The Puerto Rican group, chairmaned by Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, will have as honor guest Mrs. Luis Munoz Marin, wife of the Governor of Puerto Rico. The remainder of the list reads like the roll call of the Congress of the United States:

Mrs. Millard E. Tydings for Maryland, Mrs. Robert S. Kerr for Oklahoma, Mrs. Lloyd M. Bentsen, jr., for Texas, Mrs. Claude Pepper for Florida, Mrs. J. Allen Frear, jr., for Delaware, and so on through the entire roster of States.

All-in-all, it promises to live up to the best traditions of a Washington benefit. Its success, both as a party and a business venture, is a foregone conclusion. And it is one which, without question, could only happen here.

The Washington Post

IN the spring, feminine fancy, lightly turns to—a new hat. This twosome has a good excuse to indulge in hat-hunting, however. Both are members of the committee working on the giant luncheon-fashion show April 12 at the Statler Hotel. Looking over, and trying on, some of the bonnets to be modeled at the Democratic Club show are, from left, Mrs. Clinton D. McKinnon, wife of the Representative from California, and Mrs. Wendell Lund, Michigan table chairman

*CHRONIC "telephonitis" has afflicted Mrs. Laurence P. Sherfy ever since she took over the job of chairman of the souvenir program committee. Space in the program is being reserved by business concerns in all parts of the country, and contacting them via the long-distance line keeps Mrs. Sherfy and her 48 subchairmen busy. ## Wife Is Losing Weight, Feeling Depressed, Due She Thinks, to Her Almost Ideal Husband's Lack Of Interest in Conversation and Social Activity

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My married daughter has turned to me for advice.

Jane has been married for four years and now has a lovely baby, 18 months old. Her husband is without doubt one of the nicest boys one could hope to meet, unusually considerate with her and the baby, helping with household chores all he can—a wonderful father and perfect husband.

Having been an unusually happy-go-lucky and healthy girl, Jane is much concerned about her increasing loss of weight and feeling of depression. When she asked her doctor about this, he told her that a woman, after having had a baby, may go through this state of mind. Yesterday she told me that she is extremely happy except for one thing—her husband is very much of an introvert.

At Home Man Sits Silent for Hours

JANE HAS TRIED hard to help Frank by encouraging him to talk, but as soon as he gets around a few people he completely closes up. The same condition exists at home. He holds a responsible job several days a week, in addition to going to school, and when he comes home she asks him about his experiences during the day. He will tell her a few things, then close up and read or just sit without saying a word for hours.

Jane has tried to encourage participation in various kinds of social activity, but Frank declines because he feels the pressure on him when around so many people. He and Jane have discussed this many times and he is very conscious of being the way he is; but says he cannot help it, and will do anything she thinks might help.

Jane told me that she finds herself in terrible periods of depression, even doesn't want another baby because of this; and she says she is terribly lonesome for someone to talk and laugh with. When I asked if she were happy, she said "Intensely," except for this one thing. Can you help? S. F.

Wife's Frustration Is Self-Engendered

DEAR S. F.: I have discussed your story with a good diagnostician of neurotic symptoms, who remarks that even though Frank may be somewhat of a problem to Jane, due to his avoidance of company and his neglect of small talk, nevertheless her real problem is herself.

The specialist reminds that black moods of depression and loss of appetite usually issue from angry frustration boiling deep down in a very dependent personality whose demands for full satisfaction of every desire are not being met in a given relationship—as the infantile character feels they should be.

My consultant says, "Obviously Jane wants something she is not getting; and she thinks this 'something more' should be forthcoming from her husband." Then he posed the question of whether her sense of deprivation is valid, or whether she is engendering maladjustment by driving her husband into a shell, putting him increasing on the defensive by registering dissatisfaction in velvety nagging ways.

Maybe Resentment Kills Conversation

ASSUMING that she is making a problem of herself, it might follow that Frank's love of her would be blocked; that even though he consciously wanted to please her, his cumulative resentment at being thus "used" would insidiously stifle conversation. Maybe he is not so much introvert as he is unable to communicate with Jane's way of thinking.

You say Jane has tried very hard to help him, by which she means, I gather, that she has labored strenuously to get him to do exactly as she wants, whereas his idea of help is definitely more unselfish, it seems, inasmuch as he does all the housework he can combine with a heavy schedule of study and wage-earning.

For advice, if Frank cannot be all things to Jane that she wants him to be, then obviously she must accommodate sensibly to what he is—if she is "intensely" satisfied with that portion of rapport they do possess. In bringing her problem to you and leaving you the task of procuring light on it, she inadvertently reveals that self reliance is a practice foreign to her experience thus far. She must begin to require more "accommodation" of herself, and less of persons for whom she cares, if she would become adequate to the role she now occupies. M. H.

Pakistan Embassy Lively

This is the nineteenth in a series of articles on embassy homes, hosts and hostesses.

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE embassy of Pakistan, one of the newest in town, has a well established household. A charming hostess and lively children give it an air of gayety, and a square of grass in back, bordered with roses and box makes it a garden spot.

Mirza Abol Hassan Ispahani, the Ambassador, and Mme. Ispahani have at home with them their daughter, Iran, a student at Holton Arms; their niece, Nasrene, age 11, and Zia, a young son, also 11. There are several other children in the family, attending boarding schools nearby, who drop in for an occasional holiday.

THE Ambassador, who is filling his first post as a diplomat, was the first Ambassador to be sent anywhere by the government of Pakistan. Before the partition of the subcontinent, Mr. Ispahani was a leading businessman of Calcutta. When he returns to his country, he will put down roots in the new capital of Karachi.

Mme. Ispahani finds the tempo of Washington considerably faster than Calcutta or Karachi but she enjoys living here. Her family and her household remain her chief interests. Her hair is almost black, her eyes a lovely amber brown, and she has a quiet pleasing manner.

Mme. Ispahani has a diaphanous collection of heavenly colored ghararas—the native costume of Pakistan, as the sari is the traditional dress of Hindu India. She tops a peach satin gharara with a matching tunic of coorta and a scarf of net called a dupatta.

The Ambassador is a dynamic, energetic person, ideally suited to represent a new country. He was an intimate friend of Mohamed Ali Jinnah, father of Pakistan, who died in September, 1948. A linguist of considerable ability, the Ambassador learned his perfect English at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he took his degree. His eldest son, Mohamed, and his nephew, Mohamed Ali Ispahani, are now students at the same college.

The Ambassador returned recently from a visit to Karachi, bringing with him a collection of colored films, his newest hobby.

Garden Ideal For Entertaining

AMBASSADOR Ispahani purchased the embassy residence for his government from Leland Harrison, former United States Minister to Switzerland. The house is built on formal lines, with one of the prettiest gardens in Washington, ideal for entertaining.

The drawing room is a neat mosaic of soft colors in rose, olive green and pale gold. It is a mixture of Chinese and Louis XVI styles, with silk damask walls, silk draperies and Oriental rugs. Over the mantel hangs a large portrait of Mohamed Ali Jinnah.

In summertime, at large receptions, the garden lawn is bordered with tall roses and buffet tables. An ancient oak provides a tent-like covering from late afternoon sun, and colored lights glow in evening darkness when guests enjoy chats around little tables. Food is always fabulous at Pakistan festivities. Platters of delectable salads, tidbit delicacies, and fluffy sweets are served from not one but several buffets.

Pakistan, although one of the newest embassies, has already established a reputation for hospitality and gracious entertaining.

Navy Ball to Have 'Pacific' Setting

The President and Mrs. Truman will be sponsors for the Navy Relief Ball being held in the Sail Loft at the Navy Gun Factory on Friday, April 14. Fleet Admiral William Halsey will be guest of honor, and the theme of the ball is "South Pacific."

Leis flown from Honolulu will be sold at the ball by Navy and Marine juniors who will be wearing the original holckus made by the missionaries. Other Washington belles will be in Hawaiian skirts and sarongs.

The dance floor of the Naval Gun Factory will be transformed into a real South Pacific island with twinkling stars and palm trees and flowers.

A capsule version of the stage play "South Pacific" is being rehearsed. This will consist of a short variation of the actual story interposed with production numbers of outstanding songs from the play. Talented stage and motion picture stars will add to the festivities of the evening.

In addition, a special show is being planned on the stage in the cocktail lounge. Miss Beverly Farrington, daughter of the Delegate from Hawaii, will do the hula and there will be a native Hawaiian instrumental group playing during the evening.

The Navy and Marine Bands will play continuously, alternating every 30 minutes, supplementing the entertainment program. Coffee and sandwiches will be served.

Singer Slated Here Honored By King Paul

Elena Nikolaidi, celebrated Greek contralto who will make her first concert appearance in Washington in Constitution Hall on April 3, has been awarded one of the highest Greek orders, the Golden Phoenix Cross. King Paul honors her for "cementing close cultural ties between the United States and Greece, and for outstanding contributions in the fields of music and arts."

The Ambassador of Greece, Vassili G. Dendramis, will decorate Miss Nikolaidi at a special ceremony in the embassy, prior to her concert.

A distinguished audience will welcome the artist at her forthcoming concert, proceeds from which go to the scholarship fund of Athens College, an American school in Greece where young boys, many orphaned by the war, all of exceptional ability, are given special training in techniques of self-government, preparing them to help their country in its peacetime reconstruction program.

The Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis will entertain friends in their boxes and members of the embassy staff will be there to applaud the singer who has been appearing to packed houses during her current tour.

Mrs. Truman heads the list of sponsors for the concert. Mrs. Dewey is honorary chairman, Mrs. McGhee, chairman.

Tickets for the concert are now on sale at the Snow Concert Bureau, 1108 G st.

Mrs. Moore Is Wedded to Carlos Davila

Mrs. Frances Adams Moore of Fredericksburg, Va., was married yesterday to Carlos Davila, prominent Chilean statesman and writer.

The ceremony took place at 11 a. m. at St. Mary's Church in Fredericksburg with the Rev. Alfredo Moreno officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Adams of Quincy, Mass., and the widow of Dr. James Moore. Mr. Davila was provisional President of Chile for 100 days during 1932 and he also served four years as Chilean Ambassador to Washington.

He is now managing director of the Editors' Press, New York City. Mr. Davila and his bride will leave for a six months' tour of Europe on Thursday.

The informal ceremony was attended by the Secretary General of the Organization of the American States and Mrs. Alberto Lleras, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Chilean Counselor and Senora Juan Guzman-Cruchaga, Chilean Press Attache Carlos Reyes, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Powers and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Powers of New York.

Jo Anne Dingwell, Mr. Hanson to Wed

Capt. and Mrs. John Ernest Dingwell announced the engagement of their daughter, JoAnne, to Robert M. Hanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cassel Hanson of Mt. Prospect Farms, Travilah, Md., at a dinner dance in the Army-Navy Country Club last night.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the Sidwell Friends School of Washington and of Wheaton Women's College in Norton, Mass. Her fiance graduated from the Landon School for Boys and is a student at the University of Maryland.

No date is set for the wedding.

Home, Sweet Home in Miniature Takes Careful Decorating; Every Inch Counts, Anne Advises Reader

TO GIVE a Hollywood bed the "living-room look," you can use a long bolster or two smaller ones covered to match or harmonize with your spread. If you can't find a bolster to your liking, you can have them made by an upholsterer. This is more expensive, however

WHEN YOUR home measures 15 by 15 feet in toto every square inch must do its duty!

So believes M. J. W., who is thinking of "doing over" her one-room apartment. She wants it as pretty, cheerful—and roomy—as possible.

"Can you give me some general suggestions for best utilizing the space?" she writes. "I have numerous belongings which I must store in the apartment. I want to have friends in for meals occasionally and be able to turn around twice without knocking all the knick-knacks off the whatnot."

"Can you suggest a color scheme, too, to go with the grayish blue walls?"

"And what else besides three oblong pillows (I'm tired of those) can I use to make a Hollywood bed look like a piece of living room furniture?"

WELL, M. J. W., I'd suggest you seize this opportunity to get as many storage units as possible built in. Maybe there's room for more shelves in your closet—say, up high, where you could park seldom-used things.

In one attractive apartment, an entire wall was used for built-in cabinets and bookcases. Since custom-made cabinet work is often expensive, you might simulate a built-in effect with units of unpainted furniture, which you can finish to blend with your walls.

Above the clothes cabinet, which had sliding tray drawers, hung a large unframed mirror about 4 feet wide. It completely covered the wall from cabinet to ceiling. It reflected the whole room, gave a feeling of space. The couch bed was in one corner, with two small shelves set in above one end of it and a row of pictures along the side.

Two square bolsters were used on the couch, extending its entire length. The striped spread and drapes matched and were not expensive. The bolster was covered to match one of the stripes.

In doing over a one-room apartment, it's a good idea to remove any fancy moldings, even window and door frames if possible. Remember that your furniture needn't be small. A lot of little cluttered pieces can play havoc with your space. Better to have a long, graceful storage unit, one couch bed, lounge chair and coffee table.

As to the color, stick to close, quiet harmony with a few accent notes. You've a restful blue shade on your walls. With this, you might use yellow or wheat draperies or upholstery, perhaps in combination with more blue. An occasional dash of red—in small pillow, lamp, vase, or design—would point up the whole effect.

DEAR ANNE:

I have some colorful straw coasters which I brought from Mexico. When they get damp the colors run. Can you tell me how to waterproof them?

Estrella S. Guay,
3212 14th st. ne.

A water-repellent finish, designed for use on wallpaper but recommended for other decorative items such as your coasters, can be purchased at most paint stores. One Washington store which keeps this in stock is located at 710 13th st. nw. If you prefer a coating which will be alcohol-proof as well as waterproof, you might try spar varnish, which is also available at most stores.

DEAR ANNE:

I thought maybe other "Ask Anne" readers might enjoy this recipe for Lebkuchen from a German cookbook. The original calls for two ounces of potash (chem. cleaned), but drugstores in my neighborhood were unable to supply it. I substituted soda and baking powder with quite good success.

LEBKUCHEN

Heat to a boil 3 cups honey and 1 and 1/5 cup butter.

Remove from fire and add 6 cups pastry flour sifted with 4 teaspoons baking powder; 1½ cups almonds, cut in strips but not blanched; ½ teaspoon cloves; ½ teaspoon cardamon seed, crushed; grated rind of one lemon.

Cool and add: 1 cup sugar and ½ teaspoon soda diluted in warm water.

Knead well, form into loaf and let stand three days.

Knead again. Spread to ¼-inch thickness in buttered pan and bake 30 minutes at 300 degrees. Cut into oblong strips while still hot, making them 1 inch by 2 inches.

Glaze with 1 egg white beaten, to which has been added ½ cup sugar, diluted with small amount of water. Set in slow oven until glaze has dried.

Pan American Club to Honor Dr. Fernos-Isern

Dr. Antonio Fernos-Isern, Commissioner to the United States from Puerto Rico, will be honor guest at a meeting of the Pan American Club, of the Central Branch YMCA at 3 p. m. # Historic Maryland Homes To Be Open for Tour

Several historic old Maryland estates will be open to the public for the first time in this year's Maryland House and Garden Tour Pilgrimage—the thirteenth annual tour—which opens April 28 and continues through May 9.

Hayfields, a 550-acre estate now owned by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John Merryman Franklin, is among the group. The house was built about 1780 from specifications drawn by Col. Nicholas Merryman Bosley with the point of his cane.

Located in the Worthington Valley fox-hunting country a few miles northwest of Baltimore, Hayfields is especially noted for its granary which has outside stone steps, a gas house where gas was manufactured on the farm, and the old slave quarters.

Another house to be opened this year for the first time is Troth's Fortune, which dates back to 1678. One of the oldest houses in historic Talbot County, it has an unusual tower stairway and still boasts most of the original panelling.

More than 200 of Maryland's notable houses and gardens will be open, each for one day. Proceeds from admission fees will go toward the support of famous Hammond-Harwood House in Annapolis, and toward the maintainance and restoration of several other such projects.

Further information on the tour can be obtained by writing to the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland, 217 Sheraton-Belvedere Hotel, Baltimore 2, Maryland, or calling Mulberry 7481.

The houses are to be open on the following schedule: Friday, April 28, Anne Arundel County, with reception for all holders of pilgrimage tickets by the Governor and his wife, in Annapolis, at Government House; Saturday, April 29, St. Mary's County, oldest in the State; Sunday, April 30, Charles County; Monday, May 1, Baltimore Environs; Monday, May 1, Guilford-Baltimore City; Tuesday, May 2, Harford County; Wednesday, May 4, Queen Anne's County; Friday, May 5, Talbot County; Saturday, May 6, Prince Georges County; Saturday, May 6, Baltimore County; Dulaney, Limekiln, and Long Green Valleys; Sunday, May 7, Frederick County; Monday, May 8, Worthington Valley; Tuesday, May 9, My Lady's Manor; Tuesday, May 9, Montgomery County.

Miss Wishar, Oscar Tyree Wed

Miss Elise Yeamans Kidder Wishar, daughter of Capt. William Pitts Wishar, USCG (ret.) and Mrs. Wishar, became the bride of Oscar Leak Tyree, son of Mrs. Lemuel Preston Tyree and the late Mr. Tyree, yesterday at the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Edward Comegys Dukehart. L. D. Tyree, jr. served his brother as best man.

The bride attended Bradford Junior College, Wellesley College and the University of North Carolina. Her husband attended the University of North Carolina and the University of North Carolina Law School.

Wellesley Hails New President

The Washington Wellesley Club will meet on March 17 at 8 p. m. at the American Association of University Women, 1634 I st. nw., to join in the celebration of the inauguration of Miss Margaret Clapp as the new president of Wellesley College. Although Miss Clapp took over her new duties last fall her inauguration has been reserved for a day of special significance to Wellesley alumnae. March 17, 1914, was the date of the raging fire which destroyed College Hall but from which Wellesley recovered to start a building program four years later. As part of a Nation-wide "Wellesley Night," local alumnae will meet to hear previously transcribed excerpts from Miss Clapp's inaugural address and transcribed music by the college choir.

A drawing will be held for a painting by Mrs. Dean Acheson, prominent member of the local alumnae group.

Barton Home Is Cherished Spot to Red Cross; When Folks Dance They're Doing La Raspa

By Ellen Buell Parry

FEW of the folks who will give their dimes and dollars to the Red Cross during this month's drive know that Clara Barton's own house still stands—back of a parking lot—in Glen Echo, Md.

The white clapboard structure, with its two steeple-roofed towers, was built in 1897 by Clara Barton and remained her home until her death in 1912. The Red Cross, which she founded on the eve of the Battle of Bull Run, was quartered in this home from 1897 to 1904. The building is now an apartment owned by Miss Josephine Noyes.

After the Johnstown flood in 1889, several barrack-like buildings were built there to house the refugees. In appreciation of Clara Barton's work in the flood crisis, the City of Johnstown later gave her these buildings, which were torn down and brought as lumber to Washington.

Edwin and Edward Baltzy, twins who were trying to develop Glen Echo, gave Miss Barton a tract of land, and she had the house built thereon. The building remains much as it was when the Red Cross shared it with Miss Barton. Miss Noyes has many pieces of furniture belonging to the Red Cross founder.

EVERYBODY'S DOIN' IT!—doin' what?—why, —La Raspa, or the Mexican String Dance.

They danced it at the Morris Cafritz's party for the Veep and Veepess. They've been doin' it at Washington's four most exclusive dancing clubs, the Three Dances, the Waltzing Group, the Friday Night Supper Club and the Georgetown Assembly. They're "rasping" at Chevy Chase and the Army and Navy Country Clubs. They've been doin' it at the bimonthly dances at Wardman Park Hotel. We hear they're dancing La Raspa wherever there's music, people, and a spot to dance.

The musical score used for this ballroom novelty is the Mexican Hat Dance. It supposedly was originated in Vera Cruz as a folk dance for feast days and holidays, from whence it spread to other cities and night clubs in Mexico, and finally to the United States.

On first appearance, it looks too difficult for anyone over teen-age to attempt. However, with a few minutes close observation, it can be mastered by any age. The only thing required is plenty of energy!

MR. AND MRS. Noel Trenthan of Langley had friends out for Sunday lunch, including two small guests to play with daughters Dudley, 11, and Anne, 9. Mary Trenthan suggested to the four little girls that they go upstairs and play dress-up with some of her old clothes.

When the four children came down later to show off their masquerade to the adults, every one of the quartet wore, on the outside of her dress, a pair of falsies. The grown-ups roared—not least among them Mary herself—who, fortunately, can enjoy a joke at her own expense.

POPULAR Gen. and Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser (she's affectionately known as "Miss Molly") have at last settled into the Kennedy-Warren. For a while they were "displaced persons" when the Broadmoor, where they lived for many years, was sold co-op. They went first to Wardman Park, finally have gotten "a parlor, bedroom, dinette, kitchenette and bath" at their new address.

Says Miss Molly:

"We now understand the expression 'putting the big pot into the little one.' Leaving a large six-room apartment, we threw away, gave away and sent to auction rooms the accumulation of a lifetime."

Miss Molly continued: "For years I followed auctions and second-hand shops for antique 'finds.' It was a worse job getting rid of them than it was acquiring them. Last week, while a workman was in the apartment I went out and left him. A woman in the apartment house warned ominously, 'Suppose he walks off with some of your antiques.' I said, 'If he does, I just dare him to bring them back!' "

"THAT'S NOT ME, that's Herbert Hoover," insisted Huntington Cairns when he saw what the sharp eyes and sharp pen of Aline Fruhauf had put on paper. Prominent art scholar and an officer of the National Gallery of Art, Mr. Cairns was one of the Washington art circle celebrities who had his illusions shattered Friday night at the preview showing of caricatures at the Whyte Gallery which Miss Fruhauf has been working on for eighteen months

IT'S WONDERFUL," all the victims exclaim about the other fellow's caricature. About their own, they assume a stiff smile. Here Prentiss Taylor (left) local artist who is noted for the studies he is making of therapeutic effects of art work among the patients at St. Elizabeths, points with glee to the job Miss Fruhauf has done on Jose Gomez-Sicre, head of the visual arts section of the Pan American Union. Mr. Gomez-Sicre returns the honors as Artist Fruhauf smiles at the comments. None of the victims was allowed to see his caricature until the preview Friday evening at the Whyte Gallery. The caricatures will be on public exhibition through March 31

Aline Fruhauf's Caricature Victims Claim:

'These Pictures Are Fine—Everybody's But Mine!'

By Sonia Stein

THERE was many a dashed illusion and punctured self-esteem to be swept up at the Whyte Gallery Friday night, following the preview showing of caricatures by Aline Fruhauf, which will be on public exhibition through March 31.

Twenty-two figures, prominent in Washington art circles, had been captured by the precise brush and pen of Miss Fruhauf in the past 18 months, but none had seen the finished sketches until Friday night.

Huntington Cairns, secretary, treasurer and general counsel of the National Gallery of Art, was the first to arrive. He slipped in before the exhibit was officially opened at 8, because he was due at a dinner party at exhibit time.

Dumbfounded

Catching sight of himself at the top of the stairs, first in the long row of delicately colored and delicately drawn pictures, he stopped in his tracks. "I'm dumbfounded, flabbergasted," he said.

Peering closely he remarked, "That's not me, that's Herbert Hoover."

Like the others who were to follow him that night, he was particularly appreciative of the background motifs that Miss Fruhauf had worked into the pictures—biographical details of the victims' lives—which in his case included a leaning avocado plant which he'd grown from a seed, a volume of his "The Limits of Art" which the New York Times once said was probably the best anthology ever written, and a bust of Plato whom Cairns calls the last civilized man in the western world, and whose birthday he honors every year with a dinner party.

But of the central figure, Cairns was appreciative in a different way. "I will not show it to my ill wife," he said, in reference to his flu-ridden spouse, and fled to the comfort of his dinner hostess' pre-prandial apertifs.

No Pressed Suit

Franz Bader, manager and vice president of Whyte's, had already seen his portrait when he was hanging the group. Having helped Miss Fruhauf work out this "Who's Who" in Washington art circles, he was in poor position to complain.

"I think she was too kind to me, especially my suit. I never have a pressed suit," he explained.

Miss Fruhauf, who watches her victims at work and play, making a number of quick sketches from which she later does her painstaking work, had almost abandoned Mr. Bader as a project, after several sketching sessions at the gallery. "I was going in one direction and she in the other one day, when she called out, "Stop! Now I have it!" Mr. Bader recalls. "I was waiting on a customer, but I stopped obediently," he says.

Jose Gomez-Sicre, head of the visual arts section of the Pan-American Union, was the first victim to arrive during the exhibit proper. He gave his own portrait a quick glance, blandly surveying his bland, bland caricature, and passed on to the others with no trace of emotion.

Prentiss Taylor, whose study of the therapeutic effect of painting on unbalanced minds at St. Elizabeths has received national attention, went straight for his portrait. He blushed and smiled and made the best of the situation. "It's amazing," he said obliquely. "I love the worried expression on that head," he said in reference to an Italian marionette head hanging in the background, along with other details of his studio in which Miss Fruhauf pictures him at work. "And the feet are wonderful," he said enthusiastically of the slippered feet wrapped agitatedly around the chair rungs.

But of his face he said nothing. This was his first view of this item. Miss Fruhauf had let him see the first caricature she had done of him and he promptly lost 20 pounds. Miss Fruhauf did this second one and kept it hidden. (This is not her first experience with such things. One of the New York artists she did in a previous series rushed to the dentist and had his prominent front teeth well on the way to being normal before the exhibit. A dress designer had her nose bobbed when she saw herself as Miss Fruhauf saw her.)

Ladies Are 'Pleased'

Sarah Baker said she was very pleased with her caricature. This she attributes to the fact that "women are complete realists." The men may blanch when they see themselves, but "a woman knows her imperfections and works to improve herself," she explains.

One caricatured artist had no right to complain. Miss Fruhauf's self portrait—labelled "Me"—is as sharp as any in the group, but it brought no self reproach from the victim.

Miss Fruhauf has never lost a friend through her caricatures as nearly as she can recall, although they've been circulated coast-to-coast in magazines. Her husband, Dr. Erwin Vollmer, a physiologist at the Naval Medical Research Institute, can think of no lost friends either. He does remember a dress designer coming to a Fruhauf exhibit of New York stylists, portraits, partially disguised in a scarf, who plunked down the money to buy her caricature before anybody else had arrived at the exhibit. She took it out of circulation promptly. Many celebrities who have been "done" by Miss Fruhauf, buy the caricatures, but they usually hang them at home for their friends to see.

Also absent — unavoidably, it seems clear—were Editorial Cartoonist Herbert Block of The Washington Post and Jim Berryman of the Evening Star who were getting, a taste of their own medicine.

Out of Town

Mrs. Dean Acheson was out of town, unable to prevue her portrait. And so was Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Mrs. Longworth took revenge on Miss Fruhauf by sketching the artist and then declining to show Miss Fruhauf what she'd made of her since Miss Fruhauf would not show what she'd made of Mrs. Longworth.

But sooner or later, they'll all be in, to have their "idealized versions of self" destroyed to a fair-thee-well. There's no telling which of the remaining victims you may encounter at Whyte's this week, smiling wanly at his portrait.

More Premiums Offered In Post Sewing Contest

Some choice prizes, in addition to the cash awards previously announced, are in store for lucky contestants in The Washington Post Sewing Contest. The contest, now approaching the midway mark, will be concluded April 15, and is attracting wide interest in amateur sewing circles.

First prize winners in each of the eight classifications (listed on entry blank printed on this page) will be presented with practical, made-to-order dress forms; to those taking second places, will go copies of the Singer Sewing Book. Both of these awards are being offered by the management of the 11 Singer Sewing centers.

The dress forms, molded to the individual figure are an invaluable aid to women who make their own clothing, assuring them of perfect fit. Beginners and experienced seamstresses alike will find the sewing book filled with helpful hints and short-cuts to a good sewing technique.

As previously announced, the cash awards will total $560, to be distributed in the following manner: eight first prizes of $50 each, and eight second prizes of $20 each.

Jobé Says...

Ottoman Top Fashion On Two Continents

The handsome dress coat made of navy or black ottoman or bengaline is headed for a top fashion place on two continents this Spring. Already a ranking favorite in our American collections it emerged as the big coat star at the Paris openings.

You may have your ottoman coat "as you like it"—beautifully fitted with a wide flaring skirt; a sweeping tent or pyramid coat; or a jaunty little short coat. It's the perfect coat to wear over prints or any of the smart new sheer dresses.

I'm glad to see these coats become such an important fashion and I venture to predict that an ottoman coat will eventually become as much of a necessary classic in every woman's wardrobe as a faille suit.

All-brick rambler built in Chevy Chase Manor, Md., by Billingsley & Korzenderfer to sell for $25,000. It has three bedrooms, two baths, den, large living-dining room, fully equipped kitchen with all appliances, and a utility room. It is located on a landscaped and sodded 70 by 110-foot lot. The financing plan features a $16,000 first trust at 4½ percent, with all cash making up the difference. Builders say there have been no requests from buyers for second trusts

Large modern rambler built in Holmes Run Park, nearby Fairfax County, by Malice & Brooks, to sell at $28,000. It has three large bedrooms, a compartmented bath for three persons, large combined living-dining and sun room measuring 15 by 36 feet. The sun room features awning windows and can be cut off from the living room by sliding doors. Built on a 100 by 160-foot lot. Home has radiant heating. There is a $14,000 first mortgage and the builder will take up to $4000 in a second mortgage, rest cash.

Contemporary styled rambler built by Clyde J. Verkerke in nearby Fairfax County, Va., to sell at $23,000. It has a very large living-dining room, three bedrooms, compartmented bath for three persons, equipped luxury kitchen, carport and patio, on a one-third-acre lot. A first mortage of $14,000 at 5 percent is available for such homes, with the rest in cash

Today's Home Tour Is For Rich People

HOW much house will your dollars buy on today's new home market? Previous articles in The Washington Post's real estate section have shown and described homes costing from $7250 to $20,000. Today's tour covers homes from $20,000 up.

By Conrad P. Harness

IF YOUR annual income is less than $10,000 a year, or unless you have a lot of loot salted away, don't expect today's camera tour of new residences to produce a place to hang your hat. The Rockefellers, Astors, plus some successful 5 percenters, with enterprising plumbing contractors added for attraction, will have their housing day while the rest of us po' folks look on in envy from our postwar foxholes. Ah, but these homes are so nice to look at!

FOURTH AND LAST OF A SERIES

There has been one pronounced change in luxury housing: there isn't as much of it. Last year while doing this series it was easy to find builders erecting homes in the $50,000 bracket on strictly speculation. They went ahead and built such homes and then put them on the market. But the speculative market is very limited now over $40,000. The field has narrowed down to three or four veteran building firms who have been erecting such homes in their own long-established subdivisions for years and know the market's limitations thoroughly.

On the other hand, there are plenty of very expensive, luxury homes going up. But the majority is on a "custom-built" basis where the owner picks an architect. He plans the house to fit the family's needs, arranges for a builder and oversees the entire project. Plenty of ready cash is needed on such ventures.

One important factor in higher cost homes is that more value is generally obtainable. It costs no more per front foot to put in curbs, gutters, sidewalks and

Williamsburg Set New Trend in Homes

By Frederick Gutheim

NTBT News Service

LITTLE houses that break all the rules of the historian and architect held the stage last week in Williamsburg, Virginia's restored Colonial capital, where this year's annual garden symposium spent two days in a profitable consideration of houses as well as gardens.

The remarkably large total of nearly 200 small American houses of the late seventeenth and eighteenth centuries that have been preserved or rebuilt here form a unique exhibition showing how a distinctive kind of housing was created in the new world.

These houses rapidly became different from anything in England, and equally different from the large plantation mansions or the Williamsburg town houses.

If American housing, as part of the American standard of living, can be traced to clear-cut origins, the process is most easily seen here. If the omission of housing in nearly all general and architectural histories is to be made good, it will be from such anonymous but eloquent evidence as Williamsburg's small houses.

For Study, Not Copying

THESE small houses are of particular interest today because they are not much larger and not much different from those now being built at the rate of a million a year. They should not be imitated, speakers last week emphasized once again, but they are indispensable to understanding housing as "a total problem." They show how building changes under the spur of living needs and builders' arts.

Williamsburg's authentic old houses are typically small and handy, and for their day they were practical to build and to live in. They were asymmetrical, full of corner cupboards and corner fireplaces and had gadgets to help make the most of limited space and storage facilities.

Perhaps the most typical ones were story-and-a-half, with steep shingled roofs. One contemporary description found them like "an inverted ship with ridged hull in air."

They were totally different from the large, fashionable, symmetrical mansions of the great, with their classical details and marble fireplaces, usually thought of as typical of the period. One speaker last week called the small houses "a separate style." Another admitted they did not recall "the academic splendor of the plantation houses."

English Taste Trend

THIS "builder's style"—for the small houses were designed and built by carpenters and bricklayers, and often by their owners—produced the first characteristically American houses at a time when all other building reflected English taste. One Colonial traveler described them as "built of wood, yet contrived so delightfully that your ordinary houses in England are not so handsome."

The basic type of small Williamsburg houses, as shown by A. Lawrence Kocher, who is editing the architectural records of Colonial Williamsburg, has a "one-room deep" plan. Rooted in earlier seventeenth century dwellings, the changes that made it essentially an American house can be seen in Williamsburg.

The house began with the town plan of 1699 which divided the 220 acres into half-acre residential plots, specified regular blocks bounded by 90-foot streets, and required houses to be set on a building line 6 feet from the street. Earlier specifications for towns like Jamestown and St. Mary's City, the first capital of Maryland, had envisioned tightly built English medieval towns.

Vepco Sells Office Building for $180,000

The three-story building formerly housing offices of the Virginia Electric Power Co., on the northwest corner of King and Washington sts., Alexandria, has been sold for $180,000.

Thomas J. Moncure, of Holden & Co., realtors, said the new owners are Carlyle R. Boguess, president of Southern Iron Works, and Clarence C. and Eugene Simpson, partners in Eugene Simpson & Bro., general contractors.

The building will be remodeled, including installation of an elevator and an air-conditioning system. Future use of the building has not been decided by the new owners, Moncure said.

Vepco has moved its offices to its new building on West Glebe rd.

N. Y. Couple Buys Old Ferry House

Leesburg, Va.—Mr. and Mrs. Wayne G. Brookins of New York and Los Angeles, have purchased the eight-room Noland Ferry house and 40 acres of land from Consolidated Dairy Farm, Inc.

The famed red brick Georgian-type house, never fully completed, is located near Lucketts. The sale was made by Frank Rowe, jr., Washington broker.

The house was started nearly 200 years ago by Philip Noland, wealthy colonial planter. For reasons unknown it was never completed by him or successive owners.

Cooperative Housing Bill Called Unfair

THE pending middle-income cooperative housing bill is grossly unfair because it discriminates against 7,875,000 middle-income families, a Washington attorney charged this week.

WHITLOCK

Speaking before members of the Home Builders Association at the Congressional Country Club last Wednesday night, Douglas Whitlock, chairman of the Building Products Institute, said 59 out of 60 families could not benefit even if the bill authorized expenditures of one billion dollars.

At an estimated $8000 cost per unit provided by the bill, one billion dollars would build only 125,000 units, he said.

He criticized the proposed legislation as being a political payoff to the CIO. He said the original idea for subsidized housing for middle-income groups came from 1948 congressional hearings on low-income housing.

At that time, he continued, CIO legislative spokesmen announced the CIO was only waiting for passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill before organizing a drive for middle-income housing.

Whitlock said the proposed bill contained provisions for "a 25-million-dollar propaganda fund." He compared it to the $250,000 fund that organized builders are attempting to raise nationally to spark a drive to sell home ownership and the accomplishments of the building industry.

Whitlock suggested that the 3-percent interest rate for mortgages on the proposed cooperatives would endanger our present mortgage system, including 4-percent GI home loans and 4½-percent FHA loans.

"We are encouraging people to walk away from their present obligations and the American way of living to join these collectivist groups. Won't this destroy our mortgage system?" he asked.

He predicted a loss of tax revenues to Federal, State and local governments if the Federal Government furnished homes to middle-income groups. He said the income to finance the cooperatives was tax free.

Another part of the proposed bill attacked by Whitlock was payment by the Government on defaulted cooperative notes. He said the Federal Reserve Board was opposed to such direct lending.

He advised the building industry to fight proposals for subsidized housing by explaining to the public that the middle-income groups are being adequately served already by the industry's production, and that cost of new housing today is relatively less than before the war.

He said that new housing today is of better quality, design and better financed than prewar construction.

Activities Room Lessens Strains In Modern Homes

THE DEED may be in dad's name and the managing done by mother, but in the modern family the home "belongs" to the children.

From the day the first toddler reaches for a prized and fragile knicknack till the day—years later—the youngest marries and sets up a household, the successful home is taken over by the children and literally run for their benefit.

Much of the strain and stress of these years can be avoided by setting aside a special room, a section of the basement, or an unfinished second story as an activities room, points out a Tile Council of America home planning report. Here are suggestions for designing such a room:

1. Ample storage space is essential, as both toys and sports equipment should be housed in the activities room. A storage wall running the length of one side of the room is an excellent solution.

2. Walls should have easily cleaned and maintained finishes. A floor of durable materials will not be damaged by rough activities.

3. A snack bar where soft drinks, glasses, napkins and some food items can be stored will save many trips back and forth through the kitchen. It can be built at home.

4. Inexpensive folding chairs will dress up an activities room. If discarded furniture has to be used for it, the various pieces should be given a new coat of paint or slip-covered.

5. A bed without head or footboard can serve as a sofa in the activities room and double as a bunking place for an extra guest.

28 Firms Now Make Baseboard Heating Units, Bureau Says

Twenty-eight manufacturers are now producing various types of baseboard heating equipment, reports the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

Baseboard heating has captured popular fancy and the increasing demand for this inconspicuous method of heating with hot water is one of the most significant developments in the heating industry, the Bureau claims.

Baseboard heating is flexible and is adapted to any type of structure, residential and commercial, and can be used with automatic or manual firing and with a boiler fueled with coal, oil, or gas.

GI Home Loans Stimulated By Lower Interest Rates

THE GI home-loan program is rolling along again at high speed, the United States Savings and Loan League reported today.

League officials said the current trend toward lower interest rates has proved a big stimulus to the program.

The GI rate of 4 percent is looking more and more attractive to institutional lenders and there is no question about the safety and soundness of these loans if made with reasonable care, it was said.

The League disclosed that since last summer there has been a strong pickup in GI lending. Loans to veterans in the last quarter of 1949 totalled 88,936, a volume which was 30 percent over the same period in 1948.

This rapid increase was said to have special significance "because of discussions in veterans' circles recently about the veterans' loan program, and the problem of financial aids proposed by the Government for the so-called 'middle-income' families."

Another effect of the declining pattern of interest rates, as seen by the League will be that nearly all types of lending institutions will hold more GI loans in contrast to selling them to the Federal National Mortgage Association, a Government secondary market.

By the end of 1949, according to the League publication, a total of 1,622,867 loans under the GI Bill had been made to World War II veterans. Of these, only 5 percent had been sold to the Government secondary market facilities.

Realty Roundup

Richard S. Dill, chief of the heating and air-conditioning section, National Bureau of Standards, will be guest speaker at the March 13 luncheon of the Washington Building Congress at the Mayflower. P. Y. K. Howat, congress president, will preside.

Dill will report on current laboratory research in domestic heating equipment, discussing in particular experiments now in progress in the northeastern United States.

Edward R. Carr, prominent realtor, promises an entertaining program for the coming annual dinner-dance of the Washington Real Estate Board at the Mayflower, March 24. Over 300 tickets have already been sold and Oliver M. Walker, board president, expects the biggest turnout in years. It's a black tie affair.

The Washington Real Estate Board will start its six-week series of conferences Tuesday at the Washington Gas Light Co. auditorium. J. A. Weinberg, jr., will discuss real-estate forms, Lawrence E. Gichner will talk on "Little Known Spots in Washington," and the Board of Trade's "Invitation to the Nation" film will be shown.

The School of Real Estate, 1638 Connecticut ave. nw., starts its spring class on Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. This is its fourth year. According to Leo Finn, director, many graduates are now practicing in the District of Columbia and nearby States. The school was approved for veterans' training in 1947.

The National Committee to Limit Federal Taxing Powers was organized last week here, comprising 73 members from 20 States and the District. Dr. Joseph W. Seay, partner in the real-estate firm of Eastman & Seay, of Falls Church, Va., was chosen temporary chairman. The group laid plans to work at the local level "to secure the adoption of a Constitutional amendment placing a definite limitation upon Federal taxing, spending, lending, and borrowing powers, which limitation shall be related to the annual national income."

streets in front of an expensive home than it does in front of new $8000 homes in a large subdivision. Cost of installing utilities, grading and other development costs are about the same.

There are vast differences among homes in such a wide price range as $20,000 and up. But it's in this range that builders fulfill all the prewar promises of postwar dream houses. The man with an unlimited pocketbook can write his own housing ticket.

First, buyers will find that expensive homes go with expensive sites, with many situated in the better close-in residential areas. You don't put a $10,000 house on a $6000 lot, and some of the better lots in exclusive sections of the District cost that much or more. Several large subdivisions will aid families that purchase lots in the planning and construction of homes.

There are several items usually common to all higher-priced housing. They include garages, master bedroom with private bath, den and powder room, a kitchen equipped with all labor-saving appliances, some have maid's room and bath, a fireplace in the basement, cedar closets for clothes storage, and many other architectural extras.

Of course, you pay for all these things. Financing is usually a cut and dried proposition. If your wallet isn't bulging with greenbacks, stay away from luxury housing. Most financing institutions aren't impressed by luxurious residences to the point where they will give large mortgages. In fact, many lending institutions have a policy of not lending more than $15,000 on a home, no matter what it cost. Others, that might give conventional $8000 mortgage on an $11,500 house might give a maximum of $20,000 on a $60,000 mansion. So, it requires cash; the more ready cash, the higher up you go on the housing ladder.

Facing Tile Output At Peak in 1949

Production of structural clay facing tile reached its all-time peak in 1949, according to the Structural Clay Products Institute. More than 369 million brick equivalent units of facing tile were produced during the past year, a 10 percent increase over previous record production in 1948, it was stated.

Bathrooms Don't Have to Be Ill-Planned

TO GIVE the bathroom a fresh brand-new look, striped flooring and curtain materials can be used, providing a smart contrast with solid-color walls. If there is a chair in the bathroom, make a seat cushion and cover it with gaily striped plastic.

Avoid the usual drab floor, and floor the bathroom with asphalt tile or rubber tile, it is suggested by David E. Kennedy, well-known authority on flooring. Carrying out the theme of stripes by using narrow strips of this material to form either diagonal or lengthwise stripes.

An over-all color plan of geranium red, powder blue and white will be stunning. Use marbleized powder blue tiles with red, powder blue and white will be stunning. Use marbleized powder blue tiles with red stripes. Red-and-white striped curtains and chair cover, with pale powder blue walls, will combine well with the floor.

FOR the bathroom towels and linens, choose either red or blue, with white initials or monograms. Give the youngsters initialed towels and washcloths on rods hung low enough for them to reach. Flourescent tubes behind a honeycomb provide bright, diffused lighting without shadows.

In even the very tiny bathroom there is room for extra touches such as a glass shelf across the window to hold a potted geranium. Another pot can hold a climbing vine, trained on a little white trellis.

If the bathroom is larger than average, get extra use out of it by putting in a sun lamp. Against one wall place a couch covered in plastic material, with the adjustable sun lamp on the wall above it. A space 6' long and 30" wide will serve, and space beneath the couch can be used for storage.

IF A DRESSING-TABLE is preferred, fit a triangular shelf into an unused corner. If there is room for a chair, place the shelf at a height of 30" from the floor. If there is no room for a chair, make it 40".

If the bathroom is long and narrow, with lavatory situated at one end, make it more convenient by putting in counter tops on either side of the lavatory. Have them flush with the top of the lavatory. These counters can extend to the wall on either side, with storage shelves underneath. A large mirror above the lavatory will make this end of your bathroom useful as a dressing table.

15 Homes in Berkshire Planned By Builder

Grafton st., in the Berkshire section of Prince Georges County, Md., will be the site of 15 homes planned by Gemce, Inc., builder. Homes will be one-story and basement, of brick construction, with a 37-by-37-foot floor area. A building permit application has been filed.

Electric Sparks Muffled by Proper Insulation

Heat and sparks from a defective wiring short-circuit cannot ignite a house if the wiring is surrounded by non-combustible thermal insulation in walls and other concealed spaces. Because it is a non-conductor, mineral wool thermal insulation in walls, ceilings and other spaces around electrical wiring complies with the National Electrical Code.

Dan Pollin to Erect 3-Story Apartment

A three-story apartment building of 49 units will be erected on Upshur st. nw., near 14th st., by Dan Pollin. The structure will be 80 by 170 feet. Berla & Abel are architects. Preliminary plans are still in progress.

260-Home Subdivision Started

The first 58 units in a proposed 260-home subdivision have been started at S. 8th rd. and Greenbrier st., off Columbia Pike, Arlington, by Jesse Johnson Construction Co. The homes are semi-detached of slag block, painted. Priced $8600, each unit has a living-dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms and bath. A model house is open. The entire project is expected to be completed by the summer. N. C. Hines & Sons, agents, said the homes were for veterans only

Cotton Mill Hands Buy Own Homes

Chapel Hill, N. C. (AP).—A deep-rooted tradition of the South—the cotton mill village—is disintegrating. Southern cotton mills, which for years have rented scores of village homes, are selling the dwellings to workers.

The breakup of this mill-worker relationship, often termed "feudalistic" by its many critics, is described in a book recently published by the University of North Carolina Press. Harriet L. Herring of the university is the author.

Pride in home ownership and individuality are quickly reflected, the author says. She notes: "Some of the people paint their houses soon after purchasing them even if this is not particularly necessary, using a different color from the neighbors and often putting a trimming in bright contrasting colors."

Garage Can Do Double Duty

If you have no basement a garage can double as a recreation room. Finish the walls with building board or plaster. Use the same material attached to the collar beams extending across the garage to provide a flat ceiling and to hide the rough construction of the underside of the roof. Build shallow wall cabinets along one wall for storage of car equipment, outdoor tools and games. Extend these cabinets from floor to ceiling.

High on the opposite wall, provide additional cabinets or shelves so that furniture can be placed under them to save floor space. Sliding doors save space, make the cupboard interiors easy to reach even when the car is in the garage.

Conceal the electric lights behind frosted glass set flush into the ceiling, or run fluorescent tubes around the ceiling line behind a cove.

If the garage is attached to the house, the wall between should be made as fire-resistant as possible.

16 Homes Planned

Sixteen semidetached brick homes will be built on Southern ave. se., by the Truden Co. Plans are nearing completion.

Theater Stirs, Slowly Wakes

By Richard L. Coe

JUDGING FROM THE New York phone calls and the almost incognito visits to Ninth st. by Gotham theater folk, our first week of live theater since midsummer of '48 is causing lively interest.

Business for Susan Peters in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at the Gayety this first week is reported to be very good.

From many conversations, it appears that until this week had gotten under way, the more important producers were wary of breaking the ice. This, at least to my innocent mind, seems astonishing. Put baldly, the question in the bigwigs' minds seems to have been: "Will Washingtonians go to the theater on a nonsegregated basis?"

All of which is definitely old hat. The segregation matter is and has been a dead issue for sometime, decided by the actors and by the Capital's habit of attending concerts and recitals on a nonsegregated basis for the past 20 years to my own personal knowledge. Nor do the New York producers seem to realize that our nonprofessional and summer professional theaters have worked on that basis for some time.

In short, until profits are assured, some of the theater's leaders think of this area of a million and a half souls as though Lee were still across the Potomac, a surprising attitude for self-described "hard-headed businessmen."

Toughest Season

ON THE level of pure theater and the dramatic aspect of resuming the professional theater in this fairest of cities, the leaders also missed the bus. What an occasion they might have made of it by presenting a great star or a new production.

So it is greatly to the credit of Miss Peters and her producer, John Kenley, that they did break the ice when the chance closing of the Gayety allowed. Miss Peters is intelligent enough a young lady to know that she does not have the drawing power of an established star and she might well have failed to draw in her 20-year-old vehicle.

But by being willing to be the guinea pig, Miss Peters has done our Capital a greater service than would at first appear. And the engagement has occurred at what is traditionally the toughest time in the entertainment world: Lent, which the religious are observing or for the end of which the fashionable are investing in gala gear One would like to assure Miss Peters that, when she totes up the results of a tour which has kept her traveling since last summer, the total be doubled for extra-curricular services rendered.

Strand Plans Progress

MEANWHILE, the American National Theater and Academy continues to make plans for the Strand renovation, a matter sadly delayed by the illness of the theater's elderly owner, Marcus Notes, of Baltimore.

At the same time, it is revealed that the ANTA effort to lease the Belasco building was totally hamstrung by the General Services Administration under Jess Larsen.

Over a month ago, one learns, ANTA's lawyer came to Washington to sign the lease GSA had sent to New York. Arrived at the meeting, he had several minor points to clear up and brought out his copy of the lease for such discussion.

Not one of the three GSA representatives had brought a copy of the lease, terms of which they forthwith ignored, the meeting commencing with three questions by Larsen:

"Why do you want a theater here?"

"What is all this about nonsegregation?"

"What are your political purposes in getting the theater?"

(These figures are apart from the sum it would take to refurbish the theater).

Not 20, but 93 G's

AFTER these questions had been logically answered, it turned out that instead of the $20,000 yearly rental outlined in the bid which was the basis for the written lease, GSA would require a payment of $93,000 the first year and $59,000 each succeeding year.

This, GSA explained, would pay for the shelves, moving expenses, equipment and guards that would be needed in the space substituting for the Belasco, a portion of which, in the popular downtown luncheon area, would be retained by executives.

GSA also stated that check-writing machines are now in the building which, it added, was shortly to be replaced with another building soon.

Treasury officials denied both those points.

So it was that in speaking before the House Public Works Committee this week, Larsen was nearly correct in assuming the Belasco was not likely to again become a theater. His own office had seen to that. But the record proves ANTA's long seriousness re: Belasco At all events, for the moment, there the matter rests.

The National

TALK of the National returning to legitimate attractions also was revived, especially in New York where the potential angels of the Strand pondered how, in such an event, enough touring attractions might be found to fill three Washington theaters if audiences could be assured.

The key person in this matter is Thomas C. Dewart, who, through the Munsey estate, controls the National, which is now under a long-term lease to Marcus Heiman. Dewart recently sold the New York Sun to the Scripps-Howard interests.

Repeated efforts have been made by ANTA, Gilbert Miller and others to return the National to round actors and it's a possibility not to be discounted.

'Streetcar' Next

GETTING back to the Gayety, at the moment of writing there is no booking set after Miss Peters leaves Saturday evening until the arrival of "A Streetcar Named Desire" April 3 for a three-week stay. While Judith Evelyn's company that first stanza will be playing Holy Week, normally the lowest dip of the business year, the play's fame suggests a three-week sellout.

As for "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Monday's return was proof of how adept was the late Rudolf Beiser at writing the most lasting of modern romantic comedies. The staying power of one of the world's great romances might well be compared with the record-breaking run Disney's adaptation of another favorite romance is enjoying at Keith's, "Cinderella." For the romance of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning is, too, a story that will never grow old.

It is perhaps fortunate, after all, that what New York seems to view as a test of our dramatic appetite should prove to be a gentle, romantic story with an appeal for all cultural levels.

But it's a pity more of them weren't down here as the curtains parted last Monday night for that prolonged, steady applause which brought back an art or amusement, call it what you will, that audiences are waiting to buy.

Come on in, boys, the water's fine.

Success Didn't Give Molly the Jumps

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP).—Women usually can develop a fondness for anything in the world—except another woman.

One of the few women of our times genuinely popular with her own sex is Mrs. Gertrude Berg. Ladies who would give Lana Turner a sub-zero glare just melt and swoon in Gertrude's lap whenever they see her.

"OOOOOOh, Molly, you're so wonderful!" they gush. And Gertrude gives them a patient Mona Lisa smile and an autograph, and the ladies feel they had a victory that day. They even go home and give their husbands a kind word.

The reason they call her Molly is that for nearly 21 years years Mrs. Berg has authored and played the leading role in the radio serial, "The Goldbergs," whose heroine is Molly, a plump Bronx wife.

Housfrau Triumphant

FOR THESE two decades she has represented the hausfrau triumphant in an era when career women have been winning most of the plaudits. And she knows that is the reason for her popularity.

"If I were glamorous, the women wouldn't like me at all," sighed Mrs. Berg contentedly over the ruins of a luncheon chunk of lemon chiffon pie.

The pie was only a symbol of Mrs. Berg's philosophy of taking life as it is.

"I always diet tomorrow," she said. She doesn't mind being regarded by the public as a fine wife, and she doesn't mind looking like a wife who has gone the way of all flesh that enjoys good food.

But big, placid and comfortable as she appears, she is one of the most talented, astute and determined career women of her generation. But she has made a success of both her home and her career without getting excited about it. And Gertrude has managed to stay just as warm and friendly in her private life as Molly has in public.

Business Puts Down Cash For Children's Concerts

By Paul Hume

"NOW you take children's concerts for example—what business firm would feel like spending $1500 in advertising to pay for a children's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra?"

That's the kind of question you might hear some so-called hard-headed business or advertising man ask, if he were approached about such a proposition.

And yet, five business firms in Washington did just that this closing symphony season. And they were joined by one anonymous donor who put up the same amount.

Campbell's Music Co., the Hecht Co., Sears-Roebuck & Co., People's Drug Stores, and the Lee D. Butler Co., a S . . . R automobile agency, paid $1500 each to provide public and parochial school children of Washington with their first free symphony concerts in history.

And there was nothing to prevent private school children, children in Virginia and Maryland schools, and even their parents from hearing the broadcasts of those concerts. Because Radio Station WQQW carried them to the entire Washington area.

Six for Free

SIX FREE CONCERTS for school children! It was a wonderful thing for Washington business interests to provide. Nor was that all.

The children were given different kinds of charts showing how a symphony orchestra is seated. Their teachers were given program notes, or wrote their own, telling about the music the orchestra would play.

Music went into the schools of Washington in ways it had never done before. And the children loved it. They showed their appreciation in writing hundreds of letters. Letters went to the symphony office—to the companies that paid for the concerts—to the orchestra's conductor, its manager, and others associated with it.

And if the children wrote letters, you just bet they told their parents about the business firms who made all this music possible right in their own schools. In case you wonder, ask any of the men at the heads of these companies what response they have had.

They will tell you that the return on their investment, in the usual terms for measuring advertising, has been wonderful.

Added Sponsor

NOR IS THIS all a matter of men. Before the present season was finished, a new sponsor for a concert next year had appeared: The Junior League of Washington will give one of these National Symphony children's concerts next year.

It is the goal of the orchestra to increase this year's six concerts to at least 10 or 12. There is no limit to the number they can play for the schools of Washington, except the limit of the price per concert.

Concerts for children are among the oldest and finest traditions in American orchestral circles. In every city proud enough to own its own orchestra, that orchestra plays concerts designed especially for children. And in not one of them will you find that they play anything but the finest music.

Just Like Adults

MOVEMENTS from the symphonies of Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, Mendlessohn — tone poems of Ibert, Strauss, Ravel—descriptive pieces by the same composers whose names appear on your Constitution Hall programs—are the ones played this year by the National Symphony Orchestra in its children's concerts. The regular conductor of the orchestra directs the programs.

Children like to feel that they are being given the same playing and players and conductor as their parents go to see and hear. It is a fine thing for them to grow up under an American conductor who can make music come to life for them.

If you could see and hear the children at these, their own, concerts, you would know what music means to them. Their faces light up when they hear a melody they know—or when a bit of programmatic music comes along to

Jane Found A Bare Big Toe Useful

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

"PLAYING Dead-By-TheRoadside is a rough game for girls—which never bothered me. Here's how you play," said Jane Russell, acting out every rule: "A whole bunch of kids hide by the roadside in a clump of bushes, watching both ways down the highway to see if a car is coming—when you see one in the distance, one kid hops out and sprawls on the edge of the pavement, like he'd been knocked down by a car. Along comes the car—the driver sees the kid—he slams on the brakes and comes screeching to a stop. By the time he can get out of his car, the kid scoots back into the bushes and we all lam outa there! That's D e a d-B y-T h e-Roadside. Fun? Bro-THER!"

And that gives you a quick sketch of Tomboy Jane Russell's early raising, on an eight-acre ranch, by the side of Foothill Boulevard, in San Fernando Valley.

Older than her four brothers, she bossed them with the back of her fist and a barefoot big toe, handy in the clinches. She was pitcher on the ball team, chief architect of every tree house, most adventurous hitch-hiker. And she showed the boys how to rig a Tarzan-swing in their Eucalyptus trees—for swinging down through the branches to tag the tops of cars as they whizzed by below. And that was her childhood.

The Suit Did It

THINGS really did happen much later, when she posed for a picture in a bathing suit, while she was working as a part-time model at a now historic emporium called Nancy's Clothing Store in Los Angeles. Howard Hughes hired her, sight unseen,

Show Proves Chorus Boys Have a Place

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK (AP).—One of the great mysteries about show business has always been the necessity for chorus boys. In the current musical production of "Where's Charley?" there have been some recent revelations about chorus boys which explain much. T h e y call themselves "members of the male ensemble." The "chorus boys" appellation is out.

So here are a few discoveries about the necessity for chorus boys and the invaluable work they do in making a musical and assisting in the production of the dozen or more versions of a Broadway hit which will be shown through the United States and on foreign stages:

JACK FRIEND, one of the members of the "Where's Charley?" male ensemble, an apt chorus boy, departed last week for Australia, where he will direct the down-under production of this musical hit. Before leaving he assembled a full photographic picture of the Broadway production of "Where's Charley?" to show to the Australian players who will appear in this production.

"I'm working entirely with Australian and British personnel," Friend said. "They haven't seen the show in New York and I want them to know what I am talking about.

"They tell me that Australia is every bit as sophisticated theatrically as we are here on Broadway, but it is only natural that I should have these basic fears. I want to do right by Ray Bolger and his wife, Gwen Rickard, who produced the show. And they are the ones who set me up for this Australian assignment which makes me a director and not just a member of the 'male ensemble'."

ROBERT HELD, who'll be the Joe Held in the national company of "South Pacific," has three weeks more to go in the "Where's Charley?" chorus before he becomes a principal in the Rodgers-Hammerstein operetta.

"My first Broadway show was 'Where's Charley?' and I learned plenty in it from coaching by Ray Bolger," he said. "When they were casting for 'South Pacific' I sang 'Younger Than Springtime' for eight times or more during the tryouts. Then I asked if I could take off my shirt and sing it exactly as it is done in the show. That apparently clinched the deal. While I was playing in 'Where's Charley?' I went to every S u n d a y performance of 'South Pacific' to get myself up in the part I am going to play now."

Bolger says he and his wife, Miss Rickard, paid special attention to casting chorus boys for their several abilities as actors, singers and dancers.

"Chorus girls with enough talent to become principals in a musical show are not too difficult to discover," Bolger said. "But chorus boys with ability to become principals are difficult to find, largely because no one pays attention to chorus boys. In the chorus ranks of 'Where's Charley?' alone we have found a half dozen talented chorus boys who have advanced with proper instruction to principal roles or to director assignments."

Boyer Soon Will Make With Romance on Radio

By Sonia Stein

DROP whatever it is you're doing—reading this column is exactly what I mean—and tear down to the library. Fast! Hunt through the mystery book until you find a detective character who could blossom into radio life in the person of Charles Boyer.

Penalty for delayed action: NBC is going to put him on the air in a series of romantic comedies. Boyer dickered with NBC for a long time, trying to find a detective character that would be suitable. Now, for want of a suitable French sleuth role (Arsene Lupin was considered and vetoed for reasons not made public), Boyer will wind up making silly conversation in that highly developed form of drivel known as the romantic comedy. Haste, as I say, is important. The romances are imminent.

Judy Canova

There's not much possibility of any Boyer show being televised for a long time. Boyer wants to be free to go from coast to coast for play and movie assignments. He's not keen to kinescope shows on the west coast for the rest of the network, quite apart from the physical impossibility of doing a weekly TV show along with either a movie or a play.

Boyer looks his handsome self on TV. He made several guest appearances while in New York, including one on the Paul Whiteman show which is where I discovered to my shattered illusion, that he wears a RED toupee. All that dark-eyed, black-eyelashed good looks topped by an auburn transformation. It's aesthetically clamorous, believe me. The motives are of the best, however. Red hair photographs and televises with more highlights than black hair does. Many actresses are auburn-haired now, although they photograph dark.

Pigtail Problem

WHICH brings us to a genuine redhead whom I'd always thought was dark. NBC's Judy Canova, tracked to the Gotham Hotel in New York, has dark red hair and grey eyes. Her hair has to be long for the pigtails which she wears for all performances as suitable topping for her GI shoes, plaid shirt and hillbilly lope.

She rebels over the necessity of keeping it long, threatens to cut it so she can wear a stylish hat. At present she doesn't own a hat—except her red comedy hat—and had a hood built right onto her new mink coat.

For what it may be worth in "the shape of things to come," Miss Canova let out a high voltage hill-to-hill type screech to her sister Ann (them's big suites at the Gotham) when I asked her if she had ever thought about doing a female Hopalong Cassidy comedy character.

"Ya hear that Annie?" she screamed. They didn't elucidate further, but it seemed I'd hit a point—happy or sore—I'm not sure.

Hopalong himself is the only guest star Judy's had on her show. Her daughter Tweeny (Julietta) said she wanted him for Christmas, so mama did the best she could. She had him on her New Year's Eve show.

Although Judy talks at all times much the way she does on the air, she's a hard-headed business woman. She has her own film producing company and will be producing some TV films "maybe within a year and a half." All of which makes that female Hopalong Cassidy sound probable.

Meantime her radio show (Saturdays, 10 p. m., WRC-NBC) goes merrily along in its seventh year for the same happy sponsor. Possible reason for its success is that the hard-working Miss Canova tries out her next week's show on her this week's studio audience. When the regular show is over, she gives the audience a run-through of the next week's script and throws out the jokes they don't laugh at. Steps up the work but also seems to step up the show.

THE most exciting news on the upcoming shows front is word that Ray Noble, that master of inanity on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy show, has been auditioned for the part of the foppish English gentleman in a series based on P. G. Wodehouse's "Jeeves."

See STEIN, Page 4, Column 1

TV in the Air

IT DOESN'T bother Judy at all that many people think she is a genuine hillbilly. Her father was a Florida cotton broker who took his brood to the cool hills of North Carolina every summer. There Judy, Ann and Brother Zeke picked up the hill songs and twang. (Zeke and Ann are part of the comedy trio when they play State Fairs, where Judy is a big favorite, and will be in the act if Judy comes to Washington for the Sesquicentennial, as seems likely.)

C. U. to Open 'Oedipus Rex' Friday Night

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S celebrated speech and drama department will present its next production of the season, "Oedipus Rex," Friday night in the university theater on the campus.

The Sophoclean classic will be presented in a new translation by Dudley Fitts and Robert Fitzgerald. The authors state they have hoped "to stress the colloquial strength of the languaage without sacrificing the poetic quality." Alan Schneider is the director.

William Callahan and Teddy Marie Kinsey, both recently returned from the university's graduate touring company trek of "Much Ado About Nothing," have the leading roles of Oedipus and Jocasta.

The chorus is under the direction of Dr. Josephine McGarrey Callan, whose work with the department has done so much to give it its Nation-wide reputation.

The tragedy will be performed nightly except Sundays through April 1.

CAPITOL RETURNEE: Lynn Allison, who songs with Sam Jack Kaufman's Capitol Theater orchestra had a seven-year vogue, comes back to the Capitol Thursday to sing duets with the theater's current darling, Kay De Witt, to observe Sam Jack's tenth anniversary with the theater. Lynn's coming up from Memphis to make it a festive week for the Capitol

New Musical Is Ready to Go In Georgetown

WEDNESDAYS through Saturdays will be performance nights for the newly organized Georgetown Theater group which this week will present its first offering, "This Is It," a musical adaptation of a Bret Harte story.

Performances will be held nightly at 8:15 in the auditorium of Christ Church, 31st and O sts. nw.

Metropolitan to Show Series Of 'Oscar' Nominee Movies

WITH the announcement of the Academy Award winners set for Thursday night the 23rd, the Metropolitan Theater this week will revive a series of pictures which have been nominated for "Oscars."

Since the more prominent nominees are still playing the Washington area, having been only recently released, the Warner F street house is dipping into pictures seen here some months ago. The parade starts this Thursday, with a different picture each day.

"A Letter to Three Wives," a candidate for best picture, best direction and best screen play, is the opening day attraction.

"She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" plays Friday, a candidate for the finest color photography division.

"White Heat," nominated as a best motion picture story entry, is Saturday's bill.

"The Stratton Story," another best story award, will be shown a week from today.

"Come to the Stable" is set for Monday the 20th, with a best performance nomination (Loretta Young), two best supporting performances (Celeste Holm and Elsa Lanchester) and a best story nomination to its credit.

"Pinky," for which Jeanne Crain has been nominated as the best actress and both Ethel Barrymore and Ethel Waters as best supporting actress will be shown the 21st.

"The Window" comes back the final day of the series, Wednesday, a candidate for the best film editing of the year.

Youth Who Once Toured in 'Father' Has Lead at G. U.

Once one of Father Day's red-headed youngsters in a touring company of "Life with Father," a Georgtown University sophomore this week will have the lead in another classic play, "Ah, Wilderness!"

REYNOLDS

Jack Reynolds is the young man who'll be playing Richard in Eugene O'Neill's popular comedy Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings when the university's Mask and Bauble Club presents the second offering of its ninety-sixth year.

George Perry is directing the production which will be presented in Holy Trinity Auditorium, 36th and O sts. nw. John Dooley, Warren LeMon, Joe Sickles, Tom McGinty, Tom Bauer and Gery Martin are in the cast, with Vernon McCarthy and Jack Gurry heading the backstage crew.

ON RECORDS

"GO TO SLEEP, Go To Sleep, Go To Sleep,"—Arthur Godfrey-Mary Martin, Columbia: A novelty song is usually one with a clever set of lyrics set to a melody whose main function is to be unobtrusive. Here, however, is a novelty which came into being because of its unusually attractive melody.

The melody in question was written by a relatively obscure composer, Fred Spielman, who submitted it to Walt Disney, since he operates a music publishing house as one of his farflung enterprises. Disney was so intrigued with the tune that he called up Sammy Cahn and asked him to write a lyric for the song.

Cahn, one of America's leading songwriters, who is responsible for "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen," "Shoe Shine Boy," "I've Heard That Song Before," and sundry other hits, begged off because he was working on a score for a new movie and had no time for collaborating with an unknown tunesmith. Disney managed to cajole Cahn into his office to hear the melody anyway. Cahn was immediately enthusiastic over what he heard, and that weekend he produced the clever lyrics for "Go to Sleep, Go to Sleep, Go to Sleep," whose triple title is reminiscent of an earlier Sammy Cahn success, "Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow."

"GO TO Sleep, etc." like "Dearie," "I Said My Pajamas," and many another song these days, is a boy-girl duet, this time between husband and wife. It makes capital of the familiar domestic scene wherein one partner keeps up an incessant flow of conversation in the night while the other partner is trying to get some sleep.

Columbia has cast the parts of husband and wife admirably, with Arthur Godfrey and Mary Martin, both of whom, I'm told, make their principal livings in other fields. Placing these two charming and contrasting personalities on the same record was a happy inspiration indeed.

Incidentally, those of us who have always thought of Austrian composers as romantic fellows who produce gay Viennese waltzes are in for a sad disillusionment. Fred Spielman, the above mentioned writer of "Go to Sleep, Go to Sleep, Go to Sleep," and Stephan Weiss, the composer of another triple titled novelty, "Music, Music, Music," a song which hardly engenders thoughts of romance, are both Viennese by birth.

FROM a Disk Jockey's Memo Pad: Don Cornell, the vocalist on Sammy Kaye's record of "It Isn't Fair," makes his solo bow for RCA Victor with "My Baby Is Blue." The song has nothing to do with an incubator . . . While there are many popular Christmas songs, "Easter Parade" has more or less had the Easter season all to itself. It may have to move this year, though, to make way for a cute new song about the Easter bunny, "Peter Cottontail," as recorded by Mervin Shiner (Decca) . . . Soundalikes: "The Wedding Samba" and "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend" . . . Popular singers are usually known by their nicknames. One never sees a record label mentioning William Eckstine, Harry Crosby, or Josephine Stafford . . . One of Mercury's top stars, Vic Damone, has to abbreviate his first name to refrain from plugging a rival record company . . . On the other hand, the newcomer Richard Hayes, whose name sounds rather formal, doesn't dare use his nickname. If he did, Dick Haymes would be furious.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9:00 a. m.; Moondial, 11:20 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Symphony To Play Again For Children

Alec Templeton . . . plays today in Constitution Hall

THE National Symphony Orchestra will play a special people's concert in Lisner Auditorium on March 30.

The program will include three Latin American dances, performed with the orchestra by members of the Washington School of the Ballet.

The concert is being given to answer many requests from students, parents, and teachers who were unable to obtain tickets to the regular children's concerts of the orchestra. Howard Mitchell will conduct, and has listed the Washington premiere of an important piece, Robert Ward's overture, Jubilation. This is the first time a major work has been premiered on a young people's concert.

The symphony's weekly concerts are now over, but two Sunday afternoon programs remain: next week the Tschaikowsky program with Rudolf Firkusny in the popular piano concerto, and Palm Sunday afternoon, April 2, with the Ricci brothers as soloists.

COMING EVENTS include Ballet Theater the end of the month, with Youskevitch, Maria Tallchief, Nana Gollner, Hugh Laing, Nora Kaye, John Kriza, and the rest of their top company.

The Georgetown Concert Group will announce a replacement concert for this week shortly. There will be no program this Thursday as previously announced.

Best programs of the week include: today's Barker Hall recital; modern music this afternoon at All Souls' Unitarian Church; Heifetz's list Tuesday night, and the even better program at the same time by Jean Williams in the Institute of Contemporary Arts. Miss Williams is a superb pianist and musician.

And the dance program for Lisner on Friday night looks excellent.

Four Musicians Produce A Great Waxing of Bach

BACH: Trio Sonatas. Phillip Kaplan, and Louise Schaefer, flutists; Samuel Mayes, cello, and Erwin Bodky, harpsichordist. Allegro AL 44. $3.85.

Here is one of the finest and most engaging recordings of the music of Bach I have heard. It is played to perfection by two members of the Boston symphony orchestra and two other Boston musicians. The recording could not be improved.

The music is a Sonata in E Flat for two flutes, cello and keyboard, and one in G for one flute and the other two instruments. Samuel Mayes is first cellist of the Boston Symphony, having assumed that position following years as first chairman in the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Kaplan plays with the Boston orchestra also, and Erwin Bodky has been heard on records with Arthur Fiedlers sinfonietta. The music has charm, mature substance, and is one of the best tributes of the present Bach anniversary.

CHOPIN: C Sharp Minor Scherzo; A Flat Ballade; Waltzes in E Minor, C Sharp Minor and G Flat. Leopold Godowsky, pianist. Allegro AL 31. $3.85.

Historical Piano Series: Ferruccio Busoni, Teresa Carreno, Raoul Pugno, Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler. Allegro AL 30. $3.85.

The Allegro people have been enterprising in several fields. In their recordings of unfamiliar music, they have interested themselves in the rolls of piano music made by the famous artists of a previous generation, rolls designed for use on player pianos.

Of course those rolls were often less than an artist's true performance, because of mechanical limitations and the manner in which holes were cut in rolls. In spite of this there are some remarkable achievements.

One entire recording brings back the playing of Leopold Godowsky, who, though he made modern records, did not make them in his prime. His version the the A Flat Ballade of Chopin emerges from this recording as one of the most poetic accounts of the familiar music. His technique was the big kind that encompassed all problems with ease. With all this, he played with a great tenderness often missing in today's technical giants.

The famous names of Pugno, Bloomfield-Zeisler, and above all, Carreno and Busoni, mean little to today's auditors. From a portion of Schumann's Kreislerlana, we hear the famous "Pugno touch" with clarity. It was a beautiful kind of playing. Carreno's conception of Schubert's G Major Impromptu was one of great motion. It is hard to tell just how she made the piano sound from this recording.

The same is true of Busoni. He is represented here with his version of the Rigoletto quartet, a piece of patchery so bad that we would not tolerate it on a program today. Nor does the playing, with its jerky lines, give any true account of what we know Busoni's playing to have been. But there are moments on the disk when things do slow up brilliantly. Bloomfield-Zeisler comes off well in Chopin's D Flat, "Minute" waltz.

The idea behind these records is good. If mechanics of transferal from roll to record can be smoothed out in the older records, a valuable historical document will be possible. The Allegro pressings are tops.

HUME.

Calfee Show Opens Today In Baltimore

WILLIAM CALFEE, head of the art department at American University, is having a one-man show at the Baltimore Museum, opening this afternoon. It follows his successful first show in New York at the Weyhe Gallery.

On March 31 the Baltimore Museum is formally opening its new children's wing, combining a museum especially designed for young people with studios for their art classes. The new center is to be directed by Belle Boas, one of the foremost art educators in the country. Working closely with the schools of the city, it will function as a department of the museum rather than a separate school with paid admissions. Funds for the project, which is unique in its field, have been provided by Mrs. Saidie May, a trustee.

Continuing through March 31 at the Barnett Aden Gallery is an exhibit by six Washington artists, Bernice Cross, Norma Mazo, Robert Gates, James Porter, Samuel Bookatz, and Romare Bearden. It will be followed by a retrospective of the work of James L. Wells of the Howard University art faculty. The current show at Howard is a display of Daumier lithographs from the permanent collection. The prints form one of the circulating exhibitions being sent on tour to southern colleges in a special project conducted by Professor Herring, head of the art department.

Marini's Approach

Heart and Mind Make an Artist

By Jane Watson Crane

PAUL KLEE devotees will find a wealth of material at the Phillips Gallery. The exhibition, which will be discussed in this column more fully next Sunday, consists of paintings, drawings and prints from the Klee Foundation in Switzerland with a few additions from American collections. Arranged in chronological order, the works provide the first opportunity presented to survey the creative output of a striking original artist.

THE lion of the week was the Italian sculptor, Marino Marini, who came down for the opening of an exhibition of his drawings at American University. The artist is concurrently having a show of sculptures at the Buchholz Gallery in New York. He first gained admirers here when one of his figure pieces of a man on a horse was included in the show of traditional and experimental sculpture held earlier in the season at the university.

Marini gave a key to his own approach when we asked him about the current boom in creative activity among Italian artists. He speaks no English so we cannot give the answer in direct quotes, but the gist of his argument was that the drive was to be constructive after experiencing so much destruction.

In Italy, he said, the artists still have "temperament;" we are not trying to do it all with our heads, he added. The purely intellectual approach to the fine arts he feels to be not so much a dead end as an impossibility. He is not the first to have said that it takes heart and mind to be an artist, but his remarks emphasized the point and his work underscores it. The outstanding characteristics of the drawings are their freedom and fluency.

SHARING honors with Marini at the university is the painter Sarah Baker, who is on the faculty. It is her first one-man show since 1947. A painstaking craftsman, her work has always given pleasure because of her taste and consistency in performance. The current group is unusually well integrated; the paintings, stripped of all extraneous detail, come clear in color and composition. Her subject matter is much the same as before—heads, figures and still-lifes. The difference is in the approach, for the reliance rests securely on painting as a separate, plastic language.

"Yellow Clown," by Sarah Baker, currently on display in Watkins Gallery of American University

ALINE FRUHAUF is the Peggy Bacon of Washington, but her caricatures are less biting than those of her New York counterpart. For the exhibit at the Whyte Gallery she has done portraits in small scale of a number of local celebrities—artists, connoisseurs and collectors. She works in pencil with a thin, taut line, applying delicate color with wash and crayon. The personalities of her sitters do not hit you all at once; rather they creep up on you a little at a time.

She plays her accents softly rather than fortissimo, but she can convey a great deal through a lifted eyebrow, an upthrust chin or the contours of a face and figure. In the portraits she placed objects and backgrounds with which her figures and heads are associated in her mind's eye. The results are subtle studies, and as is invariably the case in so personal a medium, some come off better than others.

Shown here for the first time are portraits of David Finley, Huntington Cairns, Hermann Williams, and Duncan Phillips of the museum world, artists William Calfee, Prentiss Taylor, Jacob Kainen, Bernice Cross, Sarah Baker, Alice Acheson, Pietro Lazzari, Robert and Margaret Gates.

Other "victims" include James V. Herrin, head of the art department of Howard University, Cartoonists Herblock and Jim Berryman, Jose Gomez Sicre, in charge of visual arts at the Pan American Union, and such well known figures as Alice Longworth, Caresse Crosby, Franz Bader, James Whyte, and Miriam Crocker. For good measure she reveals herself, all eyes.

Dr. Stechow Speaks Today

THE Panofsky lecture at the National Gallery drew a capacity crowd last Sunday. This afternoon's event is a lecture by Professor Wolfgang Stechow of Oberlin College, his subject "Ovid's Metamorphoses in Medieval and Renaissance Art." Time, 4 p. m.; place, the Gallery lecture hall.

The Division of Graphic Arts of the National Museum is holding a special exhibition of prints by Mary Editha Whelan of Sioux City, Iowa. Included are a number of recent woodcuts with strongly marked religious feeling. The show continues through March 26. Paintings are from the William T. Evans collection will be shown in the foyer of the Natural History Building until the same date.

Specialized Stamp Catalogue Contains Some New Listings

By William M. Stuart

A 1950 edition of Scott's "Catalogue of United States Stamps Specialized" has just been released by Scott Publications. For the first time it contains complete listings, descriptions and illustrations of the circular dies of 1-cent, 2-cent and 3-cent envelope stamps of the 1916-1918 series. A change in the envelope section includes the addition of 14 illustrations of the circular die varieties, five dies for the 1-cent and nine for the 2-cent.

STUART

For the first time, descriptions of the 2-cent Sesquicentennial exposition and 2-cent Washington Bicentennial envelope stamps have been added, as well as four high values of the 1934 wine series. Conservative price increases, with a few decreases, have been made throughout postal issues. The 5-cent New York postmaster's stamp has advanced from $52.50 to $55. A new listing is a No. 14 block of fours, the 10-cent green, type II, of 1855, priced at $100 mint and $500 used.

Canal Zone airmail has been renumbered, Hawaii items advanced and Confederate proofs added, while the prices of many proofs have been revised downward. The catalogue is a most valuable volume and congratulations are due the editors.

THE Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met Tuesday evening, A. J. Galloway presiding. An auction was the feature, Ernest Woodhouse acting as auctioneer. Marcus White, of Worcester, Mass., was a guest. He is a member of the national societies and is a noted collector of United States envelopes, his collection containing many of the rare and unusual envelopes of the United States. There will be another meeting on Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw. Paul Aiken of the Post Office Department will be the speaker.

The next meeting of the Capital Precancel Club will be held Tuesday at the home of Clement H. Evans, 8119 Hartford ave., Silver Spring, Md.

The Capital City Post Card Club will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 at the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw.

With Young, Safety Is No Accident

Arthur Margetson, now starring on Broadway in "Clutterbuck," would be Jeeves, the calm and collected valet. Noble, would also continue with the Bergen show, "Jeeves" being primarily a summer replacement idea.

CBS has 200 program ideas sitting around that its idea staff thought up during the cold winter for the hot summer. About 15 of these will be used for replacements. Close to the audition stage are two situation comedies, "Shy Guy" and "Gransby's Green Acres."

WITH four little girls to feed, it's not surprising that Robert Young looks at his career through the double bar of the dollar sign. But it certainly is refreshing to hear somebody come up with a plain unvarnished answer to the perennial question, "when are you going into television?"

Young, who is sitting serene with his "Father Knows Best" radio show (Thursdays, 8:30 p. m., WRC-NBC) and his own film producing company, said he tried to figure out how much damage appearances on TV might do him with the motion picture exhibitors who are supposedly knitting dark brows over the inroads TV may make into movie grosses. Then he realized that he couldn't possibly do a regular TV show and work in movies at the same time—the rehearsal requirements of TV being what they are—and decided he couldn't afford to make the switch to TV.

"Simple economics dictate that as long as I can steal a buck making pictures I won't go into television—at least not until a sponsor will pay as much as a motion picture producer," he said with fine lucidness.

In Washington Thursday for a luncheon meeting of the National Committee for Traffic Safety, Young had his day well filled. He went to one of the high schools, and after being caught in the hall at class-changing time, escaped to the windy out-of-doors where he posed for pictures with some of the drivers-training students. The "Father Knows Best" program has been intimately involved with safe driving for teenagers ever since the January 5 show. After a show-long pitch about safe driving that week, there have been weekly hitchhike announcements about safety on the show. Young sometimes steps out of his role of father in the show to discuss safety on his own.

And a grand total of a million and a half Robert Young Good Drivers Club cards have been distributed through the show. (Approximately 2,500,000 agreements, another gimmick related to the safety campaign, have been signed.) "It's like grabbing a bear by the tail," Young says. "The presses have been printing these agreements night and day."

The response to the show by teenagers has been very pleasing to Young, who never figured on high school youngsters existing as a radio listening entity, before. The exact effect of the safety campaign—the only long-sustained public service campaign ever undertaken by a commercial show as far as Young knows—on the audience rating isn't certain. But it doesn't show any signs of hurting it. The rating, which was about 5 when the show started in August is now a comfortable 12.3.

Young didn't think up the safety tie-in himself, but when the Inter-Industry Highway Safety Committee, which was looking for a good radio outlet, broached the subject it fell on receptive ears. Young's father was killed about 10 years ago in a strange automobile accident involving two teenagers racing each other on a narrow road. His father, a former cavalry officer who had survived 81 years of war and peace, was riding a horse when the two cars crashed and went out of control, hitting the horse and rider.

Robert Young and his gang on "Father Knows Best" (Thursdays at 8:30 p. m., WRC-NBC). Left to right, Ted Donaldson, Young, Rhoda Williams, "Mother" June Whitley and, on Young's lap, Norma Jean Nilsson

This past week, when Young and his wife were getting ready to come east for this safety tour, they called eldest daughter Carol, 16, at her school about 125 miles outside of Los Angeles, to say goodbye. They found her in a depressed state: One of her schoolmates had been killed and another one seriously injured in a hot rod car crash several days earlier.

Young himself has a clean traffic record, having earned only two or three traffic violation tickets in 25 years of driving in a city noted for its terrifying traffic conditions.

It strikes me that a program popular with teenagers, which tries to get them to improve serious condition over which they have direct control, is a stirring idea.

A bang-bang children program won all kinds of citations several years ago for "promoting tolerance" by enacting hair-raising adventures in which the baddies kidnapped the goodies and were trapped in the end. But it was all a great big guns-and-grownups affair which didn't give the kid listeners much chance to identify themselves with the show. This traffic safety campaign for high school youngsters, is saner and will save more lives in the end, I suspect.

McAndrew Heads Correspondents Group

The Radio Correspondents' Association has elected William R. McAndrew of NBC, president of the Association, to succeed retiring President Elmer Davis of ABC. Davis becomes ex-officio member of the Executive Board.

McAndrew, is general manager of Stations WRC and WNBW, NBC owned and operated radio and television outlets in Washington. He is one of the 32 charter members of the Radio Correspondents' Association and is one of four members of the original executive board which activated the Senate Radio Gallery in 1940. He has been active in radio and television news broadcasts as Washington Director of News and Special Events for the NBC network.

Mary MacArthur Fund Benefit Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the benefit performance of "The Wisteria Trees," starring Helen Hayes, on March 28 at the Martin Beck Theater, New York, may be obtained by writing to James F. Reilly, 234 West 43d st., who is acting as treasurer for the Mary MacArthur Memorial Fund for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The prices are: orchestra, $7.20; mezzanine, $6; balcony, $4.80 to $3, tax included. The committee announces that contributions above the price of the tickets are expected.

Thomas L. Thomas Sings With Self

The singer with the parallel name sang a duet with himself Wednesday over WQQW. Visiting on the "Brunch With Nan and Bill" show, Thomas L. Thomas declined to sing unless he could sing with himself. A recording from the library, a set of earphones, and Thomas joined Thomas in a Welsh lullaby.

To Mrs. Berg The 24 Hours Is Too Short

Since 1929 Mrs. Berg has written about eight million words—80 good-sized books—and acted in some 5000 radio and television programs.

She used to write and star in six 15-minute programs a week. Today, at 50, she still turns out two half-hour programs a week, one radio, one video. She gets up at 6 in the morning, and by noon of the same day she has written an entire show at a single sitting. She writes in longhand with a pencil.

"I can't keep up with my thoughts on a typewriter," she smiled.

Face Is Familiar

TELEVISION HAS disturbed her way of life because now wherever she goes people recognize here.

"I can't go to Coney Island anymore," she complained mildly. "And I always liked to do that."

When she was on radio alone, she used to go about the east side talking to housewives and push-cart peddlers to get the shrewd homely observations that stamp her style. Her face is too well known now for her to do that.

"But I never have to grope for material," she said. "You live with people, and that's where stories come from—people. They don't have to come from someone who speaks a dialect."

Mrs. Berg has never lost her serenity or become neurotic, as many successful writers and actors do.

"I sleep very well," she laughed, "because I like my work."

They've Drawn the Sting From 'Stage Door'

By John Crosby

WHEN George S. Kaufman saw the film version of his play "Stage Door," he muttered darkly: "They should have called it 'Screen Door.'" The CBS television network is now exhibiting the latest, probably last, rehash of "Stage Door" which might be described as a 10-inch screen door.

Apart from the title, all traces of the original play have been carefully expunged. Somewhere in the course of its travels from play to movie to TV, all the vitality has gone out of the idea, too. I can't quite put my finger on the reason why "Stage Door" is such a lifeless exhibit but it is. It seems to have no special point or purpose.

THE story, if such detail is necessary, is about a couple of youngsters who are in love with the theater and with each other. In the first episode they fell in love after that traditional quarrel which always binds young lovers together in the movies. In the second, they played opposite one another for the first time. In the third, they were married and by the time you get around to reading this they may have a couple of children. They are galloping through time and events at such speed that at the end of the season they'll be ready for the Actor's Home.

The actress is played by Louise Albritton, of the films, who has a great many of the late Carole Lombard's more irritating mannerisms and too few of her endearing ones, and the actor by Scott McKay, a minor league Joseph Cotton. Around them are cast a drearily familiar assortment of supporting characters—a bartender who runs an actor's hangout which resembles Ralph's; a director who strides about wearing his overcoat like a cape and in general behaves like Orson Welles; an aging actor whose career is over, a number of others who are described as "warm-hearted, mercurial people of the theater"; and one heel. That heel will have to be given a couple of assistants if this thing is to be kept running any length of time. He's terribly outnumbered by all those warm-hearted people. I feel a little sorry for him.

THAT poses one of the serious difficulties in writing about the theater. Almost no one, except Mr. Kaufman, has ever managed it without over-burdening his plot with sentimentality and even Mr. Kaufman scattered a few, coldly mercenary tears over his theatrical plays. The characters in "Stage Door" are never very distant from a good cry, a factor that may appeal strongly to some elements of the populace but not to this one.

I HAVE a couple of other observations that apply not only to "Stage Door" but to most other dramas on television. The saloon—and it sometimes seems to be the same saloon—has become the only spot in town for the boy or girl to get to know one another. I've seen more romances blossom in saloons since I bought a television set than in real life. My own feelings about this matter is that romances are more likely to come unhinged in saloons than the other way around. In any case, the saloon—possibly out of gratitude for the part it played in television's development—has become a cliche that had best be avoided. The boy and girl could hold hands in the park, couldn't they? Or—how's this for an idea, maybe?—the girl's own parlor.

My other complaint, a minor one, is directed at those actors who sit on chairs turned wrong end to, fold their arms around the back of the chair and say: "Now, look at it my way, darling." I'm sure Emily Post would never approve.

Duke Co-ed Finds Durham No Berlin

By Norman Nelson

DURHAM, N. C.—College students on each side of the Atlantic are pretty much alike at heart, but as for campus life—there's no comparison, according to a Duke University co-ed from Berlin.

Nineteen-year-old Ute Reinsch, formerly a student at the Free University of Berlin, was brought to Duke through the efforts of John A. Park, editor-publisher of the Raleigh Times, and a group of his friends who provided transportation, scholarship grants, and maintenance for a year's special study.

Ute, who came to the United States last summer by Army troopship, was accompanied by Doris Hillenbrand, 14-year-old Berlin school girl, now a student at Peace College in Raleigh. Two years ago Doris asked Park and others then in Berlin to send her some books for the study of English.

Park relayed her plea to the Raleigh Woman's Club, which gathered more than 1000 books and magazines and dispatched them by air to Berlin. The idea caught on all over America and during the following year more than a million books and magazines were sent to Berlin students from all sections.

Entered as Soph

The movement received Nation-wide attention and the commendation of President Truman and Gen. Lucius D. Clay, European commander at the time.

Ute and Doris were selected last year by General Clay for a "visit of appreciation" to North Carolina.

Ute, who entered Duke as a sophomore majoring in economics, finds striking differences between American and European universities.

"It's such a change taking four courses," she commented, speaking perfect English without a trace of accent. "In European colleges a student works in just one subject, and there are no required courses. Students here are able to ask the professor questions and discuss problems in class—something that's never done in European colleges where lecture groups often number 100 or more."

Likes Dorm

COMPARING campus life at Duke and European universities, Ute observed that Old World students live with relatives or in rented rooms rather than in dormitories. She is enthusiastic about dormitory life, finding that students get to know each other much better living together in a closely knit group.

"There are big differences in food, too," said Ute, who is still amazed at the large amount of meat that Americans consume. She likes American desserts, especially lemon pie which is her top favorite. Broccoli, and the Southern dishes of okra, and squash are new to her palate, and she was surprised to learn that corn, which is used for livestock fodder in Germany, is eaten as a vegetable in America.

Ute had no difficulty getting into the swing of social life at Duke. She likes dances and picnics, and as for football—"I nearly yelled myself hoarse at the Duke-Carolina game," she said.

She finds American college boys a carefree lot. "They always seem to get more fun out of life than German boys, who sit around discussing serious topics whenever they have a spare moment," she said.

Too Much Mink

UTE previously enjoyed American movies in Berlin, but believes that Hollywood gives Europeans a false impression of America—too many millionaires, mink coats, and 12-cylinder convertibles.

"I soon learned that everyone wasn't a millionaire," she said, "but even so, I was amazed to find that so many people own houses and automobiles and refrigerators—things that are considered luxuries in Germany. And at first I thought that all Americans live in large apartment houses such as those I saw in New York City."

By now Ute has gained a more nearly correct perspective of the various economic levels of American life, but she is still impressed by the high standard of living, especially when it is contrasted with that of war-torn Europe.

Degree in City Planning Offered

New Haven, Conn.—A new program in city planning, leading to the degree of master of city planning, has been established in Yale University's department of architecture.

The new program will begin next September and will require two years of study. It will be on a graduate level and will be open to a limited number of architects, landscape architects, civil engineers and others who already hold a professional degree in a related field.

Christopher Tunnard, associate professor of city planning, will be director of planning studies in the program.

The graduate program will be an expansion of the city planning courses offered at Yale since 1937.

The Report Card

Salisbury School to Recognize 'Students Are Human Beings'

By Elsie Carper

A SCHOOL plant that designers say is "the most significant in the country" because it recognizes that "students are human beings" will be built for the community of Salisbury, Md.

Instead of one massive school building there will be a series of one-story structures linked by covered passageways. The effect will be that of a college campus rather than a high school.

Each building will house an educational unit—one for the 1000-capacity auditorium, another for music rooms, separate buildings for the fine arts, sciences, physical education, industrial arts, cafeteria and greenhouse. Even the library will be separated from classrooms.

THE entire plant will sit on a 60-acre site. Eventually a swimming pool and a stadium seating 10,000 will be added.

The plan is still on the drawing board with designers in the process of juggling the units, hunting the maximum of educational efficiency.

Wicomico County School Superintendent James Bennett hopes that the first units can be made ready by September, 1952. Funds for beginning construction have been authorized in a county bond issue. First to go up will be classrooms and the heating unit.

The New York educational consultant firm of Englehardt, Englehardt and Leggett has designed the buildings also for use of the community.

BENNETT said the separate building idea grew out of efforts to cut down noise and confusion. Individual one-story buildings are no more costly than large "self contained" schools. They can be built as money is available and as the student body grows to need them. They have the advantage that at any time inexpensive additions can be made without disturbing the rest of the plant. Different materials, suitable to the type of activity to be carried on within the unit, can be incorporated into each building.

Dr. Stanton Leggett of the consultant firm sees the trend in schools away from one large building toward the separate unit idea.

The New Gregg

THE new simplified version of Gregg shorthand may cut from two to six weeks off the standard 36 to 48 weeks necessary to turn out accomplished secretaries, according to Mrs. Adria B. Lynham, director of the Washington School for Secretaries.

When the new Gregg was introduced last summer teachers had some question that students would be able to gain as much speed as under the standard method, Mrs. Lynham said.

The new Gregg requires the writing of longer outlines but reduces memory work.

The first group of students trained in the new method now are completing their studies at the school. Students are taking shorthand faster than ever before.

Twenty-year-old Miss Blanche McGraw, 1630 U st. se., is the school's number one example of the effectiveness of the new method.

She completed the course last week with a speed of 140 words a minute after 35 weeks of training. The best students had been able to do previously was 120 words in 36 weeks.

German Scholarships

FOR the first time since before the war scholarships to German universities are available to Americans.

In appreciation of the Army's program of bringing German students to study in American universities, the Bavarian Ministry of Education and Culture has set up six one-year graduate fellowships available May 1. Recipients will be admitted to schools in Bavaria and in addition to tuition will receive about $50 a month for living expenses.

No restrictions have been set on the field of study but medical and science facilities are heavily overtaxed in Bavarian schools. Best opportunities are for students in the fields of the social sciences and humanities.

Requirements include a bachelor's degree, knowledge of German, a good academic record and United States citizenship.

The Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th st., New York, will make preliminary selection with final decision left to the Bavarian Ministry of Education and Culture.

One hundred and sixteen German students now are studying in universities in this country under the Department of the Army's educational program for occupied countries.

Ad Club to Hold Arts Show

A commercial art and photo show for artists in the metropolitan area of Washington will be held in the Corcoran Gallery April 7 to 23. It will be sponsored by the Advertising Club of Washington.

Purpose of the show is to stimulate competition among professional artists in the commercial field.

There will be six eligible classifications of work: Color illustrations, black and white illustrations, cartoons, color photographs, black and white photographs, design or complete unit.

Work exhibited will be confined to that reproduced during 1949 and created by commercial artists and photographers residing in the metropolitan area of Washington, i.e., the District of Columbia, Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax counties, Va.; Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Md.

There will be four awards in each of the six classifications, a first-place citation and three "distinctive merit certificates," making a total of 24 awards.

Winners will be selected prior to the opening of the show at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Presentation of the certificates will be made at the Advertising Club luncheon in the Statler Hotel on Tuesday, April 11.

Jokes Don't Bother Jane

after one look at that picture. With her first salary check, she made a down payment on a new Ford:

"You might say I drove home in my first check from Howard Hughes."

Nothing quite like Jane Russell has happened to show business since Jean Harlow—she has learned to sing, she can hold her own on stage with Bob Hope, she could act if she could find a part like Jane Russell, she will be a top star, she has no conceit, and she is completely untouched by ballyhoodlums who have handled her careers:

"It's just as though it were happening to somebody else—the gags and the pin-ups—I'm sorta like an ostrich with my head in the sand."

Cold Feet

JANE RUSSELL, physically, is a match for her football star husband, Bob Waterfield of the Los Angeles Rams—but she is haunted by one shortcoming:

"I have cold feet! No—not my nerve, my feet! At first, I figured it was because my feet were so far from the rest of my body—no way I could keep them warm. But when I got married, I got worried—my cold feet annoy the Old Man at night!"

And then she dropped her voice to Pinza-basso to imitate Bob Waterfield's midnight bellow of protest:

"Hey! Don't get those frozen clodhoppers near me!"

Stamp Program

Postmaster General Donaldson on Tuesday announced the 1950 stamp program. In addition to stamps already announced and issued, there will be nine others, thus completing the year's program. Of the nine stamps announced, four are to be issued in connection with the Washington Sesquicentennial as follows: Statue of Freedom, the Executive Branch of the Government, the Judicial Branch and the Legislative Branch. The other stamps are: Honoring the Railroad Engineers of America, Gateway to the West—Midwest Centenary, Boy Scouts of America, Indiana Territory Sesquicentennial and California Statehood. The descriptions, places and dates of first-day sales will be announced later.

2 D. C. Girls Make Phi Beta Kappa At Chambersburg

Chambersburg, Pa. — Two Washington area girls have been elected to the Wilson College chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

MARY

They are Miss Frances E. Bolgiano, daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Bolgiano, 6912 Eighth st. nw., and Miss Mary I. Stephens, 2818 Bradley blvd., Chevy Chase. Both are seniors.

Election of 11 seniors and two juniors to the national honorary scholastic organization was announced at a special chapel service. Initiation will take place April 26, with Dr. William Hastings, professor of English at Brown University and a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Senate, delivering the oration.

Miss Bolgiano, a graduate of Calvin Coolidge High School, is majoring in sociology, with psychology her allied subject. Miss Stephens, a Sidwell Friends School graduate, is studying for honors in English. Her allied subject is mathematics.

Children Receive Music's Charm

make them laugh or shiver just a little bit.

They applaud with the fresh enthusiasm of those to whom some of the world's greatest artistic achievements have just been made known. Unlike their more staid fathers and mothers, they seldom think of sitting on their hands.

Their minds are open to all the music they hear. They no more shrink from something new than they do from Beethoven or Handel. They know that what they are hearing is good and that is enough for them.

In the National Symphony Orchestra's current drive for funds for next season, there are plans for children's concerts. Washington businessmen, with the help of its schools and radio facilities, will help bring more music to more children.

Your own contribution to the orchestra will make these concerts possible in the entire schedule of the orchestra. Few contributions could do more for the moral and spiritual health and welfare of an entire community.

Wellesley To Honor 11 On March 17

WELLESLEY, Mass.—Wellesley College will confer honorary degrees on 11 women at the seventy-fifth anniversary convocation on March 17 at which Miss Margaret Clapp will be inaugurated as Wellesley's eighth president. Archibald MacLeish, Boylston Professor of English at Harvard and former Librarian of Congress and Assistant Secretary of State, will deliver the principal address.

At a luncheon following the convocation, three of those to receive degrees, Mildred McAfee Horton, former president of Wellesley and wartime director of the WAVES; Dr. Connie M. Guion, a Wellesley alumna who is chief of the General Medical Clinic of the New York Hospital-Cornell University Medical Center, and Mme. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, India's Ambassador to the United States and mother of two Wellesley alumnae, will speak.

Three others to be awarded honorary degrees are Wellesley alumnae: Miss Belle Sherwin of Cleveland, a founder and former president of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt of New York City, the first woman elected to Congress from the State of New York; Mrs. William Crawford White of New York City, president of the Wellesley Alumnae Association.

Other distinguished women who will be honored are: Miss Tilly Edinger, research paleontologist of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard and a pioneer in the field of paleoneurology; Miss Esther Forbes of Worcester, Mass., whose Paul Revere and the World He Lived In won the Pulitzer prize in American history in 1942; Miss Dorothy Fosdick, only woman member of the policy planning staff of the State Department; Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick, New York Times foreign correspondent and the first woman to receive a Pulitzer prize in journalism; Miss Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics at Vassar college and the only woman member of the American Delegation to the United Nations Conference at Bretton Woods.

Wellesley has conferred honorary degrees only rarely and on special occasions, having granted a total of ten in the course of its entire 75 years.

Baby It's Col—(Oops, we almost used a threadbareism there). The scene is Connecticut College for Women at New London. The lassies, all Washington area girls, are, left to right, Barbara Wiegand of 3056 Ellicott st. nw., Barbara West, 3206 Klingle rd. nw., and Patricia G. Ahearn of 1724 Hampden Lane, Bethesda

Fishing Derby Starts April 10 At Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — The Lake Hamilton Playground Association, an organization composed of citizens who live on the shores of Lakes Catherine and Hamilton, in co-operation with the Senior Chamber of Commerce, will stage a fishing derby in April, according to Bill Miller, association president and derby chairman.

The dates are April 10-22 inclusive.

The sponsors will offer prizes totaling $4500 in cash and merchandise, with daily awards.

Miller said there will be three merchandise prizes valued at $50 each given away every day during the contest, except on Derby Day, the grand finale of the contest, when four prizes will be awarded.

These include a $1000 cash prize to the angler taking the largest black bass, and valuable boating craft to the participants taking the largest white bass and the largest crappie. Still another major prize to be awarded that day will go to the one catching the largest black bass prior to Derby Day.

Wednesday, April 12, and Wednesday, April 19, have been set aside exclusively as out-of-state anglers' fishing days.

The Arkansas Fish and Game Commission recently legalized year round fishing in the Catherine and Hamilton lakes, noted for their bass and crappie.

Visas Issued Direct To Egypt Tourist

Cairo, Egypt.—Egyptian Consulates are authorized to issue visas direct to tourists wishing to visit Egypt, without referring to the Ministry of Interior.

Also, in-transit visitors may stay in Egypt up to 72 hours without a visa, or longer by obtaining a one-week visa at their port of call.

Egyptian authorities will issue collective visas to group tours who plan to remain in Egypt only as long as their planes or ships lay over.

Another Book About Places to Eat (In)

By Orval Hopkins

IT ISN'T every week that I have the opportunity to go intellectual and review a book, but this is one of them, so stand by. The book is entitled "Hillsway, the Best Places to Eat and Stay in the U. S. A.", by a man named Roland L. (I Recommend) Hill. It starts out with a picture of Hill and says he is also the author of "Living the Life of Rolly," "I Recommend," "In Minnesota I Recommend," "In Long Beach I Recommend," "In Las Vagas I Recommend" and "For Bachelors Only." Hill is patently trying to hide his light under the bushel.

Also at the front of the book is a "Publisher's Note," signed by The Publisher. Since the publisher is Hillsway Co., 1620 E. 2d st., Long Beach, Calif. (also Hill's winter address), this amounts to an encomium from Hill about Hill. Then there's a "suggestion" from the author. It asks that at whatever place you stop you urge the proprietor to "buy and hang my I Recomend This Place sign out in front. . . ." Next there's a "Letter from the author to the reader" (it takes quite a while to get into the book), which starts out, "Guide books will come and guide books will go," and in which Hill pays tribute to his father.

Other than this it's rather a routine guide book with listings of towns and the hostelries and places Hill speaks for.

Easily the outstanding item in the book is a resounding one, on page 96, in which Hill hauls off and slugs the car he drives. He mentions the make of the car (something I'm certainly not going to do), the name of the manufacturing firm, and generally gives the whole outfit a going over, concluding, "I am stuck with driving a car I do not like and one that I cannot recommend."

A SPECIAL flight over and around the city will be conducted today at 10:30 by United Airlines for members of the press and some other people. The flight will have a Hawaiian motif and will be made in one of UAL's fancy new Boeing "stratocruisers." They asked me to go along and it was kind of them, but I am chastising the children this morning at 10:30.

SHAKESPEARE Conference tours combined with motor coach trips through Europe at prices ranging from $545 to $898 are available through Mrs. W. B. Blackburn, 100 Wellington rd., Alexandria, Va. The trips are of two types, student tours and general tours, and both include short periods of residence in selected colleges at Oxford and Cambridge.

MONAVEEN, an 8-year-old horse owned jointly by the Queen and Princess Elizabeth, is one of the favorites for the Grand National, to be run March 25 at Aintree, according to the British Travel Association.

A NEW season will be started by the Tides Inn at Irvington, Va., on April 6. Ennolls A. Stephens, the owner, again will operate the inn personally and will be on hand to greet everybody.

So. Carolina, Virginia to Open Homes

Historic homes will be open to the public in South Carolina and Virginia this spring, reports the American Express Travel Service, which tells how these homes, still lived in, represent some of the finest examples of Old World architecture and heritage. Historic Charleston Foundation will sponsor the opening of approximately 20 private homes between March 15 and April 15.

The Garden Club of Virginia will sponsor Garden Week April 22 to 29. This statewide garden exhibit will offer more than 150 private homes, estates and plantations in addition to 100 public shrines. Dogwood is Virginia's State flower and its profusion is shown best in April.

In Charleston many of these homes sit sideways to the street with their long plazas and charming formal gardens bespeaking the culture of the old South of yesteryear. They cover the first century of Charleston and date from 1712 to 1822. Seventy-five of these homes were built before the Revolution, and their age and stately appearance is manifested in the Rhett residence built in 1712.

Charleston's spring claim to fame is her celebrated garden bloom of wisteria and azaleas, which each year bring thousands to see the Magnolia Gardens on the Ashley River, the Middleton Plantation Gardens, and the fantastic Cypress Gardens, which nature has made an enchanted forest.

For Children, Too

Two 18-hole golf courses, 23 tennis courts and nearly two miles of ocean beach are maintained by the City of Miami Beach for the use of vacationers and residents. Supervised playground areas also are provided for children of all ages.

Get the Yanks, Says Lady Astor

LONDON (U.P.). — Virginia-born Viscountess Astor urges Britons to lure American tourists to this country by emphasizing British history and culture. Those who want wine, women and song will go to Paris anyway, she argued.

In a letter to the Times, Lady Astor, who, as she has grown older has become increasingly critical of unseemly gaiety and glamor, said that Americans come here mainly for Britain's "historical, literary and family associations."

"They really do want (or like) iced water, clean milk, good coffee and good cooking," Lady Astor wrote. "They do miss their drug stores, and if you had seen then you would too. But these are not essential."

2-Week Tour to Egypt

OLYMPIC NATIONAL PARK
Crowned by 8,150-foot Mt. Olympus, this wilderness area is a haven for elk, deer and a variety of wild life. Bursts of flowers bright-en foot trails, and many glaciers still glisten on the peaks of heavily-forested mountains.

PORTLAND
On the rail route to California, this City of Roses is one of the beauty spots of the West. Far-famed is million-dollar Timberline Lodge, one mile up on snow-crested Mt. Hood. Nearby is mammoth Bonneville Dam on beautiful Columbia River Highway.

VANCOUVER AND VICTORIA, B.C.
A few-hours' steamer trip bridges a bit of the old world and the new—picturesque, brightly-flowered Victoria with its old-English manner, and bustling, growing industrial Vancouver, principal Canadian city in the West.

Two Acres of Paradise to Bloom at Armory

National Garden Show to Open On March 23

SPRING ABLOOM will burst upon Washington, regardless of weather antics, when the Twenty-sixth National Flower and Garden Show opens March 23 at the National Guard Armory, continuing through March 29.

Coming for the first time to the Capital, this nationally famous event will inaugurate the celebration of Sesquicentennial year with a gigantic pageant of flowers.

Mrs. Harry S. Truman is honorary chairman of the show, and the spectators and exhibitors converging on Washington to attend the exhibition will represent a cross-section of the whole nation.

Sponsored perennially by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists on a non-profit basis, the National Flower and Garden Show is held to promote the education of the general public and members of the floral industry in floricultural and ornamental horticultural developments and in their application to everyday living. Proceeds are applied to scholarships in floriculture and ornamental horticulture at colleges and universities.

From All Over World

A MILLION DOLLARS worth of flowers, gathered from all parts of the world, will be used to transform the armory into a 2-acre garden of paradise, laid out by celebrated horticultural architects and floral artists under the personal direction of Landscapist Boris V. Timchenko.

From a centerpiece of azaleas, hyacinths and narcissus, bordered with masses of Holland tulips, paths spreading on every side will lure garden lovers, camera hobbyists and amateur "green thumbers," as well as commercial experts, to scenes of breathtaking loveliness. Four spring gardens—a rose garden, a camellia garden, a boxwood and a waterwheel garden—have been designed to focus interest on both formal and informal treatments of garden space. The rustic waterwheel garden, entered by Boston growers, is screened with 30-foot evergreens sheltering hardy outdoor perennials which grow around a reflecting pool, their bright hues turning the crystal waters into an artist's color-splashed palette.

Among hundreds of exhibits of growing and cut flowers, rose fanciers will find a superb display of summer roses, starring the new varieties, Fashion, Golden Sceptre and the vibrant red rose named Happiness. Giant carnations, large-flowered snapdragons and dozens of varieties of orchids, both jungle and cultivated specimens, catalogue only a few of the myriad floral species being nursed to perfection by the country's top exhibitors who are competing for $25,000 in prizes.

Exhibitors include associations, cut flower specialists, individual nurserymen and landscape artists as well as private cultivators. Commercial space is limited to the side walls, where the trade will show the latest in seeds, garden tools, garden clothes, new tractors, and so on.

The Garden Clubs of Washington, Virginia and Maryland will occupy one-sixth of the floor space. The executive committee, with Mrs. Emmanuel Perry, chairman, has scheduled 56 classes of entries, built around the Sesquicentennial theme.

New Exhibits Each Day

VARIATIONS on the central theme will be shown by the Garden Clubs each day. Entirely new arrangements with different flowers will illustrate the specific theme for each day. Some of the subjects are: "Washington Merry-Go-Round," "Metropolitan Highlights," "On the Hill," "Spring Galaxy," "The Focal Point," "Point of View," "The Observer." Table sets for every conceivable occasion will be shown. They range from a Congressional dinner, a Capital hostess' dinner table and a bachelor girl's modern table arrangement to a children's birthday party, a stag supper, a bride's first dinner party, a midnight supper, an Easter Sunday family dinner and various outdoor sets.

Roses Are Distinctive as Shrubbery, Too

GARDENERS who limit their rose enthusiasm to the hybrid tea, floribunda and climbing roses do not realize what they are missing. Engrossed in the beauty of these garden types, they are inclined to lose sight of the various kinds which should be considered shrubs rather than roses because they serve well in foundation and general garden plantings.

In their way they are as beautiful as any of the others but they surpass them in landscaping value. They do not need special soil preparations and, in fact, give best results if grown in average soil too poor for thrifty growth of the average run of shrubs.

Occasionally they are a little slower in becoming established. That does not mean they need greater care after transplanting, but they usually require a year to respond with a full flower display. After that they bloom profusely year after year without the need of exact pruning and their vigor makes them less susceptible to the diseases commonly associated with roses.

The Father Hugo rose (Rosa hugonis) seems to fit especially well into first place because it is one of the earliest roses to come into bloom. It is a delightful Chinese species with single, light-yellow flowers measuring 2½ inches across. They are borne singly all along lengthy arching canes thickly set with prickles and bristles. The plant is a magnificent sight early in May and again in August when the rich scarlet fruits have reached maturity. It grows 6 feet tall and almost as broad.

Asiatic Type

ROSA RUGOSA from northern China, Korea and Japan and its hybrids provide appealing shades of pink and red, as well as white, set against a dense growth of tough, glossy, more or less wrinkled foliage. The plants have stout stems covered with bristles and prickles and are exceptionally hardy. There are varieties with single and double flowers, and they average 6 feet in height. They bloom from May until September and are just the right type of material to take the place of some of the greatly overworked shrubs found in most landscape work. In addition to their glorious flower display, they bear attractive, large flattened fruits during the fall.

F. J. Grootendorst is one of the better known rugosa hybrids. It has small double, slightly scented bright red flowers arranged in large, showy clusters. The gracefully serrated petal edges give it some resemblance to carnations. It is one of the most persistent of all everblooming roses. Add to this unusual hardiness, disease resistance and attractive, dark green foliage and you have a plant which does not have to take second place in any shrub border.

Pink Grootendorst is a splendid companion of identical habit and beauty and some even like it better on account of its cheerful bright pink flowers.

Another delightful shrub rose with a strong tendency toward long, arching and even climbing branches is rosa multiflora. Its graceful, thick branches of small, bright red fruits in the fall and early winter are even more treasured for indoor displays. It is an ideal plant where a long fence requires a finishing touch which must not run into too much money. Bird lovers should plant it freely, not only as food but for the dense growth which encourages birds to stay in the garden.

Scotch Rose Fragrant

THE original Scotch rose (Rosa spinosissima) is the sweetest scented of all wild roses. Use it where a dense and attractive shrub of 3 or 4-foot height is needed. Its stems are thickly covered with bristles and spines and the small,

It Looks Like a Big Year For Garden Club Shows

By Katherine Pozer

WITH the National Flower Show as the highlight of the year's exhibits, garden clubs are making many plans for later local shows.

Owners of small city properties will have many opportunities to see small gardens at their best. First at the National Flower Show March 23-29 at the National Guard Armory, and later when the gardens of Georgetown and nearby regions are open for tours. At the show, gardens of many types are being planned by local garden clubs, whose members will establish in the Armory small gardens suitable to various periods of architecture.

Flower arrangement will be seen at its best in the hundreds of arrangements, fresh each day, being planned by garden clubs for the National Show. Classes will include arrangements for every mood and taste as well as every type of house decoration and coloring.

Local Shows

FOLLOWING the national event will come shows given by local clubs. Both the Woodridge Garden Club and the Takoma Horticultural Society will have as usual their many shows for individual flowers—the iris, peony, rose, gladiolus, summer annuals and fall fruits and flowers. These clubs are among the oldest in the Washington area. Their exhibits are open to all amateurs, competition at their shows is always of the highest order and the awards given frequently include certificates and medals from national societies.

The return of the Virginia Garden Club's Oaxodil Show to Alexandria has been welcomed by daffodil enthusiasts in the Washington area. This show has been held annually for 16 years. The new productions are seen from commercial growers from both East and West. The schedule of the show offers many classes in which novices have every chance to show and win.

One of the most valued classes at the show will be the test garden collections. Here will be seen all the new narcissus which have been tested by members of the Garden Club of Virginia. It is the flower grown by the amateur in which the average gardener is most interested. Many are fearful of trying newly advanced productions. With narcissus, many new bulbs are quite expensive and sometimes do not warrant their cost. New productions usually become cheaper in a year or two after introduction and it is well to wait and see how they come out in the amateur exhibits.

We remember looking longingly at the lovely narcissus "Fortune" at a prewar show and finding that the bulb was listed at $25. Now it is within our price range and no less lovely. Another was the famed "Mrs. Backhouse" with its pink coloring. This bulb when first introduced was in the orchid class, but now it and some of its descendants are frequently seen at shows.

Unless one has visited a large narcissus show it will be impossible to visualize the variety of form and coloring of these bulbs. From minute blooms the size of a dime to great tall trumpets as large as teacups, they run through pale yellows to deep golds—clear glistening white—and every combination of narcissus coloring. In recent years the reds and oranges have edged the great frilled cups which are like brilliant poppies.

The wise gardener will make selections from the blooms that will be seen in Alexandria. Order new varieties early, as frequently the new productions run out early in the season. Deliveries will be made in late summer at planting time.

Dates of the Alexandria show are Saturday, April 1 and Sunday, April 2. It will be held in the Alexandria Recreation Center. The show is open to all amateurs.. Schedules may be had from the chairman, Mrs. Benjamin S. Killmaster, 230 S. Arlington Ridge rd., Arlington, Va.

New Azalea Types Ready

H. H. HUME IS A HARDY NEW AZALEA
. . . developed at USDA, Beltsville

TEN new varieties of azaleas, developed in floricultural research under the direction of Dr. E. E. Emsweller at the Agriculture Department Bureau of Plant Industry at Greenbelt, Md., are being nurtured to perfect bloom in time for making a debut at the National Flower and Garden Show.

All the new varieties have double flowers of the hose-in-hose type, in which one corolla appears to be within another. They are much larger than the ordinary azalea blossom, measuring from 1¾ to 2½ inches across. From three to five flowers are borne on a cluster. The delicate, translucent petals range from deep rose tones through varying shades of pink, to pure snow white.

The new azaleas are the products of a 10-year breeding program initiated by the renowned floriculturist, Guy E. Yerkes, in 1940, and carried on by his associate, R. L. Pryor. From a collection of 50,000 seedlings, all but 300 were eliminated during the long research. The 10 new varieties were selected from out this residue for development and are being presented to the public for the first time at the Garden Show.

Four well known and widely grown varieties—Firefly, Snow, Kaempferi and Indica Alba — were used in the parentage of the new azaleas. The Guy E. Yerkes, named for the famous scientist who began the research, is bred from Kaempferi and Snow. It is an unusually attractive garden variety that can be grown in acid soil from New England to the West Coast. It may be forced in the greenhouse with equally fine results. The flowers are salmon pink when they open, fading to paler pink as they mature.

Another of the new azaleas is named for Dean H. H. Hume of the University of Florida College of Agriculture. It has a white flower with a faintly yellowish throat. Especially suited to the climate of the Southeast, it nevertheless can be grown in the proper soils as far West as California. The H. H. Hume also does well in the greenhouse.

In spite of the fragility of their blossoms, azaleas are hardy plants and will bloom year after year without too much coddling. They are decorative indoor plants as well as being favorites with gardeners for achieving massed color effects.

But, like their cousins, the laurel and the rhododendron, azalea flowers are too fragile and delicate to stand up well when cut. So gentlemen, take notice! If you want to "plant" your tribute securely in her home or garden, send your fair lady an azalea. But if you want to "say it with flowers" she can hold in her arms or wear over her heart, stick to roses.

The Guernsey Goes Visiting (Black Tie)

By Aubrey Graves

I HOPE President Truman will understand that no snub was intended. My seat at the dinner party tendered him by the White House reporters was vacant solely on account of the Guernsey.

There I was at 5 p. m., diked out in tuxedo (vintage 1938) and all set to come to town. And then came the complication. Three hundred and sixty-five days in the year and the family milk supply chooses this precise moment to voice her discontent.

Perhaps an extra pail of feed would pacify the lady. But, no sir! Louder and more insistent became her bawl. A passing neighbor, Claude Mahoney, pulled his jeep to a screeching stop and wised me up. There are values in a bovine's life transcending either soybeans or bran, it seems.

"Get her up to Carl Steele's right away, the moo'd music doesn't last long," my better-informed fellow rustic volunteered.

A hectic jurisdictional dispute rips the Fairfax countryside

Mahoney's No Help

WOULDN'T you think Claude would have offered to handle the matter for me, he knowing about such things and I with an imminent date with the President? Not so. He hurried on his way to the crossroads store, "on a mission of top priority importance," he insisted, and left me on the horns of my dilemma.

What to do? Maybe . . . If I hurried up the road . . . there'd still be time for the President's party.

"Steele's gone up to Manassas, but just put her in his pasture and go along," was the best that Neighbor Mahoney could do for me. (Just wait till he wants a plug for his WTOP newscast! Monday through Saturday, 7:30 a. m.)

Believe me, good Fairfax friends, I wasn't putting on city airs, leading the cow up the road in my stuffed shirt and black tie. There simply wasn't time enough to change back and forth—and still make the President's party.

Put her in the pasture I did, in all innocence, unwarned. A big help, this Mahoney. Up from the woods came not ONE snorting suitor, but TWO. For the next 20 minutes I was the busy conciliator, mediator and referee of an exceedingly torrid triangle. Cyrus Ching can never hereafter tell me a thing about jurisdictional disputes.

It seemed certain those two expensive bulls would kill each other, leaving me defendant in a heavy damage suit.

Chip Off the Old Block

MY MIND started racing. Wasn't my Old Man the champeen steer roper of Bell County, Tex., back in 1896! Any reason why I, a chip off the Old Block, shouldn't try to rope one of the eager beavers and get him out of there?

Yes, there certainly was, but I didn't have sense enough to know it.

On the eighth try the rope, unfortunately, DID connect. Ever see the tail of a kite straighten out in a stiff March breeze? That was me. Getting my end of the lariat around a fence post didn't help. The post and a strand of barbed wire joined us in flight. Eventually an apple tree hove into view and there the thwarted romeo was made fast at last.

Then, what did that fickle Guernsey do but decide the WRONG gentleman had been taken out of competition, and proceed over to our apple tree!

Mercifully — if embarrassingly — half the countryside had arrived by this time, including Mahoney, with a keg of pilsener (to be used in his weekend farming, no doubt). The triangle eventually was bisected, the bulls retired peaceably to the woods and a tired matador, in a tattered tuxedo, marched his silent charge back down the road.

Nobody can rent a tuxedo at 6 o'clock on the night of a working press shindy. And that, Mr. President, is why I stood you up.

GARDEN NOTES

Bend and Push

Gardening Will Trim Your Girth

PHYSICAL training? Health, perhaps? You can get all the bending, pushing, pulling and flexing of muscles you need attending a garden daily.

The garden will not give you a bath or a rubdown. You have to do that yourself. But the exercise is out in the open air and sunlight, and there will be something to show for the work.

In addition to the healthy exercise to be gained in taking care of the garden, the produce is essential in a properly regulated diet. Vegetables give vitamins. Every vegetable in the garden is a vitamin plant. It is also a storehouse of mineral salts necessary for maintaining healthy muscles and blood streams.

Bending and stretching over the rows of vegetables is an excellent exercise. It will shrink a midriff in the course of a few weeks. Green vegetables are not fattening and may be consumed without fear of putting on extra poundage.

Green vegetables in the spring are worth gallons of the so-called "spring tonics." The spring tonic was designed to correct deficiencies of diet during the winter months.

Instead of a spring tonic, green vegetables the year around are prescribed for general upbuilding. It is now known that rundown conditions are very often due to lack of vitamins in the diet.

It's Time to Get Out the Pruning Shears

By James H. Beattie

NEARLY all plants develop more branches than they can support, but through the art of pruning we now have exact techniques for many of our fruits, ornamentals and vegetables.

Most home fruit growers prune to accomplish one or all of three purposes, to train plants to desirable shapes, to control the degree and kind of fruitfulness, and as an aid in combatting insects and diseases.

Pruning is most commonly practiced on fruits and ornamentals, but some vegetables, tomatoes for example, are often trimmed and trained to supports. Cucumbers and melons are also pruned and trained to supports, or pruned to reduce the number of fruits and allowed to grow without above-ground supports. Pole lima beans are also pruned to prevent their becoming too thick on the poles or the trellis.

Vital Period

MOST of the home-yard fruits should be pruned, if at all, during the early spring, and the next two or three weeks is the vital period for this work.

Home-yard fruits fall into several classes relative to their pruning treatment. Vigorous pruning is required to keep apple trees within size limits that can be handled by the home gardener and to prevent their becoming tangles of crossed limbs, water sprouts and dead branches.

Peaches require liberal pruning for the same reasons. In addition, they should be pruned each spring to remove about half the bearing wood, otherwise the average peach tree will set far more fruits than it should be allowed to bear.

When to Prune

PLUMS and cherries should be properly trimmed at the time they are planted, after which only very minor pruning to remove occasional dead branches should be practiced. Pears also do best as a rule if pruned very little.

Grapes require systematic, thorough, annual pruning. Without this pruning only nondescript bunches will be borne and disease-control by spraying becomes almost impossible. Blackberries and raspberries are unique because the bearing canes die after the harvest and these should be removed during the late summer or early autumn, surely in the early spring.

Pruning can be done at any time while the plants are dormant. Obviously, this rule does not always apply as, for instance in the case of tomatoes or the vine crops, where the work is done progressively as the plant grows.

With apples and other tree fruits dormant pruning is the practically universal practice, but pruning to some extent at least, can be done at other times without serious consequences to the trees. Because of the added ease with which the work can be done while the trees are bare of leaves, this month is an ideal time to prune. In the case of grapes the work should not be postponed. Late pruning, after growth starts, results in bleeding which may be distinctly injurous to the plant.

Methods of Pruning

THE trimming of the aple tree at planting time, when the branches that will develop into main limbs are selected, is by far the most important part of the operation. Experiments show that apple trees which receive no additional pruning bear a year or two sooner than those that are closely pruned. In most cases it is better to prune moderately each season, thereby keeping the tree in a manageable condition and to wait a year or two longer for the first fruit.

Two-year-old, six to seven-foot trees as received from the nursery have several side branches located at intervals along the top half of the trunk. Select three or four of these branches, the lowest about 10 inches apart and located on different sides of the main stem of the tree. Branches that join the trunk at as nearly right angles as possible should be selected. Sharp angles with the main trunk should be avoided as they would develop "crotches" subject to later splitting.

The selected branches should be cut off near their ends and all others removed close to the stem of the tree. The main stem should be cut off a few inches above the topmost of the selected branches. This type of basic framework will develop into a well-formed tree.

The pruning should be such that the tree is kept reasonably low, and that there be no main or central stem arising to a great height.

Cut Carefully

PRUNING cuts should be carefully made to avoid injury to the tree. For removing the smaller limbs a pair of pruning shears is best. For the larger limbs a curved blade pruning-saw is excellent.

When removing a limb of any considerable size, first "undercut" it on the lower side to avoid splitting or peeling the bark. Cuts should be made at a point where the wound will be small, yet close enough to the trunk so there will be no appreciable stub left on the tree. Cuts, especially the larger ones, should be coated with one of the special paints made for this purpose.

When planted, peach trees should be handled in about the same manner as apples, but being of a smaller habit of growth it is much easier to keep them within reasonable size limits. The pruning is accomplished by entirely removing some of the fruit bud branches and the heading back of the remainder. Don't leave too many fruit buds on the tree.

Grape Trimming

A VIGOROUS grapevine approaches the growing season bearing several times the number of buds required for a heavy crop. Pruning will remove a large proportion of these buds. Buds on last season's wood give rise to branches, each of which will develop two or three bunches of grapes. A grapevine trimmed so that only about 40 of the buds on last season's wood are left will set about 100 bunches of grapes.

How to Avoid Dirtying Mop

MOP TOP is made of 6-oz. canton flannel, slips over the head of any standard size mop, requires no fasteners and is washable. It does the floor dusting and polishing or will clean the walls. It can then be thrown in the laundry, the mop remains clean and the closet spotless. Two tops are packaged in a sealed cellophane envelope which sells for 98 cents (At Hecht's)

Accessories Catch Eyes in Any Room

"A ROOM without accessories, in my opinion, would resemble a jail cell." So says Decorator Dan Cooper, who goes on to say that accessories are "the little objects on which we rest our eyes in any room."

Most decorators would concur in Mr. Cooper's judgment. Nor does it take a trained decorator to recognize the importance of "little objects." Anyone who has moved into a new home knows how barren it looks until the lamps, pictures and small bits of equipment for pleasant living are in their proper places.

Designer Kim Hoffmann believes in using just a few decorative pieces in a room, these of similar type and in the same decorative spirit as the room's other furnishings. He uses ceramic bowls having a rough, unglazed exterior and smoothly glazed interior, in a setting using his own rather massive, but well-proportioned end tables and his straight chairs, covered in a rough-textured fabric handwoven by Ellen Siegel.

Decorator William Pahlmann believes that accessories can add interest to a room by contrasting with its other furnishings, although he, too, emphasizes the importance of keeping ashtrays, lamps and the like in the same spirit as the furniture, whether formal or informal, massive or delicate. The contrast values, he says, may be brought out by color or texture—a touch of bright color to enhance large areas of neutral tones, a rough-textured fabric to set off polished wood.

Accessories, Cooper says, are to be found in most unlikely places, but must be chosen carefully. Describing a group of objects on a tea table, Cooper recalled that he found the French poodle figure in the studio of Gabrielle Jolivet, French sculptress; the bowl for lily leaves in a shop in Chinatown, and the silver ashtray in an Indian settlement.

Bill Pahlmann often gets a group of accessories together and discusses choice with his client

Roving Eye Needed

"EACH item on the table," he explained, "evokes a pleasant memory of a trip or of a person, and makes one remember a pleasant moment in his life."

How can the average homemaker find these all-important accents for her home? Are there rules to follow, or is she on her own?

Here again, there is no one catechism to memorize. Studying a room and its large furnishings carefully is certainly the first step. Acquiring a roving eye, that lights on interesting objects in shops and in other people's homes, is a second step toward acquiring an appreciation of well-designed accessories.

Paper Plates on Walls Decorative as Pictures

Pretty plates can dress up a wall. Often these can be more decorative than oil paintings or prints. But some of us cannot afford to invest in fine pictures and frames or in expensive plates.

Well, then, how about making your own plates? Mrs. Cora Edwin Adkins of Malden, Mo., suggests that you try using ordinary paper picnic plates, giving them an art treatment that will make it difficult to distinguish them from the real thing.

Here is Mrs. Adkins' method: Take de luxe paper dinner plates with a good hard finish. Give the face of the plates a background coat of tempera paint. Designs for the plates can be cut from wall paper and pasted on with rubber cement, mucilage or any ordinary paste. Or you can use decals. The designs can then be retouched with tempera paints.

When dry, the entire plates are sprayed with liquid plastic several times. Hours later they are given a coat of clear, waterproof lacquer or linoleum varnish. A good practice is to apply one coat each day until three coats have been applied. The finishing touch is paste wax buffed to a high gloss.

Mrs. Adkins suggests that you use abstract, floral or scenic designs to form the decoration. You may depict a garden or a bouquet of flowers, duck scenes, butterflies, dogs, cats, or any favorite subject that will fit in with the decor of your home.

Plate rims may be painted a contrasting color or treated to form an antique effect with a sponge dipped in gold paint. Or if you don't care for a border, bring the design out to the rim.

There are lots of tricks you could employ with these paper plates. A talented woman, says Mrs. Adkins, probably could paint her own designs or scenes on plates. Or cord, wool or raffia could be worked back and forth over a paste base to form interesting raised designs. Or even fabric could be cut out in patterns to form various figures and scenes. Felt could be used in this fashion as well. Or dried or artificial flowers could be pasted on to form a garden-like bouquet arrangement.

If you'd like a good catch-all for small items such as buttons, needle and thread, try this:

Use one paper plate for a backing and then cut another in half, reversing the position to form a sort of pocket, covering the bottom half of the whole plate. Then the plates can be fastened together by criss-cross or buttonhole stitch. The whole plate may be decorated with the same stitches, in gay embroidery thread or wool. Or pictures may be pasted on both halves.

Keep Dining Area Separate

By Ann Pringle

I'VE been obsessed lately with thoughts about cooking, serving and eating food, probably because my own arrangements for doing these things seem to work out so sketchily.

One question I'd like to put to anyone who can answer it is: Why do people prefer to eat in the living room rather than the kitchen? Or do they?

I did, or thought I did, but I'm beginning to change my mind. Of course, in a small apartment like ours, with what is laughingly termed an "efficiency" kitchen, we had to put the dining table in the living room. And since this large room lacks wall space and doesn't have any well-defined dining area, the ony reasonable place for the dining table was in front of the window. Our couch and easy chairs are near the window, too. It is the best arrangement we could figure out, but it wasn't very good, especially when we're entertaining.

When dinner is over, and a cup of coffee in quiet surroundings is in order, there is the table in plain sight, full of used plates, silverware and linens. Guests, whom I wish would just settle down and overlook the removal of debris, keep popping up and asking to help. And if extra people drop in before the meal is over the situation becomes impossible, with everyone hurrying to finish food that may have taken hours to prepare.

A dining area that's really an area, separated in some way from the living room and convenient to the kitchen, would solve these problems. So would a large kitchen that provided room for a table and chairs. Personally, I incline to the latter solution. As long as the table isn't too near the stove, I see no objection to its being in the kitchen. Every one knows that food has to be prepared and cooked, and I'd rather dine in plain view of the cooking equipment than be reminded of the whole business as I sit in the living room later on.

Garden Clubs Promise Fine Exhibits

MRS. EMMANUEL B. PERRY, chairman of the garden club section, reports that her committees have virtually completed plans for outstanding exhibits at the National Flower and Garden Show.

Mrs. David D. Gearhart, chairman of the staging committee, reports that the eight model rooms are practically completed. Four rooms will be furnished in traditional 1800 style, with flower arrangements suitable to that period; the other four rooms will portray modern interiors

Many committee members, especially the men of the garden clubs, are busy with carpenter's tools building the niches in which flower compositions will be individually displayed. This niche design will give the effect of an art gallery, each picture created with living flowers and plants.

Mrs. Herbert Greger, chairman of the artistic arrangements, plans to have 78 arrangements shown by exhibitors each day, making 546 exhibits of all types of flowers in novel arrangements

In addition, there will be 16 dining tables each day, attractively set for formal and informal service, with suitable floral decorations. All flower arrangements will be changed and judged each day. Ribbon awards will be made daily in each class.

Mrs. Frank L. Ball, judging chairman, has invited many well-known authorities to be judges. They are coming from Michigan, Georgia, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland.

Mrs. E. E. Brown, in charge of entries, has received long-distance reservations for space from exhibitors in Florida, New York and Pennsylvania, as well as nearby States.

A feature of this section will be the horticulture display of eight model gardens, planned and planted by garden clubs from the metropolitan area.

Mrs. James R. Dawson, chairman of special garden exhibits, has awarded space for gardens to clubs, as follows: Georgetown Garden (1800), to Georgetown Garden Club; Virginia Knot Garden (1800), to All Hallow's Guild; Maryland Cottage Garden (1800), to Silver Spring Garden Club; Woodland Garden (1800), to Neighborhood Garden Club of Arlington; Urban (1950), to Woodridge Garden Club; Spice (flower, herb and vegetable), to Takoma Horticulture Club; Circa, 1953 (ultramodern), to garden section of Belle Haven Women's Club; untamed (1950 naturalized), to Bethesda Community Garden Club.

Competition for awards in the garden class is so keen that each club is keeping final plans in strict secrecy until the opening day, when the judging will take place.

Many women's clubs are planning tours of the show in place of their regular meetings. Granville Gude, local chairman, has sent a block of tickets to a group in northern Pennsylvania which is chartering buses to come to Washington for the event.

Groups of school children will attend the show as part of their educational program. An information booth will be located in the Garden Club Section, staffed by horticultural experts who will give advice on any gardening problems.

tion, will be presented in the manner of the years 1800 and 1950, stressing the Sesquicentennial theme, and contrasting the modes of 150 years ago and those of today.

Ninety garden clubs of the metropolitan area have been invited to participate, as well as the State Federations of Garden Clubs of Maryland and Virginia. Mrs. Luther B. Benton of Baltimore is president of the Maryland Federation and Mrs. Charles F. Peace of Round Bay, Severna Park, is its representative.

Mrs. James V. Adams of Richmond is president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs. Many of the 34 member clubs of the Garden Club of Virginia, of which Mrs. Frank J. Gilliam of Lexington, is president, are sending entries to the national show.

Nearly all classes of entries have now been filled, but a few openings are still available in the table settings classes. Mrs. E. E. Brown, 1362 Hamilton st. nw., will accept applications. Exhibitors need not belong to a garden club to show their arrangements in the Garden Club Section.

Emphasizing the educational objectives of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, the College Section of the Washington executive committee for the show, with Dr. Conrad Link of the University of Maryland, chairman, will be hosts to student teams from 13 leading American colleges and universities which include specialized floricultural schools. These student floriculturists will compete in the flower judging and will be awarded special prizes.

Art students in the District's public, private and parochial junior, vocational and senior high schools have entered approximately 150 posters in the contest. First, second and third prizes will be awarded and the winning poster will be reproduced. A display of the poster entries will be held at the Armory during the week and at Woodward & Lothrop's next week.

Robert H. Roland of Chicago, executive secretary of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, is manager of the show, and S. S. Pennock, jr., of Baltimore, president of the SAFOH, is a member of the national committee. The Washington executive committee, headed by Granville Gude, includes R. Lloyd Jenkins, vice chairman; Mrs. Emmanuel V. B. Perry, Dr. Conrad Link and John Sharper, Richard P. White, Henry Witt, E. F. Harloff, Z. D. Blackistone, Bertrand McGinniss, Joseph S. # Use Roses as Shrubbery, Too rich green foliage is almost fern-like in beauty. The blush-white flowers and red-tipped buds provide an attractive display in May and June.

Harrison's yellow also belongs into the Scotch group. It is an old-time June bloomer with semi-double, mildly fragrant bright yellow flowers. When fully grown, the plants are 6 to 8 feet tall.

A discussion of landscape roses would hardly be complete without mentioning the memorial rosa (Rosa wichuraiana). This is an impressive trailer of exceptional hardiness with great masses of white, 2-inch flowers borne from July to September. The glossy, rich green foliage serves to set them off beautifully and the egg-shaped, bright red fruits, a half-inch in length, add another desirable feature. No more picturesque plant could be chosen for planting atop a wall with the branches trailing over its face.

Max Graf is another good trailer for walls and embankments. The large sprays of single, satiny pink, 3-inch flowers with a mass of golden yellow stamens in the center stand out prominently from the healthy rich green foliage.

Both these trailers also are splendid for covering low fences in a short time if helped along by tying up where needed. They also solve the problem of covering an accumulation of stones dug from the garden area and which so far have defied the disposal problem.

Steps Made of Concrete Will Stand Firm

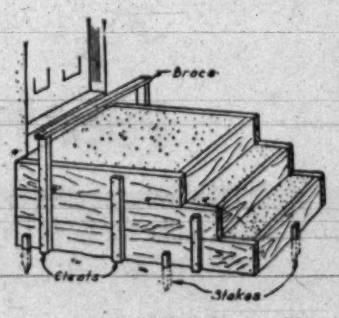
IF your porch has wooden steps that are in poor condition, it may pay you to replace them with new concrete steps rather than undertake repairs. Concrete steps last almost indefinitely and constitute a permanent improvement to a house. They also are safe, since they do not become slippery in wet weather.

Constructing forms for the steps should be easy for anyone handy at farm or household repairs. The simple illustration below gives a clear idea of how it is done.



Either 1-inch or 2-inch lumber is satisfactory for forms. They should be so built that the vertical distance between steps is about 7 or 7½ inches and the tread width of each step is approximately 10 inches. It is important that the forms be laid on ground that is level and firm.

Proper mixture of the concrete is essential. Recommended mixtures may vary with climates, so it is best to follow closely the directions of the cement manufacturer or your dealer. This procedure should produce concrete of a rather stiff consistency and containing sufficient mortar to make a smooth surface. When the concrete has hardened sufficiently in the forms to hold its shape, the forms may be removed. Uneven spots then can be filled and troweled smooth.

A beautiful lawn can be yours at little cost if you follow the simple Scotts LAWN CARE Program. First a meal of TURF BUILDER grass food to renew vigor and color. Next sow Scotts Seed to cover bare spots with luxuriant grass. Do both in a jiffy by hand or with a Scotts Spreader. It costs less than a half-cent per square foot.

Scotts LAWN SEED — Composed entirely of the best perennial grasses. For full sun or moderate shade. Economical because the 3,000,000 seeds in each pound give better results than three times as much coarse, ordinary seed. 1 lb $1.35 5 lbs $6.45.

SPECIAL PURPOSE BLEND is suggested for deep shade, drier soil, terrace, play areas where hardier type of turf is desired. 1 lb $1.15.

TURF BUILDER — Complete grass food provides all nutrients needed for healthy growth. Simply broadcast at the low rate of 1 lb per 100 sq ft. Full meal: to 2500 sq ft $2.50 10,000 sq ft $7.50.

DORIS DAY: a train hit her car . . .

The Turning Point...

SONGTRESS DORIS DAY is a beautiful, freckle-faced blonde with a personality as spontaneous as a Roman candle and a voice like blue silk. She also has an imperturbable conviction that everything happens for the best.

"How could I believe otherwise," she asks, "when the worst break I ever got turned out to be a lucky one?"

Right now she's leading lady on the Bob Hope radio show (NBC), has just finished her fourth movie and turns out recordings regularly. But occasionally she finds time to recall the accident that changed her life.

How She Got Her Name

It happened in her teens when she was still Doris Kappelhoff of Cincinnati. Although her concert artist father wanted his little girl to study piano and violin, Doris yearned to be a dancer. Before she had finished high school, she had won several dancing contests. Then she got a chance to go on tour with a Fanchon and Marco show.

During the tour, the automobile in which Doris was riding collided with a train. Her left leg was badly mangled and it looked as though Doris would never dance again. For 14 months, she lived in hospitals. To keep despair from the door, she started to study voice. By the time doctors pronounced her well enough to walk, her friends were begging her to sing professionally.

So Doris Kappelhoff began all over again at the age of 17. First she sang for free on a local radio station (to get experience); then came dates with big-time bands. One of her song favorites, "Day after Day," provided the inspiration for her adopted, marquee-size name.

Last year, Doris grossed approximately $200,000 from recordings, radio and movies; ardent fans bought over 5 million of her platters. "It couldn't happen to a dancer," she concedes happily.

How not to be afraid: 19-month-old Alan Hedman has fun with dentist's mouth spray.

Don't be afraid of your dentist!

BY KARL KOHRS AND SID ROSS

Freedom from fear

THE LITTLE DARK-HAIRED GIRL in the dental chair gave one final pull on the string tied to her tooth. A minute later she giggled happily, dangling the tooth in front of her.

In the next chair at the clinic, a chubby kid sat absorbed as a dentist polished his tiny fingernails with a rubber-capped drill.

Nearby, four girls in pig-tails followed the dentist's every move as he examined another child's mouth with a mirror.

To two PARADE reporters who saw it recently, this scene at the University of Illinois dental clinic in Chicago was astounding for two reasons: first, the kids seemed to be enjoying themselves hugely, though serious dental surgery was going on at the time—with them as patients. Second, not a single cry of pain could be heard!

That silence meant a lot to dentists at the clinic. It spelled progress in solving one of the profession's most serious problems: pain, and fear of pain.

For when it comes to pain, your dentist is an authority. He knows that dental diseases are the most common known to man, and among the few that aren't self-corrective. A headache will disappear, a cut will heal, but a diseased tooth does only one thing: it gets worse.

Is a Toothache Really Funny?

That's why the dental profession has never been able to figure out why a toothache seems comic.

"Cartoons and wisecracks about the dentist," observes Dr. Edward J. Ryan, himself a dentist and editor of two dental publications, "are more harmful to the public than they are to the dentist. There's nothing funny about a toothache. Pain is a deadly serious matter."

Dental pain, explains Dr. Ryan, is like any other pain. The only difference is that it is particularly influenced by (a) where you are at the time, (b) the people around you, and (c) your physical and emotional condition.

All dentists know that an aching tooth is caused by impulses traveling along nerve pathways to the brain. Yet your own reaction to pain

"YOU PULL IT," says dentist, tying thread to tooth. She pulls as he finishes loosening her bad tooth.

"IT'S OUT!" shouts Phyllis, dangling tooth. Feeling she has helped dentist, she is almost unaware of pain.

"CIGAR" of cotton amuses Phyllis, happy after first tooth extraction. Dentist removed second tooth easily.

is key to U.S. dentists' great new fight against pain...

in your tooth often makes it worse. You try to defend yourself against the pain by tensing your body, or grimly clutching the arms of the chair—but nothing helps!

Three other factors, says Dr. Ryan, are important: what you feel, think, and remember about pain. In other words, fear of pain is just as real as the pain itself.

A child, for example, who has never had a toothache, has never felt a drill, or has never heard adults talk about these things, will be uncertain about them—but not afraid.

Dr. Ryan insists that a frightened child somehow has been conditioned in advance.

But how can a child avoid the sort of "preconditioning" which gives him an instinctive fear of dental surgery when he's still banging a triangle in nursery school?

Right there is where the extraordinary work at the Illinois College of Dentistry comes in. Dr. Maury Massler, supervisor of dental services at the College, explains that the whole object of the clinic where youngsters play with drills is to make them think of dentists as their friends, and of dentistry as a normal form of treatment.

That's why the Illinois dentists begin with youngsters of from two to four.

First they come with their mothers, who need treatment. While the dentist works, the children sit nearby, drink up the water, fiddle with the drills and inspect the X-ray machines.

This may sound unimportant. It's not. It means that long before the child himself needs treatment, he's overcome his fear of dentistry. And that means that he won't let fear magnify the twinges of pain he'll feel when his own cavities need drilling.

By the time that child is five or six—and after a half-dozen visits with his mother or father—the dentist has a patient who regards him not as an ogre but a pal.

And that, dentists believe, is the key to the problem. For all too often the fear that starts in childhood causes adults to delay treatment until it is too late.

GIRL who thinks "it will hurt" cringes in the chair even though the dentist makes only a simple examination.

New Methods Banish Pain

Important as the work at Illinois is, it's not the only thing America's 75,000 dentists are doing to rid patients of anguish.

First of all, the newest local anesthetics are astonishingly effective. Combining these anesthetics with sedative drugs, such as demerol, helps relax the patient and relieves tension.

Also used are barbiturates, taken by mouth, and injections of Sodium Pentothal.

Heat, vibration and sound are the chief physical sources of dental pain. Dentists find that if they can cut down frictional heat in drilling, they can cut down pain.

Recently, they've developed a new instrument that delivers a fine spray of water at body temperature during drilling. The spray helps "mask" the noise and vibration of the drill, and seems to reduce nerve irritation.

New instruments with extremely sharp, hard points reduce cutting time on the tooth. Carbide tungsten and diamond burrs keep down the temperature of the tooth.

An instrument with a great promise is the "Airbrasive." The cutting agent is an aluminum oxide, delivered under pressure through a tiny nozzle as in sandblasting. This instrument, however, is still being tested.

Does this add up to painless dentistry?

Dentists Are People, Too

Not yet. The prime objective, dentists say, is not conquest of pain but conquest of fear. Drs. Ryan and Massler both believe that all dentists should devote time to dental education of the patient, beginning with the child. Kids ought to be taught that dentists are friendly people, and that their art is a healing one, not a form of torture.

They also believe that parents have their own responsibility. A child can't fight fear alone. His parents must show him how.

"We can develop the most wonderful techniques in the world," says Dr. Massler, "but if our patients are afraid of them, they'll never be of any use. We don't want that to happen."

Dentists ask public to help in fighting pain

DR. EDWARD J. RYAN

"Dental pain is a complicated thing," says Dr. Edward J. Ryan, editor of two dental publications, "but the dental profession is not callous. We are trying to do something about it. We want to tell people what we can do and what we can't do.

"Perhaps we'll never succeed in having 'painless dentistry.' But by properly educating Americans—who, at some point in their lives, will wind up in the dentist's chair—we will go a long way toward that goal. Above all, we need your cooperation."

Pennies, old shirts, rocks—they all crop up in the income tax collector's mail.

Infernal Revenue!

The Treasury collects insults as well as taxes

By PAUL D. GREEN

NEXT Thursday, March 16, the country's 64 Collectors of Internal Revenue will be swamped with millions of income tax returns. If everything goes as usual, thousands will be accompanied by sundry sultry cracks at the Collectors as John Q. Public shakes loose the dollars.

Past examples, culled from mailbags all the way down the line from New York's big 13th District ($1,000,000,000 in taxes) to Burlington, Vt., with its $20,000,000, have included everything from poems to toupees ("You scalped me!").

With his back to the wall and his pockets turned inside out, even the mildest of taxpayers breaks out in sarcasm. The harassed Collectors expect almost everything.

Hundreds of letters, as usual, will come in angrily addressed to "Collector of Infernal Revenue," or "Eternal Revenue." At least two dozen shirts, or parts of them, will be forwarded with notes saying, "You took it off my back!" And there will be at least one hundred assorted stones reading, "Squeeze blood out of this!"

To make the Collector's life a little harder, checks will be made out in disappearing ink, dated a year ahead, drawn on non-existent banks, or colored several shades of blue. Dozens will be addressed to "Uncle Sam, the Biggest Crook of All." At least one man (he has been doing it for years) will send his three-figure tax in the form of bags of pennies, nickels, and dimes that will have to be laboriously counted.

If you think you have a brand new alibi for not paying, don't be too sure. Almost all Collectors have a private museum of old ones. A typical example, written in '47, was this little gem:

"I have no money with which to pay,
A little baby is on the way;
The doctor charged me more than you,
There's nothing more that I can do.
Please grant me 30 days of grace,
And to you the money I will race;
Thank you for the understanding,
Here's wishing the baby a happy landing."

With Some, It's a Party Matter

Hundreds of die-hard Republicans protest each year against paying money to a Democratic administration. During Republican administrations, it's the same story with the Democrats. Worse, there are cities with whole neighborhoods which seem to believe that March 15th was chosen as part of a British scheme to spoil the spirit of St. Patrick's Day on March 17!

"Evidence! You want proof?"

One of the most forthright alibis came from a St. Louis woman who wrote: "My husband's sudden passing away last Thursday makes it necessary to request a few days to get a man to replace him. This may take a week or two if I'm lucky."

The real fun comes from the personal jousts between tax-payer and auditor, when payment is insufficient. "Whatsa this Surtax?" telephoned one irate Philadelphian. "I refuse-a to pay Sewertax. Da water is bad!"

A dishwasher in Los Angeles, angry because the Collector didn't believe he had ten children, took them to the office and lined them up like organ pipes. "If they're not dependable," he yelled, "I'll pay double! Wadda you want?"

All the Collector wants is your money. But even this simple fact confuses a surprising number of taxpayers. One Dallas, Tex., taxpayer wrote: "Why haven't I received my income tax returns? Please send a check immediately!"

Nor is this unusual. Many taxpayers profess ignorance and demand that they receive the government's check for their income tax "return" which they think means a refund.

A plant worker was asked by an agent, "Was all your income from salary?" "No," was the reply. "It's from Chattanooga."

Another man brought a sheet along to help the tax man. On it he listed: "Income and Outcome."

Hubby Wasn't Happy

One garrulous woman let slip how much money her husband made as a farmhand. She was told to bring the check in next day for the tax. When she did, she was sporting a black eye.

A Philadelphia woman handed an agent her W-2 form and looked puzzled. "I don't understand that deduction for the F.I.T.," she said. "I never had a fit in my life. The agent had a tough time explaining that it meant Federal Income Tax.

Another agent asked a man who did not bring his W-2 form: "What is your withholding amount?" "I don't withhold anything," he said indignantly. "My wife gets it all."

It's pretty hard to believe it but Assistant Collector Redmond I. Prindiville of Chicago actually got a check for $3,400 from a man whose total year's income he had just figured out came to precisely that amount!

And James W. Johnson, head of New York's Third District, still laughs when he tells of the befuddled individual who came in one day, had his return computed, paid it—while under the influence. Next day he was back again to pay his tax, having forgotten the previous payment.

One chap wrote so many letters concerning his refund that he finally wrote: "In your next letter you can call me 'Dear Joe.' I feel we know each other by now."

Many taxpayers apparently believe the worst about how far collectors will go to track down delinquents. One superstitious Montana rancher, who expected to die, sent a check for back taxes with a letter which read: "I want to die knowing that my tax is paid in full. I don't want my peace disturbed by any Internal Revenue man!"

SOMETIMES YOU CAN'T WIN!

CONSIDER THE EXPERIENCE of Lt. G. N. Armstrong of Dallas, Tex., commander of an LCI firing rockets to support the invasion of Iwo Jima. After three days of action, a battleship flashed a blinker message to the hard-fighting LCI: "We have mail for you."

As the tiny craft drew alongside the battlewagon, the entire crew looked on. A leather pouch was passed over the side and Armstrong grabbed it eagerly. He opened it on the spot, and pulled forth a single letter. It read: "Payment of $9.23 requested for your 1943 Income Tax. (Signed) Collector of Internal Revenue." It's a wonder we won the war.

intrepid frostbite fleet sails on

THE AUDIENCE IS ALSO COLD

THE FIVE SHIVERING seamen pictured above belong to America's chilliest sailing club: the Frostbite Fleet of Long Island Sound.

Frostbite—or Dinghy—sailing was born in 1932, the outgrowth of a barroom argument two skippers had on the relative merits of their craft. The following winter a regatta was held and today, if you share the fortitude of the Frostbite sailors, you may watch them race their tubby little boats up and down the Sound every Sunday afternoon from New Year's Day through April 1.

The races usually begin at 1:30 p.m. and continue until 4. Courses of about one-half to three-quarters of a mile are laid out and may be either windward and leeward or triangular, depending on the wind.

Snow, sleet, extremely low temperatures and ice on the Sound will keep the frostbite fleet in drydock but, given any kind of a break in the weather, the average dinghy skipper will spend three hours with the fleet every Sunday.

"It's cold out there," one of them admitted recently, "but it's the best way I know to kill an afternoon."

STARTER'S gun goes off for first race at 1:30 but often casual skippers ignore it, wait for second race.

AT DAY'S END, Westport skippers meet at Cedar Point Yacht Club, sip chowder, tell each other yarns.

ON ANY LARGE sheep ranch, lambing time is always accompanied by tragedy. Despite handlers' vigilance, a small handful of ewes and new-born lambs always die. These deaths pose a problem: What to do with the motherless lambs? No ewe will blindly accept a baby lamb unless she thinks it is her own. But ranchers have their own solution. THE STOCKING, a British nobleman once asserted, is not nearly so important as what fills it. However, the French lately have been investing hosiery with more glitter and glamor than some of their fancy gowns. DO NOT waste oil from tuna. Use it as part of the fat in making white sauce base for recipe.

MEASURE liquid from mushrooms. Add can of evaporated milk, enough water for 3 cups.

TOASTBASKETS: remove crusts from loaf. Cut in 2-in. slices. Hollow. Brush with butter, toast.

Tuna Toastbaskets

Oil from tuna
2 tbsp. butter or margarine
⅓ cup flour
1 teaspoon paprika
Few grains pepper
1 tall can evaporated milk
Liquor from mushrooms
1 cup water (about)
2 7-oz. cans tuna
6 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
1 6-oz. can broiled mushrooms
¼ teaspoon each rosemary and savory
6 croustades

Pour oil from tuna into top of double boiler; add butter; melt. Blend in flour, paprika and pepper. Combine evaporated milk, liquor from mushrooms, and enough water to make 3 cups; add. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Add tuna, eggs, mushrooms, herbs and salt. Cover. Cook over hot water 15 minutes. Serve in croustades. Yield: 6 servings.

Gadgets and new ideas galore for your hobby, home and workshop . . .

By PETER DRYDEN

GOLDEN TOUCH: Now you can gild trays, lamp shades, books, glassware, walls, other household articles with real 23 karat gold—and for only pennies. Gold film is available on a special decal transfer sheet that can be cut into strips or any desired pattern or shape. Applied directly to wood, glass, leather, metal or almost any smooth surface, it dries in a day and does not tarnish. Cost is 1¢ per square inch, so an average 9" x 12" x 2" picture frame, for instance, can be gilded for less than one dollar.

You can gild with 23 karat gold.

* * * *

FRESH AND TASTY: Slip a new humidifying device into your breadbox or cookie jar, and you can eliminate dryness, mildew and mold, keep your bread and pastry fresh longer. Odorless and harmless, the humidifier is 4" long, 1¾" wide, 1⅝" high, costs 98¢ and lasts for an indefinite time.

Keeps bread, pastry fresh.

* * * *

NEATER IN LESS SPACE: Plastic hanger holds four garments in a 5" area, keeps them free of wrinkles. It hangs trousers or skirts at full length and you can remove any garment without disturbing others. Metal hooks fold up flat for traveling. Price: $1.98.

Four garments in a 5" area.

* * * *

NO BLANKETS NEEDED: If baby kicks his blankets off or you worry about his getting tangled in them, this over-sleeper garment will help solve your problem. It's two-piece, made of Nylon, and goes on over regular sleeper or gown. A cushion of warm air forms between under and over-garment so baby is kept comfortable without need for blankets or other covering. Progressive sets of grippers at waist permit enlarging girth, and others at feet allow lengthening as baby grows bigger. Garment washes, dries quickly, and it requires no ironing or shaping.

STICK-ON RULER adheres wherever you want it – on workbench, sewing machine, tackle box. Of durable, cellulose tape, five 12-inch rulers come in compact roll with adhesive on back, cost 39 cents . . . IF YOU OWN AN OLD RIFLE (G. I. Enfield, Springfield or "liberated" German Mauser), you can replace military trigger action with sporting and target type speedlock trigger mechanism that makes Enfield cock on opening, gives all three a speed action and short smooth pull ($12.50) . . . FUR FLOWERS including orchids are available now in mink, ermine, beaver, etc., for daytime, evening wear, on dresses, suits, coats, hats, in the hair. They can be worn for years, cost from $3 to $15.

NOTE: Prices quoted above are approximate, may vary somewhat in different localities. Send no money to PARADE. For names and addresses of manufacturers, send inquiries with stamped, self-addressed envelope to Parade of Progress, PARADE, 405 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Handsomest Prince

IN ROYAL HANDS, Prince Carl Gustaf's long-suffering cocker spaniel resigns himself to his young master's whim. The three-year-old heir to Sweden's throne, eager to please Photographer Martin, collared his pet in the nursery for this picture.

A PARADE EXCLUSIVE

Carl Gustaf is Europe's glamor boy

Flying to Stockholm for PARADE and American Overseas Airlines, U. S. photographer Jackie Martin recently had a prize assignment: taking pictures of Carl Gustaf, Sweden's future king, in his palace at Haga. This is her report to PARADE:

STOCKHOLM.

LITTLE MR. BIG, the handsomest prince in Europe, crossed the threshold. With great dignity he pulled his hand from his nurse's and stood looking me over quietly.

I watched the big grey eyes, in a strangely quiet face, and I suddenly thought: he is only three—and yet he is every inch a prince!

The Chandelier Upside-down

With the nurse translating, the Prince and I said hello. But it was my camera that really broke the ice.

Snapping open the back, I aimed at a chandelier. Then I held the camera to let the Prince see the upside-down image of the gleaming chandelier in the ground glass.

That did it. From that moment, Sweden's Carl Gustaf was my friend.

Gleefully, he posed before the portrait of his father, sat down to tea with his sister, rough-housed with his spaniel, then went happily berserk on his sliding board.

Later, as I packed my equipment, I heard a mischievous chirp behind me. I turned to see the prize pose of the day. With the aid of his nurse, the heir to the throne of Sweden was gravely hanging upside-down from his nurse's arms watching me!

LIKE ANY KID, Carl Gustaf gets a big bang out of a fast ride down a board on the seat of his royal trousers.

GOLD BUTTONS agleam, tiny fingers tensed, Prince stands before portrait of father, the late Prince Gustaf Adolf.

COFFEE CAKE on plate catches the Prince's eye as his six-year-old sister Christina pours tea at doll-sized table.

PEPSODENT TOOTH PASTE

Helps Stop Decay Before It Starts!

How the Pepsodent film-removing formula helps stop formation of tooth-destroying acid!

Tooth decay is caused by acid. This acid is glued to the teeth by film. It is formed by the action of mouth bacteria on many foods you eat. Faithful brushing with Pepsodent Tooth Paste right after eating reduces acid formation—helps stop decay before it starts.

Film never lets up!

Film forms night and day on everyone's teeth—on your teeth, too!

You can save yourself needless cavities, pain and expense by brushing right after eating with Pepsodent Tooth Paste. And by using film-removing Pepsodent you not only help stop formation of enamel-eating acid—but also remove the dull, dingy stains that collect in film . . . and germs that cause bad breath.

There is no safer, more effective film-removing dentifrice than Pepsodent. No other tooth paste can duplicate Pepsodent's film-removing formula. No other tooth paste contains Irium*, or Pepsodent's exclusive, gentle polishing agent.

So get the famous film-removing Pepsodent Tooth Paste today. Again we say—keep teeth free of film and see your dentist twice a year.

Send for Scientific Proof—Controlling Acid Helps Control Decay

MODERN FOR YOU

Big makers turn to functional furniture design

By EDWARD J. NICKEL

DON'T BE TOO SURPRISED if you discover that modern-styled furniture is edging conventional, stock-in-trade home pieces out of the limelight in your favorite department or home furnishing store.

Simple, functional styling—with the emphasis on practicality and use rather than decoration—is winning the approval of a growing number of American householders. And the nation's furniture manufacturers are the first to admit it.

Recently, at Chicago's jammed 1950 Winter Furniture Show thousands of furniture buyers from all over the U.S. shuttled back and forth between crowded showrooms in the Merchandise and Furniture Marts for a preview of the kind of pieces their stores will be offering you this spring.

They saw more modern furniture than anything else.

Traditionally-styled pieces ran a close second. Once-popular Early American placed third.

HEADBOARD shelf, by Cavalier, holds books and radio. It replaces night table.

Modern, But Not Radical

There was nothing radical about the modern items manufacturers unwrapped at the Chicago show. The stark severity favored by some extremists was tempered, more often than not, by imaginative hardware, recessed bases and unusual wood patterns. Actually, much of the modern now being produced appears to have been influenced by traditional styles.

ELECTRIC RANGE has space for kitchen stool, sells for $159.95. (Westinghouse).

DINETTE SET, by Daystrom, won fashion award for chromed-tubular furniture. Four chairs and table sell for $190 a set.

TRADITIONAL still has its supporters. Attractive 18th Century Georgian set is made by Kittinger.

SOFA for indoor-outdoor use is covered with waterproof vinyl-covered faille. It sells for approximately $100. (Sleeprite).

ANOTHER storage unit by Herman Miller has built-in look, is handy for dividing room. Unit shown retails for $560 up.

"They're not bizarre, they're just . . . well, kind of refreshing," is the way one buyer summed up the 1950 designs.

Trends and new wrinkles were easy to spot in the latest offerings of big-name manufacturers, who hope to sell more than $9.9 billion worth of home furnishings to U.S. families this year.

Some of the most striking:

- All-metal frames for upholstered pieces. They cut costs, manufacturers claim, and promise longer wear to the user.
- More extensive use of foam rubber in upholstered pieces.
- New fabrics, including nylon and a waterproof vinyl-coated rayon faille for outdoor-indoor furniture which can be cleaned with a damp cloth.

You'll Need Fewer Pieces

- Emphasis on fewer but more functional units. For example, beds with storage headboards which serve the same purpose but take up less space than bed plus night table. Larger dresser units take place of dresser and chest and double as desks, too.
- Basic drawer, door, and shelf components which can be assembled into flexible cabinets, storage walls, etc.
- Emphasis on color. Lighter wood finishes are pigmented. Peach appears with white ash, nut browns and greys with walnut and oak.
- "Ma" and "Pa" chairs as a solution to the "too big-too little" problem.
- More decals and striped trims in juvenile furnishings. Yellow, pistachio and white have replaced many pink and blue favorites seen in children's rooms of the past.
- Over-sized sofas and sectional units, which offer more flexibility in interior arrangements.

ANY WAY you look at it, the cowboys who compete in the 1,000 rodeos held each year in the U.S., are in a very rough business, indeed.

Most of them break their bones riding and roping for prize money that occasionally nets them $5,000 a year above traveling expenses and doctors' bills. For many a cowpoke the rodeo doesn't pay off at all.

It's hardly the kind of career you would expect a father to want to hand down to his son. Yet this is precisely what one expert trick rider named Montie Montana is now preparing to do.

AS A STUNT RIDER, Louise frequently surpasses even Montie at his best. She has been performing this "stand" on a racing horse since 1933 when she and Montie were married.

In trick riding the first 25 years are the hardest

For 25 years Montana has been following the rodeo circuit. Since 1933 he has been accompanied by his wife, Louise, whose deeds sometimes surpass even his own. Lately, the Montanas' two children, Montie, Jr., 15, and Linda, 5, have joined the troupe.

The Montanas start their yearly safari in the spring when they pack their horses and possessions into a trailer, leave their California ranch and head east. For six months they compete in rodeos and fairs in many states. Their itinerary include stops at such rallies as Cheyenne's "Frontier Days," Calgary's "Stampede," the "Roundup" at Pendleton, Ore., and the indoor rodeos in New York, Chicago and Boston.

Montana has been fortunate. "Got hurt bad once," he says. "Horse fell and kicked me in the stomach."

Since then, Montana has shed half his teeth and sprained both his ankles but has broken no bones. Louise has never had a bad fall. "We've been real lucky," she says. "I hope our luck holds!"

FAMILY PORTRAIT. Linda, Montie and Montie, Jr., perch on fence as Louise rides up. Young Montanas star with parents in family trick riding act which tours nation every year from spring until autumn, covers 36 states. In off season Montanas run ranch in California.

THE YANKEE WOMAN ATTEMPTED TO DETER US, BUT THE YOUNG CHINESE WILL BE AT THE CLASSES TODAY SIRE!

MILTON CANIFF

MEANWHILE - AT THE ORPHANAGE

WHY DO THE SMALL ONES SWARM ABOUT IN STREET DRESS SO EARLY IN THE DAY, OLD WOMAN? THE PARTY SCHOOL DOES NOT BEGIN FOR HOURS

THEY ARE OVER-EAGER AND WOULD CAUSE A DISTURBANCE IN THE SCHOOL - I WILL WALK THEM ABOUT UNTIL THEY ARE TIRED ENOUGH TO BE OBEDIENT!

AH, SO!

THEY ARE LIABLE TO STRAY - PERHAPS YOUR GUARDSMEN SHOULD GO WITH US TO PREVENT TRUANCY!

YOU SPEAK GOOD SENSE - FOR A YANKEE!

SO THE CHILDREN MARCH OUT OF THE MISSION IN A LONG COLUMN - AND, SINCE THE GUARDS WALK WITH THEM, THE MISSION CART SOON TRUNDLES OUT UNNOTICED AND FOLLOWS IN THE SAME DIRECTION - WITH DOE, STEVE AND HAPPY INSIDE

WHITHER DO YOU STROLL THESE SMALL ONES?

THESE NATIVE-TALENT HOODS ARE STRICTLY BUSH-LEAGUE, SEE? THEY TOOK POP INTO THAT OL' WAREHOUSE AND NEVER EVEN TUMBLED THAT I WAS TAILING 'EM.

CHUM FUN! YOU'RE WONDERFUL.

IF WE'VE FIGURED THE ANGLES RIGHT, THEY WON'T HARM THE OLD GENT— YET.

WE'VE GOT TO BE RIGHT— OTHERWISE, THEY'D HAVE LIQUIDATED HIM IN CHOPS' HIDEOUT.

BUT THIS DOCK-SIDE WAREHOUSE SPELLS BOATS — TRANSPORTATION BACK TO RUSTY CURTAIN COUNTRY— SO THEY CAN PARADE HIM THROUGH THE LABOR CAMPS TO IMPRESS THE INMATES WITH THE FUTILITY OF TRYING TO GO OVER THE HILL.

A REAL CUTE STUNT! THE POOR DEVILS IN THOSE CAMPS HAVE HEARD RUMORS VIA THE GRAPEVINE THAT HE'D BEEN RESCUED BY THE PRISONER-SNATCHING UNDERGROUND. WHEN THEY'RE FORCED TO WATCH HIM BEING PUNISHED — FINISH FAITH IN "UNUSUAL EXPORTS, INC".

A BRILLIANT ANALYSIS OF WHAT THEY'RE GOING TO DO! NOW, HOW ABOUT A NEAT LITTLE COUNTER-MOVE FOR US?

HMMM...THEY'LL HAVE A GUARD ON EVERY DOOR... ONE OF 'EM WILL HAVE TO BE TAKEN OUT— SILENTLY!

WONDER IF THESE LOCAL JOKERS STILL HAVE THE SAME YEN FOR YANKEE TOBACCO THAT THEY HAD DURING THE WAR...FLY-BOYS, I THINK OL' CHOPS HAS A SWIFTY!

AND A FEW MOMENTS LATER...

LA DA, DE DA.

AHHHHHHH!

YOU KNOW, IT'S AMAZING TO THINK OF ALL THE LUXURIES WE ENJOY FROM ELECTRICITY, MICHAEL—AND ALL BECAUSE BENJAMIN FRANKLIN FLEW THAT LITTLE KITE! I'VE JUST BEEN READING ABOUT HIM!

YES, INDEED, UNCLE PHIL! HE CERTAINLY MADE A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!

I THINK I'LL MAKE A KITE — AND SHOW THE KIDS JUST HOW HE DID IT! IT WILL IMPRESS HIS DISCOVERY ON THEIR MINDS!

WELL, I'D LIKE TO HELP YOU, UNCLE PHIL —BUT I HAVE TO GO DOWNTOWN!

THAT'S RIGHT, MA—A KITE! HE JUST WENT DOWN IN THE CELLAR TO MAKE IT!

TCH! TCH! SOMETHING TELLS ME THAT IT'S GOING TO MEAN TROUBLE —AND I THOUGHT IT WAS GOING TO BE SUCH A PEACEFUL DAY!

HMM! IT FEELS A LITTLE HEAVY! I'D BETTER MAKE SURE I CAN GET IT UP— BEFORE I TAKE THE KIDS OUT!

PHILIP—YOU'RE NOT GOING OUT TO FLY THAT KITE—ALONE? WITHOUT HAVING THE CHILDREN WITH YOU?

I CERTAINLY AM! I WANT TO TEST IT! I MADE IT OUT OF WRAPPING PAPER AND IT MAY BE TOO HEAVY TO GO UP!

BUT, PHILIP! A GROWN MAN OUT FLYING A KITE! PEOPLE WILL THINK YOU ARE LOSING YOUR MIND!

OH YEAH? WELL, LET ME REMIND YOU THAT BENJAMIN FRANKLIN WAS A GROWN MAN WHEN HE FLEW A KITE—TO DISCOVER ELECTRICITY!

BUT YOU'RE NOT TRYING TO DISCOVER ANYTHING! PLEASE BE SENSIBLE AND WAIT UNTIL THE CHILDREN COME HOME!

NO! I SAID I WAS GONNA FLY IT—AND I'M GONNA FLY IT! I'M GOIN' OVER TO SULLIVAN'S LOT RIGHT NOW!

ADVENTURES by Matt Curzon

Copyright, 1950, New York Herald Tribune Inc.

1 THE PIXIES, HIGH IN THE AIR, LOOK FOR NEW ADVENTURES. "WHERE TO NOW?" ASKS CLOUDY. "LET'S GO STRAIGHT ON AND SEE WHAT HAPPENS," ANSWERS WIZZIE.

NOW YOU GO STRAIGHT ON AND SEE HOW FAR YOU CAN GO. BELOW IS A SERIES OF LETTERS. EACH OF THESE LETTERS IN THE SERIES FOLLOWS A DEFINITE PATTERN. FOR EXAMPLE--IF YOU WERE GIVEN THE LETTERS A.B, C.D.E, YOU WOULD KNOW IMMEDIATELY THAT THE NEXT LETTER WAS F. OR IF THE SERIES OF LETTERS ARE GG, HH, II, JJ, YOU WOULD KNOW THE NEXT LETTER WOULD BE K. NOW GO ON FROM HERE..

1. G-F-E-D-C-B
2. ABC-BCD-CDE
3. AG-BH-CI-DJ-E
4. A-C-E-G-I-K-M
5. ZZ-YY-XX-WW

2 "WOW!" CRIES CLOUDY, "IT'S GETTING DARK, AND MY LIGHTS WON'T WORK!"
"LOOK! LOOK!" SHOUTS FEE FEE, "OVER THERE--SOMETHING IS SHINING. IT LOOKS JUST LIKE A DIAMOND. LET'S FLY TOWARDS IT."

THE PIXIES LOOK AT FEE FEE'S DISCOVERY. WHAT DO THEY SEE? IN PART ONE SUBTRACT THE NAMES OF THE OBJECTS IN THE SQUARES FROM THE OBJECTS IN THE CIRCLES (YOU CAN DO THIS BY CANCELLING OUT THE LETTERS THAT MATCH) A WORD WILL REMAIN. WRITE IT IN THE SQUARES BELOW. DO THE SAME WITH THE OBJECTS IN PART TWO AND THEN YOU WILL GET THE NAME OF THE OBJECT THE PIXIES SEE.

3 "OH BOY!" SHOUTS CLOUDIE, "WE'RE APPROACHING THAT BRIGHT SPOT VERY QUICKLY."

"HEY LOOK!" CRIES WIZZIE. "THEY'RE SIGNALLING US TO LAND! THEY'RE TURNING ON THEIR LIGHTS--AND LOOK--THE LIGHTS ZIZ-ZAG! BUT I THINK I SEE THE BEAM THAT WE CAN FOLLOW AND LAND SAFELY."

CAN YOU FOLLOW THE RIGHT BEAM THAT LEADS FROM A TO B? CAREFUL, DON'T GET OFF THE BEAM.

4 THE PIXIES COME IN FOR A PERFECT LANDING AND APPROACH A LARGE GATE. THE PIXIES NOTE THAT THE GATE CAN ONLY BE OPENED WITH A NUMBER--AND IT IS UP TO THEM TO FIND THE NUMBER.

THEY FIND A PATTERN HANGING ON THE GATE (FIG. A). THEY FOLD IT INTO AN OCTAGON SHAPED TUBE (FIG. B) AND AFTER MUCH TRIAL AND ERROR FIND THAT THE GATE CAN BE OPENED WITH A MYSTERIOUS NUMBER. IF THE NUMBER 18 IS AT THE TOP OF THE OCTAGON SHAPED TUBE, WHAT IS THE MYSTERIOUS NUMBER AT THE BOTTOM OF THE TUBE?

HOW TO MAKE A PIXIE ROCKET

FIG. 1 — GET A STICK ABOUT 8" LONG AND ABOUT ¼ INCH THICK.

FIG. 2 — 2" — CUT OUT TWO DISKS FROM CARDBOARD 2 INCHES IN DIAMETER. MAKE HOLE IN CENTER.

FIG. 3 — CUT OUT ANOTHER DISK 1" IN DIAMETER

FIG. 4 — 2" — CUT OUT FROM CELLOPHANE PAPER OR ANY GLASS PAPER, THE SIZE INDICATED. — 3½"

FIG. 5 — 4" — CUT OUT FROM HEAVY PAPER A HALF DISK 4" IN DIAMETER. — 2"

FIG. 6 — CUT OUT FROM HEAVY PAPER THE SIZE GIVEN HERE. — 6½" — 4¼" — ROLL FIG. 5 INTO A CUP 2" IN DIAMETER. THEN PASTE WITH TAPE.

FIG. 7 — CUT ANOTHER PIECE OF THE SAME PAPER THE SIZE GIVEN HERE — 3½" — 1¼" — CUT OUT 2 WINGS FROM HEAVY PAPER 4" LONG. SHAPE THEM LIKE THIS.

FIG. 8 — 4" — BEND TAB DOWN ON DOTTED LINE

Adults Corner

by Matt Curzon

THIS PUZZLE STUMPED THE PIXIES. CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

FILL IN THE 64 SQUARES WITH NUMBERS FROM 1 TO 8 SO THAT ONLY ONE SET OF THE EIGHT NUMBERS WILL BE IN ANY STRAIGHT LINE AND AT THE SAME TIME EACH ROW (HORIZONTAL AND VERTICAL) ADDS UP TO 36.

HONKER, A CANADA GOOSE, IS BANDED AND RELEASED BY A FLYWAY BIOLOGIST OF THE U.S. FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE.

EVERY TIME HE STOPS ON HIS MIGRATION JOURNEY, HE TRIES TO REMOVE HIS ALUMINUM BRACELET

COMING IN TO LAND ON A LOUISIANA BAYOU, HONKER STEPS INTO A MUSKRAT TRAP!

THE BAND ON HIS LEG SAVES HIM FROM INJURY, BUT HE CAN'T FREE HIMSELF

A TRAPPER ARRIVES AND REMOVES THE STRUGGLING GOOSE FROM THE TRAP

HONKER BECOMES QUIET, WAITING FOR THE FATAL BLOW, BUT WITH A LOOK AT THE BAND HIS CAPTOR LETS HIM GO!

THOUGH COMPLETELY BEWILDERED BY THESE STRANGE EVENTS, HE DECIDES THE BAND ISN'T SO BAD AFTER ALL!!

TRAIL WAYS

IF YOU SHOULD FIND A BIRD WITH A LEG BAND BEARING THE ABBREVIATION, "NOTIFY F. & W. SERV., WASH., D. C.," ACCOMPANIED BY SERIAL NUMBERS, PLEASE SEND THIS INFORMATION BY MAIL TO THE U. S. FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE, WASHINGTON, D.C.

THROUGH THE EFFORTS OF A FEW VOLUNTARY "BIRD BANDERS" A GREAT DEAL HAS BEEN LEARNED ABOUT THE MIGRATION HABITS OF BIRDS

YOUR COOPERATION IN RETURNING BAND INFORMATION WILL HELP IN THE FIGHT TO PRESERVE OUR SONG AND GAME BIRDS

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Synopsis: THE HORSES ARRIVE AND PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS FAMILY SET OUT ACROSS THE RUGGED HILLS. TILLICUM HAS NEVER BEEN ON A HORSE NOR WILL SHE TRUST PRINCE ARN TO ONE. INDIAN FASHION SHE GOES AND HER HEART IS SINGING, FOR THE FOREST-CLAD HILLS OF THULE ARE JUST LIKE HER HOMELAND ACROSS THE WIDE SEAS.

KING AGUAR HEARS THE SHOUTS OF WELCOME, HIS SON'S RINGING VOICE IN GREETING AND THE RIPPLE OF ALETA'S LAUGHTER.

HIS VISION BECOMES BLURRED AND HE MUST BLOW HIS NOSE VIOLENTLY. ALREADY THE GRIM OLD CASTLE SEEMS TO HAVE BECOME WARMER, BRIGHTER!

VAL BOWS POLITELY: "I TRUST YOU HAVE BEEN WELL, SIRE?" THE KING ALSO BOWS: "SPLENDID," HE ANSWERS—"AND WILL YOU BE STAYING FOR SUPPER?"

(WE PASS LIGHTLY OVER THE NEXT SCENE BECAUSE IT IS INCLINED TO BE EMOTIONAL. SUFFICE IT TO SAY THAT AGUAR IS A WISE AND JUST KING BECAUSE HE DESIRES TO BE WORTHY OF HIS STALWART SON, AND VAL IS A GREAT WARRIOR FOR HE COPIES HIS BELOVED FATHER IN EVERYTHING.)

FROM BEYOND THE CURTAINED DOORWAY COMES A BEDLAM OF NOISE, SCREAMS, BELLOWS, SHRIEKS AND SOBS — BAD-TEMPERED, DEMANDING! "WHAT IN THUNDER IS THAT?" CRIES THE KING IN ALARM!
